A.—VOLUME III.

Page 226.—When publishing the Âlampûṇḍi plate of Virûpâksha, I had to suspect its genuineness, owing partly to the numerous mistakes which it contains, and mainly owing to the absence of any reference to this son of Harihara II. in the published records of the first Vijayanagara dynasty. The historical information conveyed by the plate is however, confirmed now from an unexpected source. In his Report on a Search for Sanskrit and Tamil Manuscripts (p. 90), Mr. Seshagiri Sastri, Professor of Sanskṛit at the Madras Presidency College, has published extracts from a Sanskṛit drama entitled Nârâyaṇîvilâsa. This drama was composed by a royal author named Virûpâksha, who was the son's son (here the published reading putrô, 'son,' has to be corrected into pautrô, 'son's son') of king Bukka, the daughter's son of king Râma, and the son of king Harihara. Of Virûpâksha it is further said that he was the lord of the Karṇâṭa, Tuṇḍîra, Chôḷa and Pâṇḍya countries, that he planted a pillar of victory in the island of Siṁhala (Ceylon), and that he was devoted to the performance of the 'sixteen great gifts.' In describing the genealogy of Virûpâksha and his conquests, the Âlampûṇḍi grant and the drama Nârâyaṇîvilâsa are practically at one with each other. The performance of the 'sixteen great gifts,' which is mentioned in the latter in connection with Virûpâksha, is attributed in the former to his father. There is no doubt whatever as to the identity of the author of the Sanskṛit drama in question with prince Virûpâksha of the Âlampûṇḍi grant. The former is more explicit in describing his relationship to king Râma, inasmuch as he is there called 'the daughter's son' of king Râma, while the latter simply says that his mother Mallâdêvî belonged to 'the family of Râmadêva.' It may therefore be concluded that Râmadêva, whom I proposed to identify with the Yâdava king Râmachandra (above, Vol. III. p. 225), had a daughter named Mallâdêvî, who married Harihara II. of the first Vijayanagara dynasty, and that prince Virûpâksha, who was born of this marriage, made extensive conquests in Southern India.—V. B.—VOLUME IV.

Page 195, l. 10 ff.—Mr. Ramayya has kindly informed me (through Dr. Hultzsch), that the correct spelling of the modern name of the village is Dendulûru, not Deṇḍalûru, as given in Mr. Sewell's Lists of Antiquities.—As regards the identification of other localities mentioned in the Chikkulla plates, Mr. Sewell has been the first to write to me that Râvirêva (in line 20) might be the village of 'Raveralah' (Râvirêla) on the north bank of the river Kṛishṇâ, just at the top of its great bend, long. 80° 10′ E., lat. 16° 50′ N. The same identification was afterwards suggested by Dr. Fleet and by Mr. Ramayya. Mr. Ramayya further writes that about six miles to the east of Râvirêla there is the village of Navâbupêṭa, with a temple of Sômanâthasvâmin which may be the Sômagirîśvaranâtha temple in line 23 of the inscription. The country in which the villages were situated is called Nat[ri]paṭi

(in line 19). This Mr. Ramayya believes to be the more modern Nâtavâḍa, "which is mentioned in an inscription of Śaka 1123 at Bezvâḍa, in which the donor is described as Nâtavâḍi Ṛudradêvarâjulu, i.e. Rudradêvarâja of Nâtavâḍa. The capital of this chief was Maḍapalla or Maḍapalli, and there is a village of this name, reported to contain the ruins of an old fort, close to the west of Madhira, a station of H. H. the Nizam's State Railway, and not far from Koṇḍapalli."— F. Kielhorn.

The original reading Pâṇḍy-Ôtpaḷa is correct, and the translation should have been "the Pâṇḍya and king Utpaḷa." Utpala is another name of the Paramâra king Muñja, who is mentioned under that name also in line 42 of the Kauṭhêṁ plates of Vikramâditya V. (Ind. Ant. Vol. XVI. p. 23, where he is described as kavivṛishâ, i.e., kavîndraḥ), and in the Miraj plates of Jayasiṁha II. and the Yêûr inscription of Vikramâditya VI. From the information given by him there, it appears that, in a Jain record, any such expression as "the first Nandîśvara day, or the first day of the Nandîśvara," would denote the day of the eighth tithi of the bright fortnight of the month Âshâḍha, Kârttika, or Phâlguna, as the case may be, but that any such expression as "the chief Nandîśvara day, or the chief day of the Nandîśvara," might, perhaps, rather denote the day of the full-moon tithi if the Nandîśvara-pûjâ ended with any very special observances on that day.— J. But it now seems more likely that the composer wrote kurushva vai; that the writer wrote kurushva vê, omitting the subscript stroke which would turn vê into vai; and that the engraver did not complete the v, and did not cut clearly the superscript ê, of which some indications can be detected.

" 255, line 1, "the congregation (of Śaivas on the earth) has been afflicted among the Jains and Buddhists." There is a difficulty here in connection with the word utkaṭa, qualifying samaya, which latter word may mean either 'congregation' or 'time.' Mr. H. Krishna Sastri considers that, instead of connecting utkaṭa with its meanings of 'uneven, difficult; intoxication, pride; affliction,' it is better to take it in its meaning of 'mad, furious.' In this case, the translation would be—"there became a mad or furious congregation or time among the Jains and Buddhists;" or freely, "an opportunity arose for the Jains and Buddhists to become furious (and aggressive)."

" 256, line 1, in accordance with the corrected reading in line 37 of the text, notified above, for the devout Gaṇas Bâṇa and Dinisâḷa, and so many others, read Bâṇa and all the other numerous devout Gaṇas.

" " line 16 ff., "While the disciples were saying," etc. Mr. H. Krishna Sastri has sent an interpretation of the first part of this verse, which has given the clue to a better rendering of it. Regarding are-gayi-goṁḍane and meyi-gaydanê, see the corrections, notified above, for text line 42, and notes 4 and 5, on page 248. In goṇḍane, nôḍidane, geydanê, and pârdane, the e, ê, is the particle of questioning, not of emphasis It is better to take kârpu in its meaning of 'sharpness,' than in its meaning of valour.' The proper nominative for enutaṁ is, of course, Râmaṁ.

And we must find the verb for bhaktar in bâḷge, which, therefore, is not the dative of bâḷ, 'a sword,' but is from bâḷ, as the later (and now customary) form of bâḷ, 'to live, to live prosperously, happily,' with ge, an optional affix for the third person of the imperative. The translation, then, will be :—Did he hesitate?; did he draw the sword simply to gaze at it?; fearing the sharpness of it, did he shrink?; did he look for calamity (i.e. did he anticipate evil in the shape of failure to win his wager)?; (No!; but), in the very act of saying "May (all) believers prosper!," Râma, that man of ability, etc.

Page 256, note 4, the following may be added :—In line 24 of the Tērdâḷ record of A.D. 1123 (Ind. Ant. Vol. XIV. p. 17), mention is made of kaḍaṅguva Mâri, "the raging Mârî." And in line 48 of a Baḷagâmi inscription of some date after A.D. 1054 (P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. No. 158, and see Mysore Inscrs. p. 124), in a long and curious description of the five hundred Svâmins of Ayyâvoḷe, we have the phrase hôha Mâriya[ṁ] challav-âḍuvaruṁ baha Mâriyan=idir-ggoḷuvaruṁ,—"who make the departing Mârî flee confusedly in all directions, and who confront the coming Mârî."

" 257, line 10, in accordance with the corrected reading in line 52 of the text, notified above, for the friend of those who swing the sword in seizing the wives of inimical kings, read whose friend (assistant) in seizing the wives of inimical kings is the sword of his arm which is (as lithe) as a creeper.

" " the last paragraph. If the alteration suggested for line 62 of the text, and noted above, is adopted,— (in favour of which it may be said that dhâtrîpa, with the long î, would be a more correct word for 'king' than dhâtripa, with the short i),— the translation would be :—"When (many) kings, who were possessed of glory and renowned fame and valour, and whose prowess has been recited in stories, had passed away in the lineage of the Chaḷukya kings which caused itself to be called the chief ornament of the Lunar Race, and when the earth had (for a time) been seized by others, then Tailapa (II.), who may be called," etc. And, in that case, note 5, on page 257, should be cancelled. On the other hand, the actual reading is âkhyâna, not âkhyâta; and a Tailapa—(who, however, may be Taila III.)— was occasionally quoted as an instance; see the example given under sûtra 117 of Kêśirâja's Śabdamaṇidarpaṇa, p. 142,— "the sword of the arm of Tailapa caused itself to be called the Rudra who is the fire that is to destroy the world."

" 258, lines 14 to 16.— Mr. H. Krishna Sastri considers that, for "(to restrain him from altogether too excessive conquests)," we should adopt the explanation "(that is to say, was always holding him tight, clinging tightly to him, was always remaining with him)."

" 259, last line, and page 260, line 1, for and, to shew that there is no doubt about this, he[1] quotes the sayings of Manu of former times, read, in accordance with the remark on line 94 of the text (see above), and the precepts of Manu have said, in former times, that there is no doubt about this being the case; and cancel note 1 on page 260.

" 260, line 16 f., for Saying "(As) I am thus (notoriously) a very treasury of austerities directed towards Hara, any small effort is not (becoming to me)," Râma, etc., read Having acquired a very treasury of austerities in Hara (i.e., having practised great austerities in his devotion to Hara), and having (done so in such a way that he) caused it to be said that his zeal was not small, Râma, etc.

" " line 19.—Mr. H. Krishna Sastri remarks that it would be no credit, from the stand-point of a Hindû, to build a temple with contributions from kings, and that the translation should be :—Not spending (in vain) even so much as a hâga[2] which the devotees, standing in front (of Siva), gave with reverence for (the building of) the temple, and not going to the kings and with humility importuning them (for contributions), through the inexhaustible favour, etc.

Page 263, text line 6.—Mr. H. Krishna Sastri considers that it is not necessary to correct dâna-vidan into dâna-vidhan, which latter word assumes an adjective based upon dâna with vidhâ in the sense of 'act, action.' And dâna-vida, with the meaning 'who has acquired (the habit of) giving' or 'who bestows gifts,' can be justified by the analogous words kîrti-vida, 'a man who has acquired fame,' and suvayô-vida, 'one who has attained the prime of life' (for these two words, see Kittel's Kannaḍa-English Dictionary,) and the Vêdic varivô-vid, 'bestowing freedom, repose, treasures' (see Monier-Williams' Sanskṛit Dictionary).

" " text line 7, for nôppaḍa[13] purutara, read nô[r*]ppaḍ=ap[p*]=urutara; and cancel note 13.—(H. K. S.).—It may be added that, as Kittel's Dictionary does not give any forms from nôḍu or nôḻ introducing an r, perhaps we ought to consider that the text contains a mistake for nôḻpada, rather than for nôrpada.

" 264, lines 18 to 21, in accordance with the corrected reading in line 7 of the text, notified above, read who is devoted to the water-lilies that are the feet of spiritual preceptors,—who is a man possessed of the very greatest resoluteness such as is not seen anywhere else.

EPIGRAPHIA INDICA.

VOLUME V.

No. 1.— THE ASOKA EDICTS OF PADERIA AND NIGLIVA.

By G. Bühler, Ph.D., LL.D., C.I.E.

THE two new Aśôka edicts of Paḍêria and Niglîva are edited here according to inked estampages, furnished by their discoverer, Dr. A. A. Führer, who found the second in March 1895 and the first in December 1896. Both come from the Nepal Terai, where Niglîva is situated 38 miles north-west of the Uska Bazar station of the Bengal and North-Western Railway, in the Nepalese tahsîl Taulihvâ of the zillah Butaul.[1] Paḍêria lies two miles north of the Nepalese tahsîl Bhagvânpur of the same zillah, and according to Dr. Führer's estimate about thirteen miles from Niglîva.[2] Both are incised on mutilated stone pillars, and the Paḍêria edict, which was found three feet below the surface of the ground, is in a state of perfect preservation, while that of Niglîva has suffered a great deal on the left side and has lost the first five letters of line 3 as well as the first seven of line 4.

The characters of the two edicts agree exactly with those of the north-eastern pillar-edicts of Radhia, Mathia and Râmpûrva.[3] And their language is the Mâgadhî of the third century B.C., which is found also in the other pillar-edicts, in the Kâlsi, Dhauli and Jaugaḍa versions of the rock-edicts, in the two Bairât and the Sahasrâm edicts, in the cave-inscriptions of Barâbar, and in the Sôhgaurâ copper-plate, and which may be recognised by the invariable substitution of la for ra and of na for ṇa, by the nominatives singular in e, and by the word hida for idha. A peculiarity which re-occurs only in the north-eastern pillar-edicts, is the comparatively frequent shortening of final â in piyadasina, lâjina, atana and kâlâpita. New words and forms, not found in the other Aśôka edicts, are aṭhabhâgiye (Paḍêria, l. 5), âgâcha (Paḍêria, l. 2; Niglîva, l. 3), ubalike (Paḍêria, l. 4), usapâpite (Paḍêria, l. 3; Niglîva, l. 4), Bhagavaṁ (Paḍêria, l. 4), mahîyite (Paḍêria, l. 2; Niglîva, l. 3) and vigaḍabhî (Paḍêria, l. 3), to which may be added the names of Konâkamana (Niglîva, l. 2), Luṁminigâma (Paḍêria, l. 4) and Sakyamuni (Paḍêria, l. 2). The wording of the two inscriptions agrees very closely, and leaves no doubt that they were incised at the same time. It makes also the restoration of the lost portions of the Niglîva edict easy and absolutely certain.[4]

[4] See below, p. 6, notes 1 and 2.

The great importance of the Paḍêria inscription for the topography of ancient India and the sacred history of the Buddhists has been fully recognised by Dr. Führer, who has discussed it in an article in the Pioneer of December 1896.[1] It fixes with absolute certainty the situation of the garden of Lumbinî where according to the Buddhist tradition prince Siddhârtha was born. No adverse criticism can shake the evidence of the repeated assertion: "Here Buddha Śâkyamuni was born," and: "Here the worshipful one was born," as well as of the mention of Luṁminigâma, the first part of which name agrees with Lumbinî in accordance with the analogy of Pâli ammâ for ambâ and ârammana for âlambana. Even the possible, but a priori improbable assumption that the pillar might have been brought to Paḍêria from some other place, is barred by the fact mentioned by Dr. Führer, that the site is still called Rummindêi, and by the evidence of Hiuen Tsiang. The Chinese pilgrim,[2] as Dr. Führer has duly noted, mentions the pillar as standing close to four Stûpas, the ruins of which are still extant. He further says that it was broken in the middle through the contrivance of a wicked dragon; and its upper part actually seems to have been shattered by lightning, which the Buddhists ascribe to the anger of the Nâgas, called 'dragons' by the Chinese. If Hiuen Tsiang omits to mention the inscription, the reason is no doubt, as Dr. Führer thinks, that it was covered at the time of his visit by an accumulation of débris. As stated already, it was found three feet below the ground, and the portion of the pillar which was visible on Dr. Führer's arrival, a piece only nine feet high, is covered with pilgrims' records, one of which was incised about A.D. 800. It is evident that the Aśôka inscription must have been covered at least at that date.

The Paḍêria edict, of course, fixes also the site of Kapilavastu and of the sanctuaries in its neighbourhood. Fahien says[3] that the Lumbinî garden lies 50 li or, adopting Sir A. Cunningham's reckoning,[4] 8⅓ miles east of the capital of the Śâkyas, and Dr. Führer has found its extensive ruins eighteen miles north-west of Paḍêria "between the villages of Amauli and Bikuli (north-east) and Râmghât on the Bangaṅgâ (south-west)," covering a space seven miles long and from three to four miles broad. The country of the Śâkyas, it now appears, has been looked for too far south by Sir A. Cunningham and his assistants. Sir A. Cunningham's error has been caused by the vague statements of the Chinese pilgrims, who both say that in travelling from Śrâvastî to Kapilavastu they went south-east. As he had discovered by epigraphical evidence[5] the identity of Śrâvastî with the modern Sêṭ or Sahêṭ-Mahêṭ between Akaona and Balrâmpur, it was but natural for him to infer that Kapilavastu must lie either in the Basti district or in Gôrakhpur. Nevertheless, the town lay much further north, and it may be pointed out that its real position agrees with the hints, given in the Ceylonese canonical books. According to the Ambaṭṭha-Sutta[6] the banished sons of Ikshvâku or Okkâka settled yattha Himavantapassê pôkharaṇiyâ tîrê mahâ sâkasaṇḍô; "where there was a great grove of śâka trees (Tectona grandis) on the bank of a lake (situated) on the slopes of the Himâlaya." This description fits the Nepalese Terai better than the absolutely flat districts of Basti and Gôrakhpur,[7] which are still some distance from the hills. The fact that the Śâkyas were real jungle-Râjputs is not without importance for their history and the explanation of their curious customs. It makes their assertion that their ancestors were forcibly ejected from the more civilised districts in the south very credible, though the truth of the cause of their banishment, stated in the Buddhist work quoted above, may be doubted. Further, their isolation in the jungles may have led, as the canon alleges, to their custom of endogamy, so repugnant to all Râjputs and to all the higher castes in India. And this custom, — not their pride of race, as they themselves asserted,— was no doubt the reason why the other royal families* of Northern India did not intermarry with them. This isolation and the consequent estrangement from the rest of the Hindû population probably accounts also for their disinclination, mentioned in the Ambaṭṭha-Sutta, to show hospitality to the Brâhmaṇs who came to their settlement from Śrâvastî or other parts of India. Their religion, however, was Śaivism and of the ordinary type of Hindûism. Hiuen Tsiang[1] was still shown near the eastern gate of Kapilavastu the old temple of Îśvara, where the infant Siddhârtha was taken by his father, because "the Śâkya children who here seek divine protection always obtain what they ask." According to the legend the stone image then raised itself and saluted the prince. Mr. Beal has correctly recognised that the scene is represented on the Amarâvatî Stûpa. The legend is therefore ancient and undoubtedly points to the conclusion that Śiva was the kuladêvatâ of the Śâkyas. Perhaps Dr. Führer will pay special attention to this temple, which certainly must be one of the oldest Śivite monuments of which we have knowledge and possesses great interest for the history of the Brâhmaṇical religions.

In addition to the ruins of Kapilavastu Dr. Führer has also succeeded in tracing the site of Napeikia-Nâbhika,[2] the supposed birth-place of the mythical Buddha Krakuchchhanda, and of the Stûpa of his Nirvâṇa, which is still eighty feet high, exactly in the position indicated by Fahien,[3] viz. one yôjana or "7 miles" south-west of Kapilavastu. The important sites of Râmagrâma and of Kusinârâ, where Aśôka's pillar with an undated record of Śâkyamuni's Nirvâṇa existed in Hiuen Tsiang's time, will have to be looked for in the eastern portion of the Nepalese Terai. If the direction given by the Chinese,— east of Lumbinî,— is correct, Kusinârâ cannot be identical with Kasia in the Gôrakhpur district, where Sir A. Cunningham and Mr. Carlleyle believed to have found its ruins.

The value of the Niglîva edict for the history of Buddhism has been pointed out in my preliminary notice of the document.[4] As the Stûpa of Kônâkamana was "increased" or enlarged for the second time in Aśôka's fifteenth year, it would appear that the monument had been erected before the beginning of the king's reign, or before B.C. 259. Kônâkamana or Kôṇâgamana belongs to the long series of purely mythical predecessors of the historical founder of Buddhism. The mythology of Buddhism must not only have been developed, but the myths must have been fixed locally, before it could occur to the Faithful to build Stûpas in honour of their heroes. It seems difficult to believe that all these stages of the development could have been accomplished in a short time. As they had been completed in the first half of the third century B.C., it becomes probable that the origin of Buddhism lies very much earlier and that, therefore, it is impossible, as some scholars have done, to fix the Nirvâṇa in B.C. 350 or in B.C. 325. The remoter date, cir. B.C. 477, is, also on this consideration, the more probable one. I regret that, when writing my first notice, I overlooked that the Stûpa, the pillar and its inscription are mentioned by Hiuen Tsiang in the Siyuki, Vol. II. p. 19. If I had noticed this, I might have announced at once that the site of Kapilavastu must be looked for in its neighbourhood. Dr. Führer, who years ago had shown Mr. Carlleyle's identification of Bhuîla with Kapilavastu to be erroneous, apparently found the passage and hence gave expression to the expectation of discovering the Śâkya capital near Bhagvânpur in his Progress Report of 1895-96. According to an article in the Calcutta Englishman of June 1st and extracts in the Journal of the Mahâbôdhi Society, Vol. V. pp. 82 and 83, Dr. L. Waddell made the same discovery in 1896, published it in the Englishman, and applied for permission to proceed to Nepal.

As regards Aśôka's history, the two edicts inform us that in the twenty-first year of his reign he went on a pilgrimage to the sacred places of the Buddhists situated in the extreme north. Very probably he visited on this occasion, as the legend in the Divyâvadâna, p. 386 ff. (Cowell and Neil), asserts, not only the Stûpa of Kônâkamana and the Lumbinî garden, but also further east the site of Buddha's Nirvâṇa and Râmagrâma, and further west Kapilavastu, the Stûpas of Krakuchchhanda and the old town of Śrâvastî, in several of which localities, pillars with his inscriptions were extant in Hiuen Tsiang's times. The Archæological exploration of the Nepalese Terai will bring certainty on this point. Aśôka's route from Pâṭaliputra towards the Terai is perhaps marked by the series of pillars extending from Bakhra near Vaiśâlî through Radhia and Mathia to Râmpûrva in the Champâran district, most of which were later on inscribed with the so-called pillar edicts. The fact that Aśôka undertook such a journey may be interpreted as indicating that he was at the time a believing Buddhist. But it may also be looked upon as one of the dhaṁmayâtâs which, as the eighth rock-edict says, he undertook regularly since the eleventh year of his reign in order to obtain enlightenment.

The two edicts tend also to show that the Nepal Terai formed part of Aśôka's dominions. This is indisputable if the Paḍêria inscription declares that the king remitted the taxes of the village of Luṁmini. But even the mere fact that Aśôka planted his pillars all over the Terai favours the view that it was subject to his rule.

TRANSLATION.

King Piyadasi, beloved of the gods, having been anointed twenty years, came [1][2] himself and worshipped [2], saying [3]: "Here Buddha Śâkyamuni was born." And he caused to be made a stone (slab) bearing a big sun (?)[4]; and he caused a stone pillar to be erected [5]. Because here the worshipful one was born, the village of Luṁmini has been made free of taxes and a recipient of wealth [6].

REMARKS.

1. Âgâcha stands for Pâli âgachcha, Sanskṛit âgatya, and shows the substitution, frequent in the Prâkṛits, of a single consonant for a double one as well as the then necessary lengthening of a preceding short vowel.

2. Mahîyite stands for mahîyitam. The construction is the bhâvê prayôga, and the literal translation: "it has been worshipped," or "worship has been performed." The verb mahîy in the sense of 'to worship' occurs also in Sanskṛit; see the larger St. Petersburg Dictionary, s. v.

[1] The words connected by hyphens are written continuously in the text.

3. Ti, rendered here by 'saying,' may of course also be translated by 'for' or 'because.'

4. The translation of vigaḍabhî is not certain. It may be a word governing silâ, and a technical term of unknown meaning. My translation is based on the supposition that it is a compound adjective, qualifying silâ and equivalent to Sanskṛit vikaṭâbhrî. Vikaṭâbhrî might be represented in a Prâkṛit dialect of the Pâli type by vigaḍabbhî, which would become vigaḍabhî according to the popular spelling of the edicts. For ga instead of ka occurs in Aṁtiyoga (Kâlsi edict ii. l. 5, ed. xiii. 2, l. 9) for Aṁtiyoka (in the other versions), in loga (Jaugaḍa sep. ed. ii. l. 7) for loka, and in adhigicha (Bairât i. l. 6) for adhikṛitya. And ḍa instead of ṭa is found in aṁbavaḍikâ (Allahabad, queen's edict) and aṁbâvaḍikyâ (Delhi Sivalik pillar-edict vii. 2, l. 2) for Pâli ambavâṭikâ, in Bhasikaḍa (Cunningham, Sâñchi Stûpa, i. No. 156) for °kaṭa, and in apaḍihata on the Indo-Grecian coins for Pâli apaṭihata and Sanskṛit apratihata. If my transliteration vikaṭâbhrî is correct, the second part of the word must be either abhrî or abhra. The first will not do on account of its meaning, and the second will suit only if it is taken to mean 'the sun,' which meaning is assigned to abhra in the Kôśas. A stone slab, bearing a large representation of the sun, might have been put up in the Lumbinî garden in order to indicate that Śâkyamuni claims to be arkabandhu or âdityabandhu, a scion of the solar race of Ikshvâku. Professor Pischel, whom I consulted regarding the three difficult hapax legomena of this inscription, takes the word differently. He says: "I suspect that vigaḍabhî is the Sanskṛit vigardabhî. According to Hêmachandra, ii. 37, gardabha becomes in Prâkṛit gaddaha or gaḍḍaha. In Marâṭhî it becomes gâḍhava and is according to Molesworth also 'a term for a rude block or a rough stone.' Hence vigaḍḍabhî might mean 'finely wrought, polished,' or something like it. Literally it would be 'not so uncouth as a donkey.'"

5. Usapâpite is equivalent to Pâli ussâpitô and Sanskṛit uchchhrâpitaḥ. For the double pa compare likhâpâpitâ, Delhi Sivalik pillar-edict vii. 2, l. 10, and Pâli viññâpâpêti.

6. I here adopt M. Barth's rendering, published in the Journal des Savants, 1897, p. 73. M. Barth explains ubalike, in accordance with a suggestion of M. Senart, as equivalent to Sanskṛit * udbalikaḥ and derives aṭhabhâgiye from arthabhâga. The explanation of the second word is unobjectionable and is supported, as M. Barth points out, by the statement of the Divyâvadâna (p. 390), according to which Aśôka presented on his visit to Lumbinîvana one hundred thousand (suvarṇas) to the people of the country. The identification of ubalike with * udbalikaḥ, which was suggested to me also by Professors Leumann and Oldenberg, offers some difficulties. Taken as a Bahuvrîhi compound, * udbalikaḥ would mean udbhûtaḥ or udastaḥ baliḥ yasya saḥ, 'rich in taxes' or 'with raised taxes,' in accordance with the analogy of utpaksha, utpuchchha,[1] udagra, udambhas, etc. And as far as I know, there is no Bahuvrîhi in which ut is used in the sense of mukta. Taken as a Tatpurusha, irregularly enlarged by the addition of ka, * udbali(ka) must stand, according to the Kâśikâ, loc. cit., for balêḥ utkrântaḥ, 'one who has left the taxes;' compare also the numerous analogous compounds like uchchhṛiṅkhala, utpuchchha, utsûtra, udbila, udvâsa, unnidra, etc. The use of * udbalikaḥ in the sense of 'exempt from taxes' would therefore be unidiomatic, and it is not supported by any analogies, as compounds like * utkara for akara or nishkara, * udṛiṇa for anṛiṇa or nirṛiṇa, and * uchchhulka are not found. Perhaps it will be better to explain ubalike, as Mr. Tawney has suggested to me, by * avabalikaḥ or * apabalikaḥ; regarding the contraction of ava and apa to o, û or u in Pâli, see E. Müller, Simplified Pâli Grammar, p. 42 f.

No. 2.— YEKKERI ROCK INSCRIPTION OF THE TIME OF PULIKESIN II.

BY J. F. FLEET, PH.D., C.I.E.

Yekkêri is a village about four miles towards the north by east from Saundatti, the chief town of the Parasgaḍ tâluka of the Belgaum district. The record is engraved on a rock in a glen, somewhere about a mile or a mile and a half to the north-east of the village. The existence of it was brought to my notice in December, 1894, by Veṅkaṅgauḍa bin Yellapagauḍa, of the neighbouring village of Hûli. I edit it from ink-impressions which Dr. Hultzsch was kind enough to obtain for me.

The whole writing covers an area about 7′ 2″ broad by 3′ 11″ high. About two feet of the breadth, however, are occupied by the benedictive and imprecatory verses, which stand on the proper right of the essential part of the record: to avoid reducing the scale of the collotype too far, it has not been thought necessary to include them in the Plate; but the mi of bhûmi, line 13, is discernible just before the commencement of line 3; and the marks below it represent, imperfectly, parts of the word phalaṁ, line 14.— The characters are of the regular type, for the locality, of the period to which the record refers itself, viz. the first half of the seventh century A.D.; and they are boldly formed and well cut. They include numerical symbols in lines 5, 7, 8.[3] The size of the ordinary letters ranges from ⅞″

[1] Restore visativasâbhisitena. At the beginning of the line a remnant of the long î seems to be visible, and so is a portion of the fourth letter.

[2] Restore silâthabe-cha usapâpite, according to the Paḍêria edict.

[3] In line 5 we have, for 'four,' the symbol which Pandit Bhagwanlal Indraji has given in Ind. Ant. Vol. VI. p. 44, col. 4, from the Gupta records; but it seems pronounceable as pka or pkra rather than ṅka.— In the same line we have, for 'five,' the symbol which the Pandit has given in col. 5 of his Table (see the central one of the three forms) from the Valabhî plates; he admitted that it looks like nâ (as it does here), but held that it is only a corruption of trâ. It must be noted that, in the collotype published herewith, the symbol has not come out well from the ink-impression— (on the whole, the better of the two)— which I selected for reproduction; the lower side-stroke, to the right from the bottom part of the akshara, shows only faintly: in the other impression, the akshara is quite clear and unmistakable; and there it distinctly reads as nâ.— In the same line, again, we have, for 'eight,' a symbol which, in the side-stroke to the left from the top of the akshara, in the down-stroke on the right from the end of the top-stroke, and in the line across the centre of the body of the akshara, differs a good deal from any of the forms given by the Pandit and interpreted by him as hra or hrâ.— In line 7 we have, for 'fifty,' a symbol from which the symbol given by the Pandit in col. 5 of his Table, from the Valabhî plates, may very easily have been derived by corruption. But, whereas he held that his symbol is a corrupted form of the anunâsika, turned the wrong way, we seem to have here clearly the akshara ba. And I notice that Mr. Bendall

(in the pa of nrupa, line 1) to $2\frac{1}{2}''$ (in the bha of bhagavatô, line 4). The śrî of râjya-śrî, line 2, is $5\frac{1}{4}''$ high.— The language is Sanskṛit; and, except for the two benedictive and imprecatory verses, the whole record is in prose. The record was composed, however, by someone who had a very imperfect knowledge of the language, and who could neither construct his sentences properly nor even spell correctly. I have noted, in and below the text, a few corrections of the more simple kind. But, from udita, line 1, to râjyê, line 4, the whole text requires emendation: either the whole must be turned into a compound,— in which case, we must read (line 2) prithivî-svâmi, and (line 3) prithivy-apratiratha and śrîmat; or else mahârâja (line 4) must be turned into the genitive, mahârâjasya, and we must read (line 1) prasûtasya and bhûtasya, (line 2) svâminaḥ and râjya-śriyaḥ, and (line 3) maṇḍalasya, apratirathasya, and śrîmataḥ.— In respect of orthography, the only point calling for special notice is the unnecessary insertion of the anusvâra before the nasals in vaṁńśa, line 1 (twice), sâmaṁnta and maṁṇḍala, line 3, paṁñcha, lines 5 and 6, puṁṇyaṁ, lines 6 and 9, paṁñchâśat, line 7, and vasuṁndharâṁ, line 16.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of the Western Chalukya king Pulikêśin II.[1] It is dated in one of his regnal years; but all that can be made out here is a numerical symbol which, if we contrast it with the symbol for 'eight' which we have in line 5, must, I suppose, be interpreted as meaning 'six:' just before it, there is an illegible akshara, which may be either the syllable ṇi or ṇâṁ of saṁvatsarâṇi or saṁvatsarâṇâṁ, or a numerical symbol meaning 'ten,' 'twenty,' or some higher figure: the date mentions also the full-moon tithi of the month Kârttika; but it does not include any details that admit of calculation. The object of the inscription was to record that certain lands, in certain towns, were the property of the god Mahâdêva (Śiva).

Mention is made of villages or towns named Benîra, Dhutipura, and Âgariyapura, and perhaps Kṛishṇapura; but these places cannot now be traced on the map.

* * * * *

About four feet away to the left of the above record, there is engraved on the rock, in similar characters, another inscription, of four short lines, covering an area about 2′ 0″ broad by 1′ 10″ high. The first line of it is illegible. The remainder speaks of four nivartanas of land at a place named, apparently, Sindavaḷaga.

has found ba used to denote 'fifty' in a syllabic system in Malabar which has survived to even the present century (Jour. R. A. Soc., 1896, p. 789 ff.)— In line 8 we have a symbol to which the closest resemblance that can be detected in the Pandit's Table is to be found in the centre one of the three symbols for 'eight' given in his col. 5, from the Valabhî plates (it must be noted that the faint line upwards from the right end of the lower part of the body of the akshara, which appears in the collotype published herewith, is due to a depression in the stone; it is not an engraved part of the akshara). But, in the face of the symbol for 'eight' which we have in line 5, it cannot be taken as meaning 'eight.' And I can only take it as a symbol for 'six,' approximating to the symbol for that numeral given by the Pandit in col. 3 of his Table, from the Kshatrapa coins and inscriptions. The Pandit considered that his forms of the symbol for 'eight' are the akshara hra or hrâ; and that 'six' is phra or phrâ, or some other akshara containing ph. Here, in this record, the akshara closely resembles hu; as it also does, to my eyes, in the form given by the Pandit in his detailed account of the symbol for 'eight' (loc. cit. p. 46): and Mr. Bendall gives ha for 'six' in the syllabic system of Malabar described by him.

No. 3.— INSCRIPTIONS AT MANAGOLI.

BY J. F. FLEET, PH.D., C.I.E.

Managôḷi[3] is a village about eleven miles to the north-west of Bâgewâḍi, the chief town of the Bâgewâḍi tâluka of the Bijâpur district. With the difference of the lingual ṇ for the dental n, its name occurs in the ancient records as Maṇigavaḷḷi (e.g., A. below, lines 18, 19) and Maṇiṁgavaḷḷi (e.g., ibid. line 17); and we also have the Sanskṛitised form Mâṇikyavallî, "the village of rubies" (e.g., ibid. line 20). From A. below, lines 18, 24, we learn that it was in the group of towns and villages which was known as the Tardavâḍi thousand, and which took its name from a town that is now represented by the small village of Taddewâḍi,— the 'Tuddehwarree' and 'Tudewadee' of maps,— on the south bank of the Bhîmâ, in the Iṇḍî tâluka, about thirty-seven miles to the north of Bijâpur.[4] And line 54 of the same record mentions it as an agrahâra; in consequence of which we may perhaps reckon it among "the eighteen agrahâras" which are spoken of in other records.[5]

The records at Managôḷi are on stone tablets which have been built into the walls of a modern temple of Hanumat. I edit them from ink-impressions made by my own man.

A.— Of the time of Bijjala; A.D. 1161.

The writing of this record covers an area about 2′ 10″ broad by 4′ 6½″ high. From the beginning of line 36 to the centre of the last line, there is a fissure by which the tablet has been broken into two pieces: but even along this fissure there are but few letters that have been destroyed; and the rest of the record is in a state of very good preservation.— The sculptures above it, at the top of the tablet, are, in the centre, a liṅga, with the sun and moon above it; on the proper right, a seated figure; and, on the proper left, a crooked sword, dagger, or knife, and a cow and calf.— The characters are Kanarese, of the regular type of the period to which the record refers itself; and they are well formed and well executed throughout. They include decimal figures in lines 39, 43, 46, and 60, and the distinct form of the lingual ḍ all through: the virâma is represented sometimes by its own proper sign, as in satiyoḷ, line 4, âdaḷ, line 8, tiruvar, line 46, naḍasal, line 64, sthaḷadal, line 66, and samayaṁgaḷ, line 67, and sometimes by the sign for the letter u, as in pogaḷalu, line 17, maṭhadalu, line 44, and kayyalu, line 52; cases in which the two methods of expressing it are pointedly contrasted, are, enal and enalu, lines 24 and 30, and paḍuval, mûḍal, baḍagal, paḍuvalu, mûḍalu, and baḍagalu, lines 42, 47, and 48. The size of the letters ranges from about ⅜" to ⅝".— The language is Kanarese.[1] There are ordinary verses in lines 1 to 35, and some of the customary benedictive and imprecatory verses in lines 55 to 59. We have the nominative plural ending in u, as in the modern or colloquial form of the language, in aynûrvvaru, line 24, where the metre shews that the u is to be pronounced; and with this we have to contrast the archaic or stilted form samayaṁgaḷ, in line 67: cases in which it is not certain whether the u is to be pronounced, or whether it represents the virâma, are illustrated by paṁḍitaru, line 50, and koṭṭaru, line 67, as contrasted with paṁḍitar, line 51, and koṭṭar, line 67. The accusative singular neuter in v occurs in gôkuḷavaṁ, line 59; but, otherwise, the archaic form in m appears throughout, as in jasaman, line 27, âspadamaṁ, line 32, kaumâramaṁ, line 44, and dharmmamaṁ, line 54.— In respect of orthography, the only points that call for special notice are (1) the use of ri for ṛi, throughout, as in âḷaṁkriti, line 3, and nripatige, line 7; (2) the use of b for v in sêbyaṁ, line 24, and dibya, line 31; and (3) an affected use of the Drâviḍian ḷ in Châḷukyar, line 5, and âḷaṁkârav, line 24.

The inscription is a record of the time of the Kaḷachurya king Bijjala. Before, however, it proceeds to recite certain donations made in his reign, it makes reference, in lines 1 to 59, to certain events of the time of the Western Châlukya king Perma-Jagadêkamalla II. In that part of the record, after some introductory genealogical and historical matters, a register is made of certain grants which were bestowed by Perma-Jagadêkamalla II. himself, and by other people, on the god Śiva, in the form of the local god Kalidêvêśvara,—"the Siddhaliṅga of the south,"— of Maṇigavaḷḷi. The introductory part mentions a person named Îśvaraghaḷisâsa, of the Harîta gôtra (line 16), who, it asserts, was a Jagadguru or leading pontiff in the time of the Western Châlukya king Taila II., and was endowed by that king, at his coronation, with the town of Maṇiṁgavaḷḷi; and in the lineage of this person it places a certain Mâdhava (line 20), who is to be identified with the Mâdirâja (line 37) who held the post of Mahâprabhu of the village at the time when the grants were made. It further tells us that the temple of Kalidêvêśvara had been built by a certain Basava (line 28) or Basavarasayya (line 30), son of Chandra or Chandirâja and Chandrâmbike (line 28), who belonged to the Kâśyapa gôtra (line 25) and was one of the five-hundred Mahâjanas or Brâhmaṇs[2] of Maṇigavaḷḷi. And the occurrence of the names of Basava and Mâdirâja in this Śaiva record from the neighbourhood of Bâgewâḍi, and in connection with the foundation and endowment of a liṅga-temple which was evidently of some considerable size and repute, is rather suggestive of our having at last met with an epigraphic mention of the original of that Basava who, according to the Liṅgâyat traditions as embodied in the Basava-Purâṇa and Channabasava-Purâṇa, was born at Bâgewâḍi to a Śaiva Brâhmaṇ named Mâdirâja, and subsequently, becoming the prime-minister of the Kaḷachurya king Bijjala, overthrew the Jains, revived Śaivism, and established the sect of Vîra-Śaivas or Liṅgâyats. The remainder of the record, line 59 to the end, refers to the reign of the Kaḷachurya king Bijjala; and it registers a variety of grants made by various persons to the same god Kalidêvêśvara.

[1] From line 42 onwards, there occur various technical terms and other words (some of them to be found in other records also), which are not given in dictionaries, and the meanings of which cannot at present be made out.

[2] Comparison of the expressions Mahâjanaṁgaḷ=aynûrvvara, lines 20, 21, and mahâdêvarkkaḷ=aynûrvvaru, lines 23, 24, shews that the Mahâjanas of a village—(a technical expression which occurs in many records)— were the collective body of the Brâhmaṇs of the village.

The record contains two dates. As the first date (lines 38-40), for the donations that were made before the time of Bijjala, it cites the tenth tithi, coupled with Thursday and the winter solstice, of the bright fortnight of the month Pausha of the Dundubhi saṁvatsara, which was the fifth year of the reign of Perma-Jagadêkamalla II. The given saṁvatsara was Śaka-Saṁvat 1065 current. And this date does not work out correctly. The tithi ended, at about 14 hrs. 2 min. after mean sunrise (for Bombay), not on a Thursday, but on Tuesday, 29th December, A.D. 1142; and this was four days after the winter solstice, which, as represented by the Makara-saṁkrânti or passage of the sun into Capricornus, occurred at about 3 hrs. 8 min., again not on a Thursday, but on Friday, 25th December. There must, therefore, have been some mistake made, either in taking the date from the archive from which the material for this part of the record was derived,— (the characters shew that the whole record was put on the stone at one and the same time, by one and the same hand),— or else in the original computation of the date.[1] The second date (lines 59, 60) is the sixth tithi, coupled with Tuesday, of the dark fortnight of the month Bhâdrapada of the Vishu saṁvatsara,[2] which was the sixth year of the reign of Bijjala. The given saṁvatsara was Śaka-Saṁvat 1084 current. And the corresponding English date is Tuesday, 12th September, A.D. 1161, on which day the given tithi, of the amânta Bhâdrapada, ended at about 18 hrs. 8 min. after mean sunrise. In line 64, the tithi is mentioned by the technical name of kapila-chaṭṭi.

In lines 67, 68, mention is made of a festival called nûla-parvan. The reference must be to the nûla-huṇṇuve or full-moon of the month Śrâvaṇa. And it may be useful to give here the Kanarese names of all the full-moons and new-moons, as given to me on three or four different occasions, with the explanations of them as far as they can be determined at present.[3] As will be seen further on, there are references to some of these special names in other epigraphic records.

The month Chaitra; March-April.— The full-moon is called davanada-huṇṇuve;[4] because, I am told, on this day the people place the fragrant leaves of the davana-plant on the images of the god Mallikârjuna of Śrîśaila.[5]— The new-moon is called akshatadige-amavâse; because

[1] The full descent of the reigning king is not given. But the use of the style Pratâpa-Chakravartin (line 36) stamps him as Perma-Jagadêkamalla II.— On the chance, however, that the record, which is not a contemporaneous one, makes a mistake between him and his ancestor who had the same biruda, I have calculated the date for also Śaka-Saṁvat 945 current, in the reign of Jagadêkamalla-Jayasiṁha II. But here, again, the details do not work out correctly. In that year, the given tithi ended, not on a Thursday, but on Wednesday, 5th December, A.D. 1022, at about 18 hrs. 36 min. after mean sunrise; and this was eighteen days before the Makara-saṁkrânti, which occurred at about 1 hr. 56 min., again not on a Thursday, but on Monday, 24th December.

[2] The original has Visha, by mistake for Vishu.— Monier-Williams' Sanskṛit Dictionary does not recognise this name of the saṁvatsara (the fifteenth in the cycle), and gives only the name Vṛisha. But Kittel's Kannaḍa-English Dictionary gives Vishu as the name current in Mysore; the same name is given by C. P. Brown in his Carnatic Chronology; and it occurs in other records also from the Kanarese country.

[3] The line of inquiry is an interesting one. And I hope that, now that attention is drawn to it, other scholars may be able to throw more light on it.

[4] Instead of huṇṇuve and amavâse, the rustics generally use the word habba, 'festival.'

[5] Reeve and Sanderson's Canarese Dictionary mentions (s.v. davana) the davanada-habba, davanada-huṇṇime, but, overlooking the reference to the full-moon, explains it as "a feast on the twelfth lunar day, when the above fragrant shrub is in perfection."

it is followed, on Vaiśâkha śukla 3 (tadige = tritîyâ), by the festival called aksha-tadige, i.e. akshaya-tritîyâ or akshayya-tritîyâ.[1] This new-moon name occurs in records of A.D. 1054 and 1195 (see page 14 below).

Vaiśâkha; April-May.— The full-moon is called agi-huṇṇuve; apparently because the time then arrives for transplanting the seedlings (agi) of rice, tobacco, pepper, etc.— The new-moon is called bâdami-amavâse; because, it is suggested, worship is then done to the goddess Banaśaṁkarî of the well-known temple two or three miles south of Bâdâmi in the Bijâpur district.

Jyaishṭha; May-June.— The full-moon is called kâra-huṇṇuve; from kâru, "the rainy season," which commences in this month. On this full-moon day there is celebrated the festival called kari hariyuva habba, when bullocks are raced,— the winner being the one that first reaches and breaks a string of leaves drawn across the course,— in order to obtain an augury as to the prospects of the season.[2] — The new-moon is called maṇṇettina-amavâse; because the people then make clay images of bullocks (maṇṇ-ettu), and worship them.

Âshâḍha; June-July.— The full-moon is called kaḍlegaḍabina-huṇṇuve. Two explanations are suggested: one, that the people then make cakes (kaḍabu) of gram (kaḍle, kaḍale) and offer them to the goddess Yellamma; the other, that the cultivators then decorate the necks of their bullocks with strings of such cakes.— The new-moon is usually called nâgara-amavâse; because it is followed, on Śrâvaṇa śukla 5, by the nâga-pañchamî, when worship is done to the cobra (nâga, nâgara-hâvu). But it appears to be also sometimes known as Dîvaśi-amavâse; because, it is said, girls, after marriage, then worship images of a goddess named Dîvaśi.

Śrâvaṇa; July-August.— The full-moon is called nûla-huṇṇuve; because on this day the ceremony is annually performed of renewing the sacred thread (nûlu, otherwise called janivâra, and in Sanskṛit yajñôpavîta).— The new-moon is called chauti-amavâse; because it is followed, on Bhâdrapada śukla 4 (chauti, chavuti, = chaturthî), by the Gaṇêśa-chaturthî, when worship is done to the god Gaṇêśa. For the same reason, it is sometimes called benakana-amavâse; Benaka being a corruption of Vinâyaka, one of the names of Gaṇêśa.

Bhâdrapada; August-September.— The full-moon is usually called anantana-huṇṇuve; because the preceding day is the ananta-chaturdaśî, which, Molesworth's Marâṭhî Dictionary says, is sacred to the god Vishṇu, in the form of Ananta. It seems to be sometimes also called

[1] Kittel's Kannaḍa-English Dictionary explains the aksha-tritiye, as it is there called, as a Śaiva feast on Chaitra śukla 3. But Ganpat Krishnaji's Pañchâṅg and the Paṭwardhanî Pañchâṅg place the feast on Vaiśâkha śukla 3; so, also, Monier-Williams' Sanskṛit Dictionary, which explains it (s.v. akshaya) as "a festival, the third day of the bright half of Vaiśâkha, which is the first day of the Satya-yuga, and secures permanency to actions then performed;" so, also, Reeve and Sanderson's Canarese Dictionary, which explains it (s.v. aksha-tadige) as "a ceremony, in the second Hindû month, on the third lunar day, of married women, who bathe, present to each "other turmeric, betel nut and fruit, and then make an offering of flowers, etc., to Gaurî."

[2] This festival is described in the Basava-Purâṇa (see the Rev. G. Würth's translation, Jour. Bo. Br. R. As. Soc. Vol. VIII. pp. 90, 91): it is there placed on the full-moon of the third month of the Hindû year (i.e. Jyaishṭha); and we are told that, if a black bullock breaks the string, all sorts of leguminous fruits will succeed, while, if a white bullock breaks the string, the white millet will thrive.— Kittel, also, in his Kannaḍa-English Dictionary, s.v. kâru, places it on the kâra-huṇṇuve in the third month. Under the word kari (3), 'unpropitiousness,' he explains that kari hari means "to tear, i.e. do away with, unpropitiousness; an act that, "on a certain day (kâra-huṇṇive) is represented by throwing an iron ball, that is attached to a rope, over a "tôraṇa, and thus pulling down the tôraṇa, when the ornamented bullocks of the place, that previously had "passed under the tôraṇa, are playfully driven about." But the ceremony described in the Basava-Purâṇa is the one with which I am familiar: except that the divination seems to be more directed to the comparative prospects of the early and late crops; the idea being that, if a white bullock is the winner, the later crops will be the better, whereas, if a bullock of another colour wins, the early crops will give the better yield.— Reeve and Sanderson's Canarese Dictionary, s.v. kari, explains the festival as "a ceremony of breaking in two, by bullocks or other means, the triumphal arch of a gateway, the day after poṅgal-feast," and thus (see Kittel's Dictionary, s.v. poṅgalu) would place it the day after the Makara-saṁkrânti, in the month Pausha.

jokyâna-hunnuve; but I have not obtained the explanation of this.— The new-moon is called navarâtri-amavâse, or mahânavami-amavâse; because it is immediately followed, on Âśvina śukla 1, by the nine-days festival (nava-râtri) of the goddess Durgâ, ending with the dasarâ-holiday on the ninth day which is called mahâ-navamî, "the great ninth tithi." [1]

Âśvina; September-October.— The full-moon is called sigi-hunnuve; because, it is said, on this day the people worship the goddess Gaurî under the name of Sigî-Gaurî.[2] It appears to have been called in ancient times herjuggiya-hunnuve, "the full-moon of the principal harvest-time" (see page 15 below).— The new-moon is called dîpâvali-amavâse, or dîvalige-amavâse; because during the same or the immediately following night there is the dîpâvali, divâlî, or dîvalige festival of lamps, when the houses and streets are illuminated.

Kârttika; October-November.— The full-moon is called gauri-hunnuve; because, it is said, on this day worship is done to the most honoured form of the goddess Gaurî, as Hirê-Gaurî, "the great or original Gaurî."— The new-moon is called chatti-amavâse; because it is followed, on Mârgaśîrsha śukla 6 (chatti = shashṭhî), by the champâ-shashṭhî, when, according to Molesworth's Marâṭhî Dictionary, there is a festival of the god Khaṇḍobâ or Khaṇḍerao, an incarnation of Śiva.

Mârgaśîrsha; November-December.— The full-moon is usually called hostala-hunnuve; because thresholds (hostalu) are decorated and worshipped on this day. But it seems to be sometimes also called randê-hunnuve; in some connection, it is said, with the goddess Yellamma as a widow (raṇḍe).— The new-moon is called yella-amavâse; because it stands next before the Makara-saṁkrânti or winter solstice, in celebration of which complimentary packets of sesamum seeds (eḷḷu, yeḷḷu) are sent about to friends and acquaintances.[3]

Pausha; December-January.— The full-moon day is called banda-hunnuve, or banada-hunnuve; either, it is suggested, because the trees of the forests (bana, vana) begin to sprout at about this time, or because on this occasion there is another festival of the goddess Banaśaṁkarî of the well-known temple near Bâdâmi.— The name of the new-moon has been given to me as avartra-amavâse, âvatra-amavâse, and avarâtri-amavâse; I have not succeeded in obtaining any explanation of the name, or even in determining the exact form of it.

Mâgha; January-February.— The full-moon is usually called bhârata-hunnuve, or sometimes bhârati-hunnuve; apparently in some connection either with the public reading of the Mahâbhârata, or with some worship of the goddess Bhâratî (Sarasvatî). It appears, however, to be also known as gudi-hunnuve; because, it is said, the people imagine that on this day the gods go from the temples (guḍi) to the houses of their worshippers, who, accordingly, welcome them during the night with shouts of "the gods have come," and with the sounds of gongs and other musical instruments.[4]— The new-moon is called śivarâtri-amavâse; because just before it there is the well-known great festival called mahâ-śivarâtri in honour of the god Śiva. In the twelfth century A.D., this new-moon was called kâman-amavâse, "the new-moon of Kâma" (see page 15 below); evidently in connection with the ensuing hôḷi-festival of Kâmadêva, the god of love, which ends with the burning of an effigy of [1] Kittel's Kannaḍa-English Dictionary, s.v. eḷḷu, would give this new-moon the name of eḷḷa-amavâse, with the explanation that the manes are worshipped on this day. The manes are worshipped with sesamum seeds (eḷḷu), I think. But eḷḷa-amavâse is given to me,— and correctly, I believe,— as the name of the new-moon of Mârgaśîrsha.

[2] I cannot verify this in any way. And it seems more likely that the name has some connection with the ripening of the pods of the sige-shrub, which are used like soap for washing the hair, etc.

[3] As already remarked (note 1 above), Kittel's Kannaḍa-English Dictionary, s.v. eḷḷu, gives the yeḷḷa-amavâse as the name of the new-moon of Bhâdrapada.

[4] It may be noted that Kittel's Dictionary, s.v. guḍi (1), gives the meaning of "a pole erected on the new-year's day before the house-door; the festival connected with it (Marâthi guḍhî)." The day, however, is a different one.

him in commemoration of his having been reduced to ashes, by the flames from the third eye in the forehead of the god Śiva, when he was trying to inspire Śiva with love for Pârvati.

Phâlguna; February-March.— The full-moon is usually called hôḷi-huṇṇuve; in connection with the hôḷi-festival, (see above, under Mâgha), which ends on this day. Kittel's Kannaḍa-English Dictionary, s.v. kâma, gives it also the name of kâmana-huṇṇuve, "the full-moon of Kâma;" in the same connection.— The new-moon is called ugâdi-amavâse, i.e. yugâdi-amavâse; because the next day,— Chaitra śukla 1; usually known as saṁvatsara-pratipadâ,— is the commencement (âdi) of the new year (yuga is here used in the sense of saṁvatsara or varsha).

Of epigraphic instances of the mention of special names of the full-moons and new-moons, four can be quoted, in addition to the reference to the nûla-huṇṇuve in the present record:—

1.— An inscription at Baḷagâmve in Mysore (Pâli, Sanskṛit, and Old-Canarese Inscriptions No. 158; Mysore Inscriptions, p. 121) is dated— Sa(śa)ka-varshada 976neya Jaya-saṁvatsarada Vaiśâkha bahuḷa akshaya-tri(tṛi)tiyad-amavâse Âdivâra-nimittaṁ; "on account of Sunday (coupled with) the new-moon of the akshaya-tṛitiya of the dark fortnight of Vaiśâkha of the Jaya saṁvatsara, which was the Śaka year 976 (expired)." Here, a mistake was made, through carelessness on the part of the writer of the record, either in allotting the new-moon in question to Vaiśâkha, instead of to Chaitra, or in allotting the akshaya-tṛitiyâ tithi to the dark fortnight, instead of to the bright fortnight, of Vaiśâkha; the text may be construed either way. As regards the results for the date,— in the given year, the new-moon tithi of Chaitra ended, as required, on Sunday, 10th April, A.D 1054, at about 19 hours after mean sunrise; whereas, the new-moon tithi of Vaiśâkha ended at about 6 hours on Tuesday, 10th May, and cannot be connected with a Sunday at all.[1]

2.— An inscription at Taḍi-Mâliṅgi in Mysore is dated, according to the romanised text (Inscriptions in the Mysore District, Part I. p. 146, No. 31),— Saka-varśada 1118neya Râkshasa-saṁvatsarada yaksha-tadige Bihavâra sûryya-grahaṇadalu; "at an eclipse of the sun (on) Thursday (coupled with) the aksha-tadige (new-moon) of the Râkshasa saṁvatsara, which was the Śaka year 1118 (current)." Here, according to this version of the text, the new-moon tithi is not expressly mentioned; though the text in Kanarese characters indicates otherwise, having the curious and meaningless expression yakshatahelamâsa, instead of yaksha-tadige. But, however that may be, the mention of an eclipse of the sun shows that the new-moon tithi was meant; not the akshaya-tṛitiyâ tithi. And the new-moon tithi of Chaitra, in the given year, ended at about 3 hours after mean sunrise on Wednesday, 12th April, A.D. 1195; and on this day there was a total eclipse of the sun, perhaps visible in Southern India (see Von Oppolzer's Canon der Finsternisse, pp. 230, 231, and Plate 115). This is, perhaps, not the given week-day. But the want of agreement between the romanised and Kanarese texts suggests that the original may not have been read correctly, and that the real reading may be Budhavâra (Wednesday), not Bihavâra (Thursday).

3.— The Kargudari inscription (Ind. Ant. Vol. X. p. 249) is dated— śrîmach-Châḷukya-Vikrama-varshada 33neya Sarvvadhâri-saṁvatsarada herjjuggiya-puṇṇami Sômavârad-andina śubha-lagnadoḷ; "at an auspicious moment of Monday (coupled with) the herjuggi full-moon of the Sarvadhârin saṁvatsara, which was the 33rd (year) of the glorious Châḷukya-Vikrama-varsha." Here, the given year is Śaka-Saṁvat 1031 current. The month is not specified. And this full-moon name is not to be found in any of the lists given to me. But Mr. Venkat Rango Katti, of Dharwar,— one of the gentlemen by whom the lists were made out for me,— informed me eventually (see loc. cit. p. 254, note 30) that, "though the name is but rarely used "now, herjuggi, or, in its modern form, hejjuggi, is at some places still known among the "Liṅgâyat cultivators as another name of the sigi-huṇṇuve or full-moon of Âśvina; and that "the explanation is that on that day the cultivators prepare a huggi, or mess of boiled rice mixed "with split pulse, salt, pepper, cummin seeds, etc., and, taking it to their fields, scatter it abroad "in handfuls at every step (hejje)." And, as a matter of fact, the full-moon tithi of Âśvina, in the given year, did end, as required, on Monday, 21st September, A.D. 1108, at about 23 hrs. 48 min. after mean sunrise.[1] Now, the above explanation of the name cannot be accepted; for the reason that herje does not occur as the older form of hejje. But the true explanation can be established. In Kanarese, an initial s is liable to become j in composition.[2] We have a clear instance in the name of the perjuṅka or hejjuṅka tax,—mentioned in many epigraphic records,—which unquestionably comes from per, her, 'large, great,' + suṅka, 'toll, duty, customs.' On the analogy of this, herjuggi is to be derived from per, her, + suggi, 'harvest-time,' and is to be interpreted as meaning "the great or principal harvest." Thus, the herjuggi full-moon is the harvest moon. And this name exactly fits the Âśvina full-moon, next before the autumn harvest, when the muṅgâri, kharîf, or early crops, sown just before the commencement of the rains, are gathered.[3]

[1] It may be added that on the 10th May there was a total eclipse of the sun, visible right across India (see Von Oppolzer's Canon der Finsternisse, pp. 216, 217, and Plate 108), which one would expect to find mentioned in the record, if that were the date really intended. On the 10th April there was no eclipse.

4.—An inscription at the temple of Vîrabhadra in the fort at Lakkuṇḍi in the Gadag tâluka, Dhârwâr district (I quote from an ink-impression), is dated— śrîmach-Châḷukya-Vikrama-varshada 45neya Sârvvarî[4]-saṁvatsarada Mâgha-mâsada Kâman-amavâsye puṇya-dinad-aṁdu; "on the meritorious day (of) the new-moon of Kâma, of the month Mâgha of the Śârvarin saṁvatsara, which was the 45th (year) of the glorious Châḷukya-Vikrama-varsha." Here, the given year is Śaka-Saṁvat 1043 current. And the corresponding English date is the 19th February, A.D. 1121, when the full-moon tithi ended at about 2 hrs. 8 min. after mean sunrise. For the meaning of the name, see page 13 above.

[1] See, also, Ind. Ant. Vol. XXII. p. 110, No. 5, where Prof. Kielhorn gives the same date, with the earlier ending-time of 21 hrs. 36 min.

[2] For instance, pon, 'gold,' + surige, 'knife,' = poñjurige, 'a golden knife,' and mum (mundu), 'that which is before,' + sûr, 'eaves of a house,' = muñjûr, 'the front eaves' (see Kittel's Kannaḍa-English Dictionary, under the letter j); so also, I suppose, hejjâve, 'a certain medicinal plant' (see the same, s.v. hej), is from her, 'large, great,' + sâve, 'a certain grain.'

[3] It should, perhaps, be added that, in the given year, two other full-moon tithis ended on the given weekday, — the full-moon of Vaiśâkha, at about 4 hrs. 40 min. after mean sunrise on Monday, 27th April, A.D. 1108, and the full-moon of Mâgha, at about 16 hrs. 16 min. after mean sunrise on Monday, 18th January, A.D. 1109; also, that on those days, as on the day of the Âśvina full-moon, there was no lunar eclipse to be mentioned in the record; also, that either of those two full-moons might perhaps be connected with the spring harvest, when the hiṅgâri, rabî, or later crops, sown in October and November, are gathered. But it seems to me that the autumn harvest is the more important one for the greater part of the Kanarese country, and that Mr. Venkat Rango Katti was rightly informed that the herjuggi full-moon is the full-moon of Âśvina

[4] Read Śârvvari.

[5] From the ink-impression. A transcription is given in Sir Walter Elliot's Carnátaca-Dêsa Inscriptions, Vol. I. p. 746: it contains many inaccuracies; and giving,—after the words hoṁg-ayvatt-e.eyaṁ koṭṭar, in line 65,—a few words which do not stand in the original at all, it then terminates, with the statement that the rest of the stone is broken away!

[6] This word is represented here by an ornate symbol,—by a somewhat less elaborate symbol in line 35 (before svasti), and in line 59,—and by plain symbols near the end of this line, and in lines 31, 35 (the first ôm), 46, 48, 49, and 53.

[7] Here the word is expressed in writing.

[8] Read Śivâya.

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.

After an invocation of Śiva (line 1), and a verse in praise of the same god under the name of Śaṁbhu, the inscription proceeds to recite that, in the centre of the earth, there is the mountain Mandara (l. 3), the ornament of the seven continents and the seven oceans. Over the land of Kuntaḷa (l. 3), which was considered to be a lock of hair (kuntaḷa) of the woman who was the land to the south of the golden mountain (Mêru), there reigned the Chaḷukyas (l. 4), in so praiseworthy a manner as to illustrate well the observances of the code of Manu (l. 4). When they had continued during eighteen successions,[3] among the renowned Châḷukyas (l. 5), in the eighteenth (succession), in the descent of the royal Chaḷukyas who claimed to be born in the lineage of the younger brother of the father of Kattiyaradêva (ll. 5, 6)[4] whose hereditary capital was the world-renowned Kisuvoḷal (l. 5),[5] there was king Ayyaṇadêva (I.) (l. 7). To him there was born Vikramâditya (V.) (l. 7), whose wife was Bonthâdêvî (l. 8), daughter of king Lakshmaṇa of the Ḍahaḷâ country. And then,— prosperity returning to the Chaḷki family, which had suffered mishap through being bruised by the race of the demons in the shape of the Raṭṭa kings (ll. 8, 9),— their son was Taila (II.) (l. 10), a very incarnation of Kṛishṇa, who fought a hundred and eight[6] battles out in the open country, and captured eighty-eight fortresses. None of the hostile kings could shake off this Âhavamalla-Taila (II.) (l. 12), who, resembling Death, annihilated those kings, the pillars of Kakkara[7] (l. 12) in war, the moons of the sky which was the Râshṭrakûṭa (race), and, amidst the applauses of the whole world, with an exceedingly great effort acquired the sovereignty of the land of Kuntaḷa (l. 13). Just as (the god) Sarasijanâbha (Vishṇu), in the form of the primal boar, lifted up the earth which had sunk into the lower regions, so Taila (II.) (l. 15), bearing the crest of a boar, lifted up the Chaḷukya sovereignty which had fallen through being over-

[1] The vowel of the first syllable is illegible; it may be any other vowel, quite as much as a.

[2] This is, perhaps, by mistake for dharmmav=eṁt-ene.

[3] This is an imaginative statement, not in accordance with facts.

[4] This is a purely imaginary person, not mentioned in any other record that has yet come to notice; unless, indeed, the name is intended for that of Kîrttivarman II.; who, however, did not stand in the asserted relationship to Ayyaṇa I.

[5] The modern Paṭṭadakal, in the Bâdâmi tâluka, Bijâpur district.

[6] Why this particular number should be mentioned, is not apparent. In the same way, the Eastern Chalukya king Narêndramṛigarâja-Vijayâditya II. is said to have fought a hundred and eight battles, by day and by night, during twelve years, with the armies of the Gaṅgas and the Raṭṭas (see Ind. Ant. Vol XX. p. 101).

thrown by the Raṭṭa kings. So this Nûrmaḍi-Taila (II.), otherwise called Trailôkyamalla[1] and Âhavamalla (ll. 15, 16), became the lord of the whole earth; and, at the festival of his installation in the sovereignty, when his name, "the grindstone of the Raṭṭas," began to fill the earth, he gave (the town of) Maṇiṁgavaḷḷi, with libations of water, to Îśvaraghaḷisâsa, the Jagadguru or pontiff of the world, the sun of the water-lilies that are (the members of) the Harîta (gôtra), who was considered to be the cause of the great growth of his sovereignty (ll. 16, 17). And Îśvaraghaḷisâsa, the leader of the family of the Harîtas, whose feet were worshipped by king Taila (II.), the leader of the Chaḷukyas, gave the choice Maṇigavaḷḷi, in the Tardavâḍi thousand, to the five-hundred excellent Brâhmaṇs of whom he himself was the chief, as a grant to endure as long as the moon and sun might last (ll. 17-19).

In the lineage of that lord (l. 19), there was a certain Mâdhava (l. 20), the Prabhu of the town of Mâṇikyavaḷḷi, the very Vishṇu of the renowned Harîta gôtra. And now to describe the greatness of the five-hundred Mahâjanas (l. 20) :— [Here come (ll. 21-24) two verses in praise of the virtues and accomplishments of the five-hundred Brâhmaṇs of Mâṇikyavaḷḷi or Maṇiṁgavaḷḷi, followed by a repetition of the statement that Maṇigavaḷḷi was in the Tardavâḍi thousand; and then we are told that]—Among the five-hundred of Maṇigavaḷḷi, there sprang up a certain Gôvardhana (l. 25), the moon of the ocean that was the Kâśyapa gôtra, an excellent member of the race of Vâjins.[2] His son was Rêvadâsa (l. 26). The latter had four sons,— Nâgadêva, Vishṇu, Goyyarasa, and Huḷidha (l. 27). The youngest of these became the greatest, and, under the name of Chandramas, made his reputation reach even as far as the Himâlaya mountains. To that lord Chandirâja (l. 28) and to Chandrâmbike there was born a son, Basava. There were none who were like him in devotion to the feet of (the god) Mahêśvara (Śiva); and this Basava (l. 30) attained the fame of being esteemed the sun that caused to bloom the water-lily that was the affection of the five-hundred Brâhmaṇs of Maṇiṁgavaḷḷi. This Basavarasayya (l. 30) came to be considered the father of the world, since the whole world, putting their hands to their foreheads, saluted him with the words "Our virtuous father;" and thus he brought greatness to the famous Maṇigavaḷḷi. Manifesting the height of graciousness in saying "This is the abode of the essence of the three Vêdas; this is the accomplishment of that which has no end and no beginning; this is the lustrous divine liṅga" (l. 31), he caused to be made for the beautiful (god) Kalidêvêśa (l. 32) a dwelling-place, the abode of the joy of mankind, which gathered together in itself all the fame of his lineage. Saying "Basava made this beautiful abode, in such a style that it surpasses the silver mountain (Kailâsa); the excellent Brâhmaṇs of Maṇigavaḷḷi are full of devotion, so as to rival Kubêra; I will abide here always," the great lord Kalidêva (l. 33) approved of the abode. And so this glorious pleasure-house of Kalidêvêśa (l. 35), the chief beauty of the world, shall be charming for ever.

Hail! (l. 35). While the asylum of the universe, the favourite of fortune and of the earth, the Mahârâjâdhirâja, the Paramêśvara, the Paramabhaṭṭâraka. the glory of the family of Satyâśraya, the ornament of the Châḷukyas, the glorious and valorous emperor Jagadêkamalladêva (II.) (l. 36), was reigning, with the pleasure of an agreeable interchange of communications (with his feudatories),[3] at the capital of Kalyâṇapura,—on his feudatory, the most intrepid Daṇḍanâyaka, the Manevergaḍe Bammaṇayya (l. 37), preferring a request, with the assent of the five-hundred Mahâjanas headed by the Mahâprabhu Mâdirâja,— the glorious Jagadêkamalladêva (II.) (l. 38), having well thought over it,— to the god Kalidêvêśvara, the holy Siddhaliṅga of the south, of Maṇiṁgavaḷḷi,—on account of the vyatipâta and parvan of the Uttarâyaṇa-saṁkrânti of Thursday (coupled with) the tenth tithi of the bright fortnight of (the month) Pausha of the Dundubhi saṁvatsara which was the fifth of the years marked by the name of the victory of his arms (l. 39), — having laved the feet of the youthful Brahmachârin, the illustrious Sadyôjâtapaṇḍitadêva (l. 40), who was the glory of the Bhujaṁgâvaḷî family, eminent in the world, who was completely conversant with the Kâḷâmukha doctrines, who performed the most austere penances, and who belonged to a family of Brâhmaṇs,— with libations of water, — for the purpose of maintaining the rites of the god,— gave fifty mattars (of land) in (the hamlet of) Mogevâḍa of the southern fields of Maṇiṁgavaḷḷi, (according to the measure) of the pole[1] called the boar-staff (of the length) of forty spans, on the west of the road to Kaḷḷaṁguṟuke, on the east of the cultivable land of the Honnoleyavaru, on the north of the cultivable land of the goddess Keṅgaṇavve of (the shrine of) the Mûlasthâna god, and on the south of the . . . . of the ridge of the paddy-field[2] of Chenna-Gêsimayya. In those fifty mattars (l. 43), twenty-five mattars were for the aṅgabhôga of the god, and for the purificatory rites of (the month) Chaitra, the waving of burning incense, and the repair of whatever might become broken or torn or worn-out; eight mattars were for the aṅgabhôga of the goddess Sâradâdêvî of the maṭha, and for the provision of food for ascetics; five mattars were for the teachers who explain the Kaumâra[3] in the maṭha; eight mattars were for the four (Brâhmaṇs whose households made up the) Brâhmaṇ settlements[4] of the god; and four mattars were an outright allotment, free from all demands, to Amṛitarâśipaṇḍita. As the aṟuvaṇa-tax on these fifty mattars, they shall pay one . . . . on each mattar.

For the flower-garden of the god (l. 46), they gave one mattar of the circle (of lands), (by the measure) of the Brâhmaṇs' staff, as a sarvanamasya-grant, on the north of the stream called Nîrguḷi, on the east of the garden of Vaḷajikaveya-Kêsyaṇa, on the south of the garden of Mahâvishṇubhaṭṭa, and on the west of the garden of the Jain temple called Kuḷiya-basadi.

On the west of the house where food and shelter were given gratis (l. 48), on the north of the road to the street of (the goddess) Bhagavatî, on the east of the king's highway, and on the south of the shop of Aytamaseṭṭi, they gave to the god four shops, as a sarvanamasya-grant.

In the street of the god (l. 49), they gave one oil-mill, as a sarvanamasya-grant, for the perpetual lamp of the god.

In the street of the god (ll. 49, 50), Amṛitarâśipaṇḍita gave four sites to the four (Brâhmaṇs whose households made up the) Brâhmaṇ settlements of the god; and one site there was given to the teachers of the Kaumâra.

In the street of the god (ll. 50, 51), on the south of the site of the Brâhmaṇ settlements of the god, Amṛitarâśipaṇḍita gave one site for the sauvarṇa.

The measure of those sites (l. 51), from south to north, in cubits of the measure of four spans, was six cubits of breadth and fifteen cubits of length for each site.

Then comes (l. 53) a mandate to the five-hundred Mahâjanas, headed by the Mahâprabhu, of the excellent agrahâra of Maṇiṁgavaḷḷi, to preserve this act of religion, as if it were their own act, as long as the moon and sun may last. And this part of the record ends (ll. 55-59) with five benedictive and imprecatory verses,— two in Sanskṛit, and three in Kanarese.

1 Ghaḷe seems to be another form of gaḷe, 'a bamboo rod or stake; a pole, a staff.'

2 Biṭṭôṟu is thus explained in Reeve and Sanderson's Canarese Dictionary. But Kittel's Dictionary gives it in only the sense of 'a missile weapon; a dart, spear, javelin.'

3 i.e. the Kâtantra-grammar.

4 A literal translation would be "to the four persons (who are) the Brâhmaṇ towns."

Hail! (l. 59) On Tuesday (l. 60) (coupled with) the sixth tithi of the dark fortnight of (the month) Bhâdrapada of the Vishu saṁvatsara which was the sixth of the years of the glorious Kaḷachurya Bijjaladêva (l. 59), an emperor by the strength of his arm, the sole hero of the three worlds,— when, headed by the five-hundred Svâmins of the famous (town of) Ayyâvoḷe[1] (l. 61) who were preservers of the strict Baṇañja-religion, the sixteen of the eight districts (l. 62), and the Gavares of many districts, and the Mummuridaṇḍa, were met together in a great district (assembly) at the royal abode Maṇiṁgavaḷḷi, and were standing in one place,— and when, headed by the Prabhu of that place (l. 63), the two five-hundreds,[2] and the Seṭṭis of the locality, and the Nakaras, and the Seṭṭis who made a business of lading . . . ., and the betel-leaf Gâtrigas, and the guild[3] of oilmen, and the sealer of flour and churning-sticks[4] of the Tardavâḍi thousand, were met together and were standing in one place,— on account of the festival of the vyatîpâta of the (tithi called) kapila-chaṭṭi (l. 64), to the god Siddhaliṅga-Kalidêvêśvara, in order to continue the rites of the god, the Nakaras gave[5] half a vîsa[6] per honnu[7] on each bale[8] of the things which they bought, including rubies and all the stock[9] of cotton and the twelve kinds of grain; and the Gâtrigas (l. 65) gave fifty betel-leaves per honnu on the betel-leaves that they sold; and the loading Seṭṭis (l. 66) gave a vîsa per honnu on the sale of such things, including rubies and all the stock of the twelve kinds of grain, which they imported from outside, and a vîsa per honnu on the paddy which they bought and loaded in the locality itself; and the guilds of the oilmen (l. 67) gave one haḷige of oil on each oil-mill, for the perpetual lamp of the god; and the guilds of the weavers, headed by the Gauḍa,[10] gave five vîsas per poll,[11] year by year, for the nûlu-festival; and the Kottaḷis of the god (l. 68) gave five vîsas per poll, year by year, for the nûlu-festival, on those who dealt in milk, thread, and . . . .; and the guilds of artisans gave five vîsas per poll of the Kuriba-sêṇigas (l. 69), year by year, for the nûlu-festival; and the three-hundred of the caste of toddy-drawers (?) (l. 69) gave a handful of dried unripe fruit and a handful of ripe fruit on each basketful that they sold of ripe fruit, ..., and dried unripe fruit; and the basket-makers and mat-makers (l. 70) gave a flower-basket and . . . ., in order to maintain for ever the . . . . . . at the maṭha: and the groups of the kinsmen of the village-headman, headed by the Gauḍa himself, gave, as a perquisite of the god, five vîsas on each marriage (l. 71), no matter whether of a boy or of a girl, and two baḷis year by year.

The record ends (ll. 71, 72) with a mandate to the people of the district and to the three-hundred of the caste of toddy-drawers, to preserve this act of religion.

B.—Of the time of Bijjala; A.D. 1165.

The writing covers an area about 1′ 8″ broad by 1′ 11″ high. The tablet is broken into three pieces, by a fissure running from the beginning of line 14 to the end of line 9, and by

[3] Kittel's Dictionary explains kottaḷi (which would become gottaḷi in composition) as 'a multitude or assemblage, as of fishermen, etc.'

[4] Reeve and Sanderson's Dictionary explains bârika as 'one who applies a public seal or stamp.'—Whether hiṭṭu and gaḷe are really to be taken as meaning here 'flour' and 'churning-stick,' is not quite certain.

[5] i.e. here, and throughout, "agreed to give annually."

[6] Kittel's Dictionary explains vîsa as 'one-sixteenth of a haṇa;' haṇa as 'four annas and eight kâsus;' and kâsu as 'the smallest copper coin, a cash.'

[7] The same explains honnu as 'a gold coin, the half of a varâha (one rupee, seven annas, four cash).'

[8] Bhaṇḍa seems to be for bhâṇḍa, 'a pack or bale of goods or merchandise.'

[9] Bhaṇḍavâne seems to be another form of baṇḍavâla = baṇḍavala, 'capital, funds; stock, store.'

[10] The mention here of the Gauḍa or village-headman seems rather incongruous.

another from the top of the tablet to about the centre of line 10: but very few letters have been completely lost thereby, except near the middle of lines 1 to 8; and in other respects the record is very well preserved.— The sculptures at the top of the tablet have been so much damaged that it is difficult to make out what they are.— The characters are Kanarese, of the regular type of the period to which the record refers itself; and they are well formed and boldly executed. They include decimal figures in lines 18, 25, and 26, and the distinct form of the lingual ḍ all through: the virâma is represented by the mark for the vowel u, throughout; and a pointed instance of this is the word śabuda, line 4. The average size of the letters is about ½".— The language is Kanarese; except for the two opening Sanskṛit verses.— As regards orthography, the only points calling for special notice are—(1) the use of ri for ṛi, e.g. in vrittiya, line 24; (2) the use of b for v in byatîpâta, line 20; and (3) a frequent confusion between the sibilants, e.g. in vriśabha, line 5, and aṁkusaṁ, line 7.

The inscription is a record of the time of the Kaḷachurya king Bijjala. And it registers certain grants that were made to a temple of the god Vishṇu in the form of Channa-Kêśava.

It is dated at the time of an eclipse of the sun on Sunday coupled with the new-moon tithi of the month Mârgaśira of the Pârthiva saṁvatsara, which was the tenth year of the reign of Bijjala. The given saṁvatsara was Śaka-Saṁvat 1088 current. And the corresponding English date is Sunday, 5th December A.D. 1165, when the new-moon tithi ended at about 8 hrs. 28 min. after mean sunrise. On this day, however, there was no eclipse of the sun.[1]

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.

The record opens with invocations of the god Vishṇu as the boar (line 1), and as Śârṅgin (ll. 3, 4). It then refers itself to the time of the Bhujabala-chakravartin Bijjaladêva (l. 10),— the Mahârâjâdhirâja who had attained the pañchamahâśabda (l. 4); the supreme lord of Kâḷañjara, the best of towns (l. 5); he who had the banner of a golden Garuḍa; he who was heralded in public by the sounds of the musical instrument called ḍamaruga (ll. 5, 6); the sun of the water-lily that was the Kaḷachurya family (l. 6),— who was reigning at the capital of Kalyâṇa (l. 10) with the pleasure of an agreeable or friendly interchange of communications (with his feudatories) (l. 11).

All the Mahâjanas, headed by Mâdiraja (l. 14), the Prabhu of the agrahâra of Maṇigavaḷḷi, and the Karaṇas,[6] headed by the Mahâpradhâna and Daṇḍanâyaka Ammaṇayya (l. 15),— for the aṅgabhôga, and for the repairs of whatever might become broken, torn, or worn-out, of (the god) Channa-Kêśava (l. 17), which had been established by Ḍaṅgeya-Vâsudevanâyaka (l. 16),— on account of the vyatîpâta of an eclipse of the sun (l. 20) (on) Sunday (coupled with) the new-moon tithi of (the month) Mârgaśira of the Pârthiva saṁvatsara which was the tenth year of the Kaḷachurya emperor Bijjaladêva (l. 18),— gave a plot of cultivable land (l. 20) on the west of the road to Ukkali[7] (ll. 20, 21), on the north of the cultivable land called Tupparaju-geyyi, on the east of the road to (?) Ralakkiyabbeya-Hañchike, and on the south of the cultivable land called Haṟekâṟa-geyyi. For the perpetual lamp of the god, there was allotted one oil-mill (l. 26), as a sarvanamasya-grant. (And), headed by the

C.— Of the time of Saṅkama; A.D. 1178.

The writing of the whole record covers an area about 1′ 11½″ broad by 2′ 11″ high. The tablet, however, is broken into four pieces, of which one, containing portions of lines 15 to 25, has been lost. In addition to this, many of the letters in the two extant upper fragments, which extend as far as line 23, are a good deal obliterated. And it has, therefore, been found convenient to reproduce the text from line 24 only, from which point it is all on one fragment of the stone and in a state of much better preservation; giving, in the abstract of contents, the substance of lines 1 to 23, which can be read quite sufficiently for that purpose, though they cannot be edited in full.— The sculptures at the top of the tablet are, in the centre, a liṅga, with the sun and moon above it; on the proper right, a squatting figure, facing full-front; and on the proper left, a cow and calf.— The characters are Kanarese, of the regular type of the period to which the record refers itself; and they are well formed and boldly executed. They include decimal figures in line 25, and the distinct form of the lingual ḍ: the virâma is represented by the sign for the vowel u, throughout; and pointed instances of this are śrîmatu, line 24, and pârtthivêṁdrânu, line 41. The average size of the letters is about ½″.— The language is Kanarese; there are ordinary verses in lines 10 to 24, and some of the customary benedictive and imprecatory verses in lines 40 to 46. The accusative neuter singular occurs both with the archaic m, e.g. dhanamaṁ, line 33, and with the v, e.g. dharmmavaṁn=, l. 38, where, from the use of the anusvâra before the n, we seem further to have exactly the modern form, dharmavannu.— In respect of orthography we need only notice an occasional confusion of the sibilants, illustrated by varśada, line 24, and sudhdha, line 25.

The inscription is a record of the time of the Kaḷachurya king Saṅkama. And it registers grants that were made, by the direction of the king himself, to the Mahâjanas or Brâhmaṇs of Maṇigavaḷḷi, headed by the Mahâprabhu Îśvaradêva, and to some other persons.

It is dated at the time of the Dakshiṇâyana-saṁkrânti or summer solstice, coupled with Sunday and the eleventh tithi of the bright fortnight of the month Âshâḍha, of the Viḷambin saṁvatsara, which was the third year of the reign of Saṅkama. But the date does not work out correctly. The given saṁvatsara was Śaka-Saṁvat 1101 current. And the given tithi ended, not on a Sunday, but on Tuesday, 27th June, A.D. 1178, at about 14 hrs. 34 min. after mean sunrise; while the saṁkrânti also, which occurred on the preceding day, Monday, at about 18 hrs. 58 min., cannot be connected in any way with the Sunday.

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.

The record opens with an invocation of the god Vishṇu under the name of Purushôttama (line 1), followed (ll. 1, 2) by the well-known verse Jayaty=âvishkṛitaṁ Vishṇôr, etc., in praise of the incarnation of the same god as a boar. It then refers itself to the time of the asylum of the universe (ll. 2, 3), the favourite of fortune and of the earth, the Mahârâjâdhirâja and Paramêśvara, the supreme lord of Kâḷañjara the best of towns, he who had the banner of a golden Garuḍa (l. 4), he who was heralded in public by the sounds of the musical instrument called ḍamaruga, the sun of the water-lilies of the Kaḷachurya family (ll. 4, 5), he who was successful (even) on a Saturday (l. 6), the champion against hill-forts, the Kaḷachurya-bhujabala-Chakravartin, the glorious Saṅkamadêvarasa (l. 8), whose victorious reign was continuing, with perpetual increase, so as to endure as long as the moon and sun and stars might last, at the nelevîḍu of Navile (l. 9), with the pleasure of an agreeable or friendly interchange of communications (with his feudatories) (ll. 9, 10). He who subsisted (like a bee) on the water-lilies that were his feet, was the Daṇḍâdhipa Kêśava (l. 12). The Mahâprabhu of Maṇiṁgavaḷḷi (l. 16) was Îśvaradêva. His son (l. 18), a very moon of the ocean of the Harîta family, was the Prabhu Mâdirâja (l. 19), whose virtues are praised in the next few lines, with another mention of Maṇiṁgavaḷḷi in line 23.

On account of the festival of the sun's commencement of his progress to the south (on) Sunday, (coupled with) the eleventh tithi of (the month) Âshâḍha of the Viḷambin saṁvatsara, which was the third of the years of the Kaḷachurya emperor Saṅkamadêva, (ll. 24, 25),— at the command of the emperor,— the Daṇḍanâyaka Kêsimayya (l. 26), a very Nârâyaṇa among leaders of the forces, and his nephew the Mahâpradhâna and Daṇḍanâyaka Brahmadêva (l. 27), and the Hergaḍe of the latter, Maṭṭarasa, gave the following religious grants to all the Mahâjanas, headed by the Mahâprabhu Îśvaradêva, of the agrahâra of Maṇigavaḷḷi (l. 28) which was the seat of their authority, and to the Mûligas (l. 29) and to . . . . of the five maṭhas, and to all the people, and to all the castes; namely,[1] at Maṇigavaḷḷi (l. 30), if any one should die without sons, his wife, female children, divided parents and brothers and their children, ... , and any kinsmen and relatives of the same gôtra, who might survive, should take possession of all his property, such as bipeds, quadrupeds, coin, grain, house, and fields; and, if none such should survive, (the authorities of the village) should make over that property, as a religious grant, to those who hold the grants of the gods. And they gave, as a sarvanamasya-grant, twenty mattars (of land), (by the measure) of the large staff, to the god Shambikêśvara (l. 34), in order to do worship after proclaiming the aindra-festival[2] and making Brâhmaṇs read who are versed in the Vêdas; this they gave with libations of water, saying that . . . .[3] should not be said in the houses of Brâhmaṇs.

The record then ends (ll. 36 to 46), with a mandate to the Adhikârin, the Karaṇa, the Prabhu, the Mahâjanas, and all the people, to maintain these grants, and with five of the customary benedictive and imprecatory verses.

D.— Of the time of Jaitugi I.; about A.D. 1200.

The writing covers an area about 2′ 6″ broad by 2′ 3″ high. It is mostly in a state of very good preservation. But, from half-way through line 29, all the formal part of the record has been broken away and lost.— The sculptures above it, at the top of the tablet, are, towards the proper right, a liṅga, with the sun and moon above it, and a standing figure on each side of it; and towards the proper left, a cow and calf.— The characters are Kanarese, of the regular type of the period to which the record refers itself; and they are well formed and well executed throughout. The formal part of the record, commencing with line 27, is separated from what

[1] I am indebted to Mr. Krishna Sastri for some assistance in interpreting the following passages.

[2] Apparently, some festival on "the eighth day in the second half of the month Mârgaśîrsha, and of the month Pausha" (see Monier-Williams' Sanskrit Dictionary, s. v. aindrî).

[3] The meaning of kûḷa, line 36, is not apparent.

precedes it by a blank space about four inches high; and, though written apparently by the same hand, it was probably put on the stone at a subsequent time. The characters include the distinct form of the lingual ḍ all through. The virâma is represented by the sign for the vowel u and pointed instances of this occur in pogaḷaluke, line 15, and chaṁchaḍu-brâhmya, line 22. The size of the letters ranges from about ⅜"to ⅝".— The language is Kanarese; and lines 1 to 26 are all in verse, with a few short connecting prose links. The accusative singular neuter in v occurs in pradêśavan, line 18. In lines 12, 13, we have two rather peculiar or unusual words; kharvaḍa, = kharvaṭa, karvaṭa, which apparently means 'a market-town;' and maḍamba which I do not find in any dictionary, but which must denote some other kind of village.— In respect of orthography we may notice (1) the use of ri for ṛi, throughout; (2) the use of b for v in braja, line 9, sêbyaṁ, line 15, and bratiśvaran, line 25; (3) the use of v for b in dôrvvaḷa, line 5; (4) a good deal of confusion between the sibilants, illustrated by viśayaṁ, line 14, śasi, line 17, and śiśyaṁ, line 25; and (5) the doubling of t before y,— very exceptional at so late a period,— in apattya, line 25.

The inscription is a record of the time of the Dêvagiri-Yâdava king Jaitugi I. The introductory portion of it is complete. But the formal part, containing the date and the details of the grants that were recorded in it, has been broken away and lost.

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.

The inscription opens with a verse, occurring also in A., which mentions the mountain Mandara (line 2). It then mentions Jambûdvîpa, or the central division of the world (l. 3); and then, again, the mountain Mandara, to the south of which there is the land of Bharatakshêtra or India, in which there is the country of Kuntaḷa (l. 4). The ruler of that country, born in the race of Yadu (l. 5), was Bhillama (l. 6). And his son was Jaitugidêva (I.) (ll. 6, 7), also called Jaitapâḷa (l. 7), who conquered the Gurjaras, the Pâṇḍyas, and the Chôḷas, and the countries of Lâḷa (Lâṭa) and Gauḷa (Gauḍa, part of Bengal). One of Jaitugi's officers was the Daṇḍanâtha Sahadêva (l. 8), who defeated the leaders of the forces of Mâḷava, Kaḷiṅga, and Pâñchâḷaka (l. 9), of the Turushkas, and of Nêpâḷaka. And Sahadêva's elder brother was Mallidêva (l. 11), who also held the post of Daṇḍêśa (l. 12) or Daṇḍanâtha. His authority appears to have been limited to the district known as the Taddavâḍi thousand (ll. 14, 15). In that district there was the town of Maṇigavaḷḷi (l. 15) or Maṇiṁgavaḷḷi (l. 17), which Îśvaraghaḷisâsa, of the Harîta family, had presented to the five-hundred Brâhmaṇs (l. 16). And the Mahâprabhu of that town was Îśvaradêva (l. 17), son of Mâdirâja, a very moon of the ocean that was the Harîta family (l. 18). The record then mentions a Prabhu of the town of Mâṇikyavallî (l. 20) named Mâdhava, of the Harîta gôtra,— evidently identical with the Prabhu Mâdirâja, son of Îśvaradêva, who is mentioned in C. line 19, though the verse used to describe him here is that which in A., lines 19, 20, is applied to his grandfather Mâdhava or Mâdirâja, the father of Îśvaradêva. It then proceeds to recite the virtues and accomplishments of the five-hundred Mahâjanas or Brâhmaṇs of Mâṇikyavallî or Maṇiṁgavaḷḷi (ll. 20 to 24). And this part of it concludes by telling us that, in the lineage of the Âchâryas, there was a certain Gauḷadêva (l. 25); his chief disciple was Malayâḷa-Jñânarâsi, and the son of the latter was Dharmarâśi (l. 26).

The formal part of the record commences with line 27. The name of the king, in line 28, is almost quite illegible. But he is described as belonging to the Yâdava family (ll. 27, 28). And the superscript i near the end of line 28, clearly discernible in part and at just the place where it should be, enables us to recognise that the inscription is a record of the time of Jaitugi I. himself,— not of one of his successors.

No. 4.—FOUR PILLAR INSCRIPTIONS OF EASTERN CHALUKYA CHIEFS AT SRIKURMAM.

By E. Hultzsch, Ph.D.

The Vishṇu temple of Kûrmêśvara at Śrîkûrmam near Chicacole in the Gañjâm district contains many inscribed pillars of hard black stone, which have successfully withstood the influence of the climate. Most of their inscriptions are consequently in much better preservation than other stone records in the Telugu country. Four of the pillars bear the subjoined four inscriptions of three chiefs who profess to have been descendants of the Eastern Châlukya king Vimalâditya (A.D. 1015 to 1022) (A. verse 1) and of his son Râjarâja (A.D. 1022 to 1063). This king resided in Râjamâhêndrapaṭṭana (A. v. 4) and is said to have translated with the help of scholars the history of the Bhârata race into Telugu (ibid v. 3). Here we have an important epigraphical confirmation of the tradition according to which Nannayabhaṭṭa, the first Telugu translator of the Mahâbhârata, wrote his work at the direction of Râjarâja of Râjamahêndri.[1]

[1] Compare above, Vol. IV. p. 308, note 3.

A descendant of this Râjarâja was Vijayâditya (I.) (A. v. 6). The latter had a son named Râjarâja, who was the minister of Vîranṛisiṁha (A. v. 7). This Râjarâja had two sons, viz. Vijayâditya (II.) (A. v. 9) or Vijayârka (D. v. 1) and Purushôttama (B. v. 1, and D. v. 2). Purushôttama's son, Jagannâtha or Viśvanâtha, was a vassal of Vîrabâṇudêva (C. ll. 11 to 15). For Vijayâditya II. we have the date Śaka-Saṁvat 1195 (A.), for Purushôttama Śaka-Saṁvat 1199 (B.) and 1240 (D.), and for Jagannâtha Śaka-Saṁvat 1231 (C.). Consequently king Vîranṛisiṁha whom Râjarâja, the father of Vijayâditya II., served as minister (A. v. 7), has to be identified with the Gaṅga king Vîranarasiṁha I., whose reign ended 18 years before that of his grandson Vîranarasiṁha II., the 21st year of whose reign corresponded to Śaka-Saṁvat 1217.[1] Vîrabâṇudêva, the sovereign of Jagannâtha or Viśvanâtha, is identical with the Gaṅga king Vîrabhânudêva II., the successor of Vîranarasiṁha II.[2]

The alphabet of the four inscriptions is Telugu. The language of A. and D. is Sanskṛit verse, and that of B. and C. Sanskṛit verse and Telugu prose. A. records that Vijayâditya (II.) granted twenty-five cows, the milk of which had to be used for ghee to feed a lamp in the temple. B. contains a similar grant of fifty-two[3] ewes for a lamp by Purushôttama.

C. consists of 49 lines, of which I am publishing only lines 1 to 16 and 28 to 30, omitting two passages in Telugu prose, which enumerate various offerings and the persons among whom they were distributed, and one imprecatory verse (sva-dattâṁ etc., l. 47 f.). The inscription records a grant of 40 half-pagodas (nishka, l. 4 f., or gaṇḍamâḍa, l. 28) by Viśvanâtha for providing offerings to the god. D. was composed by the poet Nṛisiṁha (l. 6 f.) and states that Purushôttama granted a golden necklace to the god.

It would correspond, for Śaka-Saṁvat 1231 current, to Friday, 20th September A.D. 1308, when the 5th tithi ended 23 h. 39 m.; and for Śaka-Savat 1231 expired, to Tuesday, 9th September A.D. 1309, when the 5th tithi ended 23 h. 5 m. No. 5.—TWO GRANTS OF DADDA IV. PRASANTARAGA; [CHEDI-]SAMVAT 392.

By G. Bühler, Ph.D., LL.D., C.I.E.

I here re-edit the two inscriptions of the Gurjara chief Dadda IV.,[7] which were discovered in 1895 by Mr. Vithal Nagar of Baroda.[8] At my request, Dr. Hultzsch obtained the originals from the owner, Dhed Narayan of Saṅkhêḍâ in the Baroda division, through the kind offices of Colonel N. C. Martelli, Agent to the Governor-General at Baroda. Dr. Hultzsch's impressions yield some better readings, among which however only one, khadira for vihira (No. II. l. 11) affects the sense. The grants, which have been drawn up on the same day, by the same writer, and in favour of the same person, are written each on two plates, showing, as is usual in Gurjara śâsanas, each two holes for the (now lost) rings. The plates of No. I. measure 10 inches by 5¾, and those of No. II. 10 inches by 6.

The characters show the western variety of the southern alphabets, which is found regularly in the inscriptions of the kings of Valabhî, of the Gurjaras of Broach, of their successors, the Râṭhôrs, and of some other dynasties.[9] As might be expected, they agree in particular very closely with the Khêḍâ grants[10] of the same Dadda, written in (Chêdi-)Saṁvat 380 and 385 by the same writer, with which they share the use of the characteristic little buttons at the tops of the vertical strokes. Nevertheless there are small differences in some letters, which extend even to these two new documents, where e.g. the medial î of No. I. does not agree with that of No. II. Much greater and more important variations appear in the [6] This is a single pâda in the Vasantatilakâ metre.

[7] Those who consider the three Gurjara grants of Śaka-Saṁvat 400, 415 and 417 to be spurious, call this prince Dadda II. Praśântarâga.
[8] A German paper on the two inscriptions appeared in the Sitzungsberichte der philos.-histor. Classe der Wiener Akademie, Vol. CXXXV. No. VIII.
[9] See the Grundriss der Indo-Arischen Philologie und Altertumskunde, Vol. I. Part ii. (Palæography), paragraph 28, A.
[10] Jour. Roy. As. Soc., N. S., Vol. I. p. 247 ff.; Ind. Ant. Vol. XIII. p. 78.

Valabhî śâsanas, stated to have been written by the same writer, as may be seen from a comparison of those drawn up by the divirapati Skandabhaṭa. Among the signs of interpunctuation we find, besides single and double vertical strokes, a single dot, e.g. after °sîmni (No. I. l. 10) and after °sandhiś=cha (No. I. l. 13), as well as a double point,[1] looking like a visarga, after vaṭavṛikshaś=cha (No. II. l. 11). The language, except in the imprecatory verses from the Mahâbhârata, is good Sanskṛit prose, and the orthographical and clerical mistakes are very few.

The form of the two grants, likewise, closely agrees with that of the Khêḍâ śâsanas, differing chiefly by the shortness of the Praśasti. While the Khêḍâ grants contain, in accordance with the rules of the Smṛiti,[2] descriptions of three generations of princes, the new inscriptions offer only the eulogy of the donor. This, of course, is literally identical in the four documents. In the technical parts of the four inscriptions there are only small verbal differences, which, however, extend even to the two Saṅkhêḍâ śâsanas. Though they do not affect the general meaning, they are very instructive for the manner in which the clerks of ancient India worked. These men apparently cared for exactness not more than the modern Karkuns, since we see here that the same writer, though working according to an older office copy, permitted himself to introduce small changes in two documents which he drafted on the same day.

The object of the grants is to convey two fields, one at Suvarṇârapalli (No. I.) and one at Kshîrasara (No. II.) in the Saṁgamakhêṭaka-vishaya, to the Brâhmaṇ Sûrya for the purpose of defraying the expense of his sacrifices. The gain from these inscriptions for the history of the Gurjaras of Broach is but small. Their date, the full-moon day of Vaiśâkha of (Chêdi-)Saṁvat 392, shows, however, that Dadda IV. Praśântarâga ruled at least until A.D. 641-2, and that the Saṅkhêḍâ grant[3] of (Chêdi-)Saṁvat 391 was really issued during Dadda's reign as Mr. Dhruva conjectured. Its grantor, Raṇagraha, the son of Vîtarâga, whom Mr. Dhruva rightly considers to be a brother of our Dadda, probably held some villages as his grâs. Further, the two inscriptions show that the territory of the Gurjaras extended up to the frontiers of Khandesh and Mâlva. For the town, after which the Saṁgamakhêṭaka-vishaya was named, is undoubtedly the modern Saṅkhêḍâ. Saṁgamakhêṭaka means etymologically 'the village at the confluence (of two rivers),' and the Unchh and the Or[4] join near Saṅkhêḍâ. The vishaya or province of Saṁgamakhêṭaka probably included the Saṅkhêḍâ Prânt of the Gaikôvâḍ's possessions, as well as the neighbouring portion of the Rêvâkânṭhâ Agency, still called Saṅkhêḍâ Mêvâs.[5] The partial identity of the names of the two districts indicates that they once belonged to a larger province, the capital of which was Saṅkhêḍâ. As the Trigonometrical Survey maps of these districts are not accessible to me, I am unable to fully prove these assertions by the identification of the villages of Aṭavîpâṭaka, Kukkuṭavallikâ, Kshîrasara and Suvarṇârapalli, mentioned in the two grants. But I may state that an old map of Gujarât in my possession shows south-east of Saonkaira (Saṅkhêḍâ) the village of Kookreylee (Kukrêlî), the name of which corresponds to Kukkuṭavalli.

The donee, the Brâhmaṇ Sûrya, who lived in Kshîrasara, belonged to the Bharadvâja gôtra and studied the Mâdhyandina recension of the White Yajurvêda, was an emigrant from Daśapura, the modern Man-Dasôr in Western Mâlva.[6] The corporation of the Chaturvêdins of [6] See Dr. Fleet's Gupta Inscriptions, pp. 79, 142. Add to Dr. Fleet's list of passages, mentioning Daśapura, Mêghadûta, verse 48 (Wilson).

Daśapura is mentioned in the spurious grant[1] of Dharasêna II., dated Śaka-Saṁvat 400, and a member of the Brâhmaṇ caste of Daśapura (Daśapura-jñâti) composed the Chitôrgaḍh inscription of Môkala of Mêvâḍ.[2] At present Daśapurîyas are not found in Gujarât.

The writer of the grant, the Sâṁdhivigrahika Rêva, is known from the Khêḍâ grants. The name of the dûtaka, Karka, in No. II. line 27, is new. His title, bhôgikapâlaka, literally 'the protector of the bhôgikas or village proprietors,' the technical meaning of which is not known to me, occurs also in the Saṅkhêḍâ grant of Saṁvat 391, where in line 9 the facsimile has dûtakô=tra bhôgikapâlaka-Dujjâna, and not, as Mr. Dhruva reads, bhôgika-Pâlakaṭu-jñâna.

No. 6.—EIGHT VATTELUTTU INSCRIPTIONS OF CHOLA KINGS.

BY E. HULTZSCH, PH.D.

Professor Bühler in his Indian Palæography (p. 72 f. of the German edition) and Mr. Venkayya in his paper on the Kôṭṭayam plate of Vîra-Râghava (above, Vol. IV. p. 293) have lately urged the necessity of publishing Vaṭṭeḻuttu inscriptions, the dates of which can be fixed with some certainty. Hence I take this opportunity for issuing mechanical copies of eight Chôḻa inscriptions. None of these is in a condition of complete preservation; but I trust that, even in their necessarily imperfect state, the accompanying facsimiles will prove useful for tracing the development of the Vaṭṭeḻuttu alphabet.

Five of the inscriptions (A. to E.) are engraved on two boulders in the Sthâṇunâtha temple at Śuchîndram between Kôṭṭâṟu and Cape Comorin in the Travancore State, and the remaining three (F. to H.) on the north wall of the shrine in the Râmasvâmin temple at Shêrmâdêvi in the Tinnevelly district. They belong to the reigns of the Chôḻa kings Parakêsarivarman (A.), Parântaka I. (B.), Râjarâja I. (C. to G.) and Râjêndra-Chôḷa I. (H.). The fact that all these inscriptions are found in the extreme south of the peninsula proves, what the Vaṭṭeḻuttu inscriptions of the earlier Pâṇḍya kings suggest, that, about the 10th century of our era, the Vaṭṭeḻuttu was current in the country of the Pâṇḍyas, but unknown in the native territory of their Chôḷa conquerors.

The characters of the subjoined inscriptions agree more closely with those of the Cochin and Tirunelli plates[1] than with those of the plates of Jaṭilavarman.[2] Throughout F., G. and H. once in C.[3] and twice in D.[4] occurs a variant of y, which is known from the Kôṭṭayam plates of Sthâṇu-Ravi.[5] In H. the double k is written as a group, as in many inscriptions in the Tamiḻ alphabet. As in all other Vaṭṭeḻuttu inscriptions, Grantha letters are occasionally used in the subjoined eight records. The following is a list of the Grantha words and letters :—

Svasti śrî at the beginning of each of the eight inscriptions.— A., l. 11, sabhai.— C., l. 4, brahma; l. 5, Mahâdê; l. 11, sabhai.— D., ll. 4 and 6, ja of Râjarâja; l. 7 f., brahma and m of brahmadêyam, and Sujintira.— E., l. 8, brahmadê and mah[â]sabhai*.— F., ll. 3 and 4, Râjarâja; l. 4 f., brahma, mahâ and chchaturvvê.— H., l. 1, śrî and jêndra of śrî-Râjêndra, ja of Irâjarâja; l. 2, brahma; ll. 2, 8 and 9, sa of Vaigâṇasa; ll. 5 and 6, śrî.

A.—Inscription in the Sthâṇunâtha temple at Śuchîndram.[6]

This inscription records the gift of a lamp to the Śiva temple at Tiruchchivindiram, the modern Śuchîndram, and is dated in the 34th year of the reign of the ancient Chôḷa king Parakêsarivarman.[7] As we know from the large Leyden grant and from actual examples in the history of the later Chôḷas that the titles Râjakêsarin and Parakêsarin were borne alternately by reigning kings,[8] some of those inscriptions which are dated in the reign of Parakêsarivarman—without any distinguishing epithet, as Madirai-koṇḍa in the case of Parântaka I.,—may perhaps be attributed to Vijayâlaya, the grandfather of Parântaka I. and the earliest historical person that is referred to in two genealogical inscriptions of the Chôḷa dynasty.[9]

Hail! Prosperity! In the year forty (of the reign) of king Parakêsarivarman who conquered Madirai and Îḻam,—in the month of Kumbha of this year, Oruṅgai Araṅgaṉ, a merchant of Karavandapuram in Kaḷakkuḍi-nâḍu, gave one perpetual lamp,[7] weighing thirty palam, to (the temple of) Emberumâṉ (Vishṇu) at Tiruchchivindiram. [1] I.e. which have to be replaced by fresh ones when they die or cease to supply milk for the ghee; compare South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. II. p. 375, note 3.

[3] No. 82 of the Government Epigraphist's collection for 1896.

[4] An inscription of the same year is noticed in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. II. p. 374 and note 8.

[5] See ibid. p. 379 and note 8.

[6] The same place is mentioned in two Pâṇḍya inscriptions; Ind. Ant. Vol. XXII. pp. 67 and 74.

[7] As stated in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. II. p. 132, note 3, nondâ-viḷakku or nandâ-viḷakku are corruptions of nundâ-viḷakku, which occurs in H., line 4, and in an inscription at Tirukkaḻukkuṉṟam (above, Vol. III. p. 284). The form tiri-nondâ-viḷakku in the present inscription further suggests that tiru-nundâ-viḷakku, 'a sacred lamp which is never trimmed,' has been developed by folk etymology from tiri-nundâ-viḷakku, 'a lamp the wick of which is never trimmed' (because ghee is continually supplied to it).

Hail! Prosperity! In the year forty (of the reign) of king Parakêsarivarman who conquered Madirai and Îḷam,— in the month of Kumbha of this year, Oruṅgai Araṅgaṉ, a merchant of Karavandapuram in Kaḷakkuḍi-nâḍu, gave one perpetual lamp,[7] weighing thirty palam, to (the temple of) Emberumâṉ (Vishṇu) at Tiruchchivindiram. In order that this

[1] I.e. which have to be replaced by fresh ones when they die or cease to supply milk for the ghee; compare South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. II. p. 375, note 3.

[3] No. 82 of the Government Epigraphist's collection for 1896.

[4] An inscription of the same year is noticed in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. II. p. 374 and note 8.

[5] See ibid. p. 379 and note 8.

[6] The same place is mentioned in two Pâṇḍya inscriptions; Ind. Ant. Vol. XXII. pp. 67 and 74.

[7] As stated in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. II. p. 132, note 3, nondâ-viḷakku or nandâ-viḷakku are corruptions of nundâ-viḷakku, which occurs in H., line 4, and in an inscription at Tirukkaḷukkuṉṟam (above, Vol. III. p. 284). The form tiri-nondâ-viḷakku in the present inscription further suggests that tiru-nundâ-viḷakku, 'a sacred lamp which is never trimmed,' has been developed by folk etymology from tiri-nundâ-viḷakku, 'a lamp the wick of which is never trimmed' (because ghee is continually supplied to it).

(lamp) might burn without fail, as long as the moon and the sun exist, during day and night, (one) uḻakku and a half of ghee per day, (he) granted seventy-five full-grown ewes, which must neither die nor grow old.[1] For one (other) perpetual lamp, which the same person gave to (the shrine of) Tiruvêṅgaḍa[nilai],[2] (he) granted twenty-five ewes, in order that (this lamp) might burn, in the same manner as stated above, (one) âḻâkku[3] of ghee per day. Altogether one hundred ewes were shown and made over to the members of the assembly.

C.—Inscription in the Sthâṇunâtha temple at Śuchîndram.[4]

This inscription records the gift of a lamp by a native of Ceylon (Îḻa-nâḍu) in the 10th year of the reign of the Chôḻa king Râjarâja I., who ascended the throne in A.D. 985.[5]

[7] This is the ancient name of Shêrmâdêvi. In a later inscription (above, Vol. III. p. 240) the form Śêravan-mahâdêvi occurs. Both Śêramâṉ and Śêravaṉ are Tamiḻ designations of the Chêra king.

[8] The introduction agrees with the Tirumalai inscription of the 21st year (South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. No. 66) in not mentioning the conquest of Raṭṭapâḍi, which is first referred to in an inscription of the 22nd year at Tiruvaiyâṟu (No. 217 of 1894).

This inscription is dated in the 3rd year of the reign of the Chôḷa king Râjêndra-Chôḷa I., who ascended the throne in A.D. 1001-2.[3] It records that certain Vaikhânasas pledged themselves to supply daily one half of the amount of ghee that was necessary to keep one lamp burning in the temple, which bore the name Nigarili-Śôḷa-Viṇṇagar.[4] Shêrmâdêvi itself had then the surname Nigarili-Śôḷa-chaturvêdimaṅgalam. These two surnames suggest that Nigarili-Śôḷaṉ, i.e. 'the unequalled Chôḷa,' was a biruda of Râjêndra-Chôḷa I.

We have found before (above, Vol. IV. p. 266) that Râjarâja's reign commenced between the 24th December A.D. 984 and the 26th September A.D. 985. A date of the month of Kanyâ (August-September) of the 15th year of his reign, therefore, will be expected to fall either in A.D. 999, in Śaka-Saṁvat 921 expired, or in A.D. 1000, in Śaka-Saṁvat 922 expired. As a matter of fact, this new date works out correctly for Śaka-Saṁvat 921 expired.

In Śaka-Saṁvat 921 expired the month of Kanyâ lasted from the 27th August to the 25th September A.D. 999, and during this period the moon was in the nakshatra Pûrva-Bhadrapadâ— by the equal-space system for 15 h. 6 m., by the Brahma-siddhânta for 3 h. 56 m., and according to Garga for 3 h. 17 m., after mean sunrise— on Tuesday, the 29th August A.D. 999, which was the third day of the month of Kanyâ[4] (and the full-moon day[5] of the month of Bhâdrapada).

The date reduces the period during which the reign of Râjarâja must have commenced to the time from the 24th December A.D. 984 to (approximately) the 29th August A.D. 985.[6]

"In the 48th year (of the reign) of king Râjakêsarivarman, alias the emperor of the three worlds, the glorious Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷadêva,—on the day of Ârdrâ, which corresponded to a Monday and to the thirteenth tithi of the first fortnight of the month of Makara."

Above, Vol. IV. p. 263, we have seen that a day in the month of Kumbha of the 48th year of the reign of Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa I. corresponds to the 25th January A.D. 1118. This date, of the month of Makara which immediately precedes the month of Kumbha, of the same 48th year, will therefore be expected to fall within a month before the 23rd January A.D. 1118, the first day of the month of Kumbha of that other date. And so it really does. For, the date corresponds to Monday, the 7th January A.D. 1118, when the 13th tithi of the bright half (of the month Mâgha[1]) ended 15 h. 1 m., and when the nakshatra was Ârdrâ, by the equal-space system for 14 h. 27 m., by the Brahma-siddhânta for 0 h. 39 m., and according to Garga for 2 h. 38 m., after mean sunrise.

No. 8.— RAYAKOTA PLATES OF SKANDASISHYA.

BY E. HULTZSCH, PH.D.

This inscription is edited from two sets of Sir Walter Elliot's ink-impressions, which I owe to the kindness of Dr. Fleet. On the wrapper in which I received the impressions are the following remarks in Dr. Fleet's hand — "The original copper-plates belong to Sir Walter Elliot. Three plates, about 8¼" by 3¼". In good order. They are quite smooth; the edges are not raised into rims. The ring has been cut. It is about ⅓" thick and 3¼" in diameter. The seal is circular; 2" in diameter. It has, in relief on the surface of the seal, a kneeling bull facing to the proper left, and some small emblems, which I do not quite understand, above it; and a line of writing, which I cannot read, all round it. The label on them says that they were received from Captain Campbell of Royakota." Royakota is the former spelling of Râyakôṭa (properly Râyakôṭe in Kanarese), a hill fort, village and post office in the Krishṇagiri tâluka of the Salem district.[2]

The inscription consists of three Sanskrit verses, a passage in Tamiḻ prose (ll. 11 to 33), and a fourth Sanskrit verse at the end. The four Sanskrit verses must have been written or copied by a person who had only a very faint knowledge of that language. The Tamiḻ portion is more correct, but shows many cases of doubling of initial and final consonants which are not sanctioned by the Tamiḻ grammars.[3]

The alphabet of the four Sanskrit verses is Grantha. The prose passage is written in Tamiḻ characters, occasionally interspersed with Grantha words. The alphabet of the inscription is decidedly more developed than that of the Kûram and Kaśâkûḍi plates,[4] but more archaic than that of the Hastimalla plates.[5] If it is admissible to compare the characters of stone inscriptions, which sometimes retain older forms, I would say that the alphabet of the Râyakôṭa plates lies between the two Kîḷ-Muṭṭugûr inscriptions of Narasiṁhavarman as the upper limit, and the two Âmbûr inscriptions of Nṛipatuṅga-Vikramavarman as the lower one.[1]

After an invocation of Vishṇu (verse 1), the inscription furnishes the same genealogy as three inscriptions of the Pallava dynasty (viz. the Kailâsanâtha inscription of Râjasiṁha,[2] the Kaśâkûḍi plates,[3] and the Udayêndiram plates of Pallavamalla[4]) as far as Aśvatthâman. But while the Pallava inscriptions[5] continue the line from Aśvatthâman to his son Pallava, the Râyakôṭa plates seem to state that Aśvatthâman had, by a Nâga woman, a son named Skandaśishya, a descendant of whom was another Skandaśishya, or, as he is called in the subsequent Tamiḷ passage (l. 11), kô vijaya-Skandaśishya-Vikramavarman.

The Tamiḷ portion states that, in his fourteenth year, the king issued a written order to the inhabitants of the district of Paḍuvûr-kôṭṭam and to the inhabitants of Mêl-Aḍaiyâṟu-nâḍu, a subdivision of this district, by which he granted to a Brâhmaṇa the village of Śârugûr (l. 14) in the same subdivision. This village received the surname Skandaśishyamaṅgalam (l. 22 f.) in honour of the donor. Among its boundaries we find (the hill named) Tiruvêḷâlamuḍi (l. 26). This is the Tamiḷ equivalent of Vêḷâlaśikhara, a hill which is mentioned in the Udayêndiram plates of Pallavamalla[6] among the boundaries of Udayachandramaṅgalam— the modern Udayêndiram in the Guḍiyâtam tâluka of the North Arcot district.[7] Consequently Śârugûr must have been situated near Udayêndiram, which, like Śârugûr and Âmbûr,[8] belonged to Mêl-Aḍaiyâṟu-nâḍu.[9]

The etymological meaning of Skandaśishya is 'the pupil of the war-god.' The dynasty to which he belonged is not named in the inscription. That he claimed connection with the Pallavas is evident from the two facts that his seal bears a bull,[10] and that he derived his descent from the same mythical ancestors as the Pallava kings of Kâñchî. On the other hand, the two words kô vijaya which are prefixed to his name, and the title Vikramavarman which follows it, in line 11, connect him with certain other princes who profess to have been descendants both of the Pallavas and of the Western Gaṅgas.[11] As I have stated before, the alphabet of the Râyakôṭa plates would well suit this allocation. The legend according to which Skandaśishya was a remote descendant of another Skandaśishya, who was born to the sage Aśvatthâman by a Nâga woman, seems to be connected with a similar legend, the heroes of which are the Chôḷa king Kôkkiḷḷi and the Toṇḍaimâṉ (i.e. the Pallava king) Iḷandiraiyaṉ.[12] An inscription at Tirukkaḷukkuṉṟam mentions a Skandaśishya who was anterior to the Pallava king Narasiṁhavarman I.[13] and who, accordingly, must have reigned long before the king who issued the subjoined grant.

According to line 12, the grant was made at the request of Mahâvali-Vâṇarâja, who must have been a feudatory of Skandaśishya. The title Bâṇâdhirâja or Mâvali-Vâṇarâya was bestowed on the Western Gaṅga king Pṛithivîpati II. by the Chôḷa king Parântaka I.[14] and appears to have been the hereditary designation of the Bâṇa chiefs, who derived their descent from the demon Bali.[15]

TRANSLATION.

A.—Sanskrit portion.

(Line 1.) Hail! Prosperity! [Verse 1, which is incomplete, seems to enumerate various epithets of Hari (Vishṇu)].

[Verses 2 and 3, which are very corrupt, contain the following genealogy:— From the lotus on the navel of Śrîpati (Vishṇu) was produced the lotus-born (Brahmâ). His son was Aṅgiras; his son Dhishaṇa (Bṛihaspati); his son Śaṁyu; his son Bharadvaja; his son Drôṇa; and his son Aśvatthâman. His son (?) by a Nâga woman (Drijihv-âṅgan[â]) was the overlord (adhirâja) Skandaśishya. In his family was born (another) Skandasishya, who resembled the pitcher-born (Agastya)].

B.—Tamiḻ portion.

(L. 11.) Hail! Prosperity! In the fourteenth year (of the reign) of the king, the victorious Skandaśishya-Vikramavar[ma]n,— (the king) was pleased to issue the following written order to the inhabitants of the kôṭṭam and to the inhabitants of the nâḍu:—"At the request of Mahâvali-Vâṇarâja, Mahêśvara-bhaṭṭa being the executor,[10] we have given to Mâ[dha]vaśarma-bhaṭṭa, of the Vatsa gôtra (and) of the Pravachana sûtra,[11] (the village of) Śârugûr in Mêl-Aḍaiy[â]r̤u-nâḍu, (a subdivision) of Paḍuvûr-kôṭṭam,—the waste land under cultivation which surrounds this (village), (the land) irrigated by water-levers, cut jungle, pîḍiligai,[12] dry land under cultivation, burnt jungle, commons,[13] channels, embankments, ferry-boats, causeways, talaippêḷai,[14] and all other kinds of land."

[11] According to Professor Jolly (Recht und Sitte, p. 4), Pravachanasûtra is the same as Baudhâyanasûtra. The same term occurs in two of the Udayêndiram grants; see above, Vol. III. p. 144, and South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. II. p. 373.

[12] The same term occurs in line 282 of the large Leyden grant.

[13] Maṇṛu occurs in line 281 of the same grant.

[14] The same term occurs in line 80 of the Kûram plates.

(L. 19.) Having seen this (order), the inhabitants of the kôṭṭam and the inhabitants of the nâḍu reverently placed (it) on their heads and planted stones and milk-bush (along the boundaries)[1] before an accountant of the royal palace and an elephant of the royal palace.[2]

(L. 22.) According to the royal order which was issued in writing, the eastern boundary of this (village of) Skandaśishyamaṅgalam (is) to the west of Maṇittiḍal; the southern boundary (is) to the north of Kuṟumaḍi; the western boundary (is) to the east of the ancient village called Ilattaippâḍi; and the northern boundary (is) to the south of Kuṟukku[ḍi] on the west of the Tiruvêḷâlamuḍi (hill)

(L. 27.) The land enclosed within the four great boundaries thus proclaimed, wherever the iguana runs and the tortoise crawls,[3] not excluding the cultivated land,[4] was given to this Brâhmaṇa.

(L. 29.) The exemptions granted are (the tax on) looms and (the tax on) shops,[5] the rent of the goldsmiths,[6] the cloth on the loom,[7] the best cow and the best bull,[8] the tax on toddy,[9] the tax on weights,[10] and (the tax on) residence within (the village); with exemption (from these) and all other kinds of burdens (the village was granted).

No. 9.—KONKUDURU PLATES OF ALLAYA-DODDA; SAKA-SAMVAT 1352.

By G. V. Ramamurti, B.A.; Parlakimedi.

These plates were discovered in 1887, deposited in a small square receptacle in a brick mound in the village of Koṅkuduru,[11] 5 miles north of Râmachandrapuram in the Gôdâvarî district. They were not claimed by any one as private property, and Mr. S. H. Wynne, the Collector of the Gôdâvarî district, sent them in September 1893 to Dr. Hultzsch, to be kept in the Madras Museum. The set consists of seven copper plates with raised rims and strung on a ring. The ends of the ring are secured in the crescent-shaped base of an oblong pedestal, which bears a recumbent figure of the sacred bull Nandi, with the symbols of the sun and the moon in front of it. One end of the ring is loose, and the plates may be detached from the ring by bending it. The size of each of the plates is about $10\frac{1}{4}''$ by $5\frac{1}{2}''$, and the ring-hole is about $\frac{3}{4}''$ in diameter. The ring measures about $4\frac{1}{2}''$ in diameter and is about $\frac{1}{2}''$ thick.

I edit the inscription from two sets of ink-impressions, kindly sent to me by Dr. Hultzsch. All the plates except the fifth and the seventh are numbered by Telugu numerals, engraved

1 Compare line 110 f. of the Kaśâkûḍi plates.

2 Compare ll. 174-176 of the large Leyden grant; and Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 288 f. and Vol. XXII. p. 75.

3 See South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. II. p. 360, note 1.

4 See ibid. Vol. III. p. 26, note 2, and l. 305 f. of the large Leyden grant.

5 The two terms taṟi and kûlam occur in the same order in line 77 of the Kûram plates. Instead of this, two later inscriptions have taṟiy-iṟai, 'the tax on looms,' and kaḍaiy-iṟai, 'the tax on shops.' see South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 88 f.

6 With taṭṭâr-kkâṇam compare taṭṭâr-ppâṭṭam, ibid. Vol. II. p. 114, line 2 from below; Vol. I. Index, s. v. taṭṭâr; and l. 303 of the large Leyden grant.

7 Instead of taṟi-kkûṟai, the same grant (l. 303) has the synonymous term taṟi-puḍavai.

8 The same two terms occur in line 127 of the Kaśâkûḍi plates and in line 304 of the large Leyden grant.

9 Instead of îḻa-ppûchchi, the same grant (l. 286) reads îḻam-pûṭchi.

10 With iḍai-ppûchchi compare iḍai-ppâṭṭam in the same grant (l. 304) and iḍai-vari in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. II. p. 117.

11 No. 18 on the Madras Survey Map of the Râmachandrapuram tâluka.

on the left margin of the second side of each. Each plate bears writing on both sides. A few letters on the first side of the first plate and a few others of the other plates, which are indistinct, being excepted, the inscription is on the whole well engraved and in good preservation. The language is, from line 1 to 130 and again from line 179 to 190, Sanskṛit verse of various metres, while the intervening description of the boundaries of the village granted (ll. 130-179) is in Telugu prose. Some ungrammatical and archaic as well as obsolete words occur in the Telugu portion. The anusvâra in such words as dâṁka (l. 135) and vâṁgu (l. 139) is now omitted or attenuated into half-anusvâra.[1] The following are some of the peculiarities of the alphabet and orthography of this inscription:—(1) The alphabet closely resembles the modern Telugu character; d, ḷ, ś, î, â in ṭâ, and a few other letters, however, present older forms. (2) In such conjunct consonants as ṅga, the anusvâra is used instead of the proper nasal. (3) The anusvâra is improperly used in several cases, as prasaṁnna (l. 126) for prasanna; in tuṁmma (l. 138) the ṁ is superfluous. (4) In °nuṁḍḍi (l. 158) and aṁtta° (l. 174), ḍ and t are incorrectly doubled; the doubling of y in pâlaniyyaḥ (l. 182) appears to compensate for the shortening of the preceding long vowel, though it is incorrect. (5) Except in the word svargga (l. 184), consonants are not doubled after r. (6) The vertical bottom-stroke which the modern alphabet employs to mark the aspirates is here generally dispensed with, except in the case of bh.[2] Where the top-stroke is not used, a small vertical stroke or a mark like a circumflex is placed beneath or by the side of the letter (ll. 35, 37). The bhâ of vibhâti (l. 33) is distinguished from the bâ of bâla (l. 34) by the angle under which the â is affixed to the consonant. (7) The secondary form of l has two different shapes; compare (in l. 99) Mallayârya with Jallipalli. (8) Conjunct consonants as rya, ryô, rva are expressed, as in modern Telugu, by the full form of r, to which the secondary form of y or v is attached (ll. 44, 47, 54); but rvô and rvê are also expressed by the rêpha mark on the top of vô and vê. (9) No distinction is made between the short and long sounds of e and o even in Telugu words. (10) Two ways of marking ê and ô are noticeable. (11) In conjunct consonants the secondary form of v is not distinct from that of p (ll. 31, 32, 35). (12) The second k in dikkâṁtâ (l. 35) is a full k without the top-stroke. (13) The ṛi of Ṛigvêda (l. 100) has a top-stroke.

[1] See above, Vol IV. p. 315.

[2] Compare Mr. Krishna Sastri's remarks, above, Vol. III. p. 21.

The date of the grant was the time of Ardhôdaya in the month Pausha of Śaka-Saṁvat 1352 (expired), which corresponded to the cyclic year Sâdhâraṇa (v. 23). Professor Kielhorn kindly contributes the following remarks on this date :—"The Ardhôdaya takes place on the new-moon tithi of the amânta Pausha, provided this tithi falls on a Sunday, when during day-time the nakshatra is Śravaṇa and the yôga Vyatîpâta. This most auspicious conjunction for making donations did take place in the given year. For in that year the new-moon tithi of the amânta Pausha ended 2 h. 20 m. after mean sunrise of Sunday, 14th January A.D. 1431, when the nakshatra was Śravaṇa for 17 h. 4 m. and the yôga Vyatîpâta for 18 h. 56 m. after mean sunrise."

The object of the grant was the village of Gumpiṇi (v. 23), which was surnamed Allâḍa-reḍḍidoḍḍavaram (v. 24) or Doḍḍavaram (ll. 146, 155, 159, 169, 173, and v. 89). This village cannot be traced on the map. But its position is defined by several villages which are mentioned in the description of its boundaries, and which, as Dr. Hultzsch informs me, are found on the Madras Survey Map of the Amalâpuram tâluka. These are Dêvarapalli (No. 27 on the map), Palavela or Palevela—now Palivela (No. 42 on the map), Mummaḍivaram—now Mummaḍivarapâḍu (No. 26 on the map), Înthakôṭa—now Îtakôṭa (No. 22 on the map) Kêtarâjupalli (No. 19 on the map) and Vedurêśvaram—now Vedirêśvaram (No. 20 on the map). The northern boundary of Gumpiṇi was the Kauntêya river. This must be another name of the Gautamî, or of its southern branch which passes to the north-east of Palivela.

I may here insert some facts mentioned in two Telugu poems composed by Śrînâtha,[1] viz. the Kâśîkhaṇḍam and the Bhîmakhaṇḍam,[2] as they confirm and even add to the information recorded in this inscription. The poet was contemporary with the last three Reḍḍi princes of the dynasty and dedicated the former poem to Vîrabhadrareḍḍi, the brother of the Doḍḍaya-reḍḍi who issued the present charter, and the latter poem to the minister of Vîrabhadra. The Kâśîkhaṇḍam contains the following account :— Among the divisions of the Śûdra caste, one is famed by the name of Paṇṭa-kula,[3] of which Perumâḍireḍḍi, of the village Dûvûru, became celebrated as a devotee of Śiva. He belonged to the Dêsati-vaṁśa. His wife was Annamâmbâ, by whom he had five sons, Allaya, Pedakôṭa, Annaprôla, Doḍḍaya and Pinnakôṭa. The fourth, Doḍḍaya,[4] is styled Paṇṭakularâja. He married another Annamâmbâ and had three sons, Prôla, Kôṭa and Allâḍa. The last is described as a great conqueror, and from the description the poet gives of his achievements, he seems to have risen to some importance and perhaps established a petty principality. His wife[5] was Vêmâmbâ, the grand-daughter of king Anavêma, who bore four sons,— Vêma, Vîrabhadra, Doḍḍaya, and Annaya.[6] The eldest of them is said to have led an expedition as far as the Vindhyas and to have conquered Sapta-mâḍiya-râya, the king of Jhâde-jantaru-nâḍu, the chiefs of Bârahadonti, and the kings of Oḍḍâdi and Kaṭaka. He is also said to have received tribute from Paṇḍuvâsuradhâni, the king of Oḍḍe-dêśa, the king of Karṇâṭa, the king of the Yavanas (?), and the chiefs

[1] This famous Telugu poet lived about the year 1435 A.D. He was patronized by the Reḍḍi chiefs of Râjamahêndra. Of his many works, the Paṇḍitarâyacharitam was dedicated to Mâmiḍi-Praggaḍayya, commander-in-chief of Vêmâreḍḍi's forces; the Naishadham to Mantri-Siṅgana, Praggaḍayya's brother; the Bhîmêśvara-khaṇḍam to Beṇḍapûḍi Annayya, minister to Vîrabhadrareḍḍi; and the Kâśîkhaṇḍam to Vîrabhadrareḍḍi; see Rao Bahadur K. Viresalingam's Telugu Poets, Part I. p. 66.

[2] The introductory verses in the first canto of this poem and generally the initial and the final verses of each canto contain numerous references to incidents in the lives of the Reḍḍi chiefs.

[3] Compare verse 4 of this inscription.

[4] The inscription traces the genealogy of the dynasty from this chief.

[5] Vêmâmbâ was, according to the inscription, the daughter of Bhîma of the Chôḍa family.

[6] There is a peculiarity in the nomenclature of these Reḍḍis. The name of a chief is often prefixed to that of his son. Allâḍa's sons are known as Ala-Vêma, Ala-Vîra or Allanṛipa-Vîrabhadra. So also, Kâṭa's son is called Kâṭaya-Vêma or Kâṭamareḍḍi-Vêmâreḍḍi; see above, Vol. IV. p. 328.

of Bârahadonti-manne and Saptamâḍiya.[1] The titles by which he was well known are—Râyavêśyâbhujaṁga, Saṁgrâmapârtha, Karpûravasantarâya and Jaganobbagaṇḍa. The second chief, Vîrabhadra, is described as even more powerful than his brother. The chiefs of Kasimikôṭa, Veṅkaṭâyi, Kappakoṇḍa, Killeḍa and others are said to have been subdued by him. He was crowned during the life-time of Vêmâreḍḍi. Vîrabhadra married Anitalli, the daughter of Vêma, the son of king Kâṭa.[2] He was a votary of Śiva and a great warrior. The third chief, Doḍḍaya,[3] is also reported to have made many conquests. He led an expedition to the north and reduced Oḍḍâdi, Śṛiṅgâraṁkôṭa and Lôtugeḍḍa.[4] He was a very skilful horseman. On the race-courses he made his horse jump over a space of twenty-four cubits in one bound.[5] After briefly describing the virtues of the youngest, Annaya, the poet expresses the wish that his patron might rule the whole country including Chîkaṭi, Kaliṅga, Chilkasamudra and Siṁhaśaila[6] from his capital Râjamahêndra.[7]

As regards the connection between the Reḍḍis of Koṇḍavîḍu[8] and those of Râjamahêndra nothing definite is known. The Bhîmakhaṇḍam states that the chief Allâḍa became the ruler of a kingdom extending as far as Siṁhâdri, with his capital at Râjamahêndra, by the influence of his relationship with Prôlaya, Anavêma, Anapôta, Alavêma, Kumâragiri and others, who were the rulers of Pâkanâḍu.[9] It is probable that the Anavêma whose grand-daughter, Vêmâmbâ, according to the Kâśikhaṇḍam, was married to Allâḍabhûpati, is the Anavêma of Koṇḍavîḍu.[10] But the present inscription says that Vêmâmbikâ was the daughter of Bhîma of the Chôḍa family. To reconcile these two statements, it may be conjectured that Vêmâmbikâ was the daughter of Anavêma's daughter and that Bhîma was his son-in-law. We learn from the Tottaramûḍi plates that Kâṭaya-Vêma's wife and mother were, respectively, the daughter and sister of Anavôta, the elder brother of Anavêma;[11] and the Kâśikhaṇḍam tells us that this Kâṭaya-Vêma's daughter was married to Vîrabhadra, the second son of Vêmâmbikâ. Though the relationship between these two Reḍḍi dynasties is thus established, it is not easy to explain how the kingdom of Râjamahêndra came into the hands of Vêma and Vîrabhadra. Kâṭaya-Vêma is said to have received it as a gift from Kumâragiri of Koṇḍavîḍu;[12] and he must have possessed it until at least A.D. 1416, the date of the latest inscription

[1] Sapta-mâḍiya probably means 'seven hills' and Bârahadonti-manne 'twelve hill states' (?). Oḍḍâdi is in the Vizagapatam district and Kaṭaka in Orissa. There is a village called Pâṇḍuva in the Gôdâvarî district. The Yavanas are the Muḥammadans.

[2] This is the Reḍḍi chief Kâṭaya-Vêma of Râjamahêndra, on whom see above, Vol. IV. Nos. 46 and 47.

[3] This is the Reḍḍi chief who issued the present grant.

[4] These places are in the Vizagapatam district.

[5] Compare verse 19 of the inscription.

[6] Chîkaṭi is at present a Zamîndârî in the Gañjâm district. The extent of Kaliṅga was perhaps at this time much reduced. Chilkasamudra is the lake Chilka to the north of Gañjâm. Siṁhaśaila is a hill with a temple in Vizagapatam.

[7] The position of Râjamahêndra is described in the Kâśîkhaṇḍam as follows: The river (Gôdâvarî) along the western city wall, the temple of Śrî-Mullagûri-Śakti in the N.E. corner, and the temple of Madana-Gôpâla in the fort.

[8] Regarding the Reḍḍis of Koṇḍavîḍu Mr. Sewell says in his Lists of Antiquities, Vol. II. p. 187:— "After the subversion of the Gajapati Râjas of Oraṅgal by the Muḥammadans in A.D. 1323, the Reḍḍi chiefs in different parts of the eastern coast rose to power. Amongst these the Koṇḍavîḍu chiefs were for a century so important that their government rises to the dignity of a kingdom, and their family to that of a dynasty." Then he gives a list of six chiefs with dates which do not tally with those given at p. 53 ff. Kumâragiri-Reḍḍi is said to have ruled from A.D. 1381 to 1395 (p. 187); but on p. 58 two inscriptions referring to him are recorded, which are dated in A.D. 1405 and 1407.

[9] The tract of country from Koṇḍavîḍu in the Kistna district to Kandukûru in the Nellore district is said to be called Pâkanâḍu. Compare above, Vol. III. p. 24

referring to him.[1] He had a son,[2] but it is not known whether the latter inherited the principality.[3]

From the foregoing facts and from the inscriptions noted by Mr. Sewell, it is evident that this dynasty exercised but an ephemeral sovereignty. Doḍḍaya, the fourth son of Perumâḍi, first rose to some importance, probably as an officer of the Koṇḍavîḍu Reḍḍis. Then his third son, Allâḍa, improved that position and transmitted it to his adventurous sons, who established a principality with Râjamahêndra as their capital. But neither Vêma's sons, if any, nor those of any of his brothers seem to have inherited their throne. The Gajapatis of Orissa or the kings of Vijayanagara must have driven the Reḍḍis from Râjamahêndra. The encouragement which these Reḍḍis gave to Telugu poets is one noteworthy fact of their short-lived government, which entitles them to the gratitude of posterity.

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.

The inscription opens with an invocation of the boar incarnation of Vishṇu (verse 1), of Gaṇapati (v. 2), and of the crescent of the moon on the head of Śiva (v. 3). From the mouth, arms, thighs and feet of Vishṇu were produced the four castes. A well-known division of the feet-born (i.e. the Śûdras) was the Paṇṭa-kula[1] (v. 4). To this family belonged prince Doḍḍa (I.) of the [Po]lvôla-gôtra (v. 5). His sons were the princes Annavrôla, Kôṭaya and Alla (v. 6). The youngest of these, Alla (v. 7), married Vêmâmbikâ, the daughter of prince Bhîma of the Chôḍa family (v. 9). Allâḍa (i.e. Alla) had four sons,— Vêma, Vîrabhadra, Doḍḍa (II.) and Anna (v. 10). The eldest of these, Allaya-Vêma (i.e. Vêma, the son of Alla) (v. 11) or Vêma, had for his capital Râjamahêndranagara (v. 12 f.). His younger brother Vîrabhadra was also anointed to the kingdom of Râjamahêndra[nagara] (v. 14). Verse 16 praises Vêma and Vîrabhadra, who were apparently joint rulers. Their younger brother, Doḍḍa (II.), had the surnames Karpûravasantarâya,[2] Saṁgrâmabhîma and Jaganobbagaṇḍa[3] (v. 17).

(V. 22.) "Once, on the auspicious occasion of Ardhôdaya, king Doḍḍa (II.), having worshipped Śiva (and) given away handsome donations on the bank of the Gaṅgâ, also desired to grant agrahâras.

(V. 23.) "In the prosperous Śâka (year) reckoned by the hands (2), the arrows (5), and the Viśvas (13),—i.e. 1352,— in the (cyclic) year Sadharana, in (the month of) Pausha, at the auspicious time named Ardhôdaya, on the bank of the Kauntêyagaṅgâ, king Allaya-Doḍḍa gave to Brâhmaṇas the village named Gumpiṇi, with its cultivators (and) the eight kinds of bhôgas,[4] (to be enjoyed by them) as long as the moon (and) as long as the stars (endure)."

This village he named after himself Allâḍareḍḍidoḍḍavaram (v. 24). Each of the following donees received one share in the agrahâra (v. 25).

Two further shares in the agrahâra were given to the Vishṇu temple called Prasanna-vallabha and to the Śiva temple of Brahmanâgêśvara (v. 85). Finally Doḍḍa (II.) gave to the agrahâra the village of Annavaram for subsistence (grâmagrâsârtham[2]), with the exception (?) of 4½ khâris belonging to Nâranamantrin, the son of Aubhaḷâmâtya (v. 86 f.). The boundaries of the granted village are written in the language of the country (i.e. Telugu) (v. 88).

In the detailed description of the boundary-line of Allâḍareḍḍidoḍḍavaram (ll. 130-179), the following villages are mentioned :— Dêvarapalli, Palavela or Palevela, Mummaḍivaram, Înthakôṭa, Annavarapupâḍu, Kêtarâjupalli and Vedurêśvaram. The northern boundary was the Kauntêya river.[3]

Verse 89 praises the village of Doḍḍavaram on the bank of the Âdikuntâ. In verse 90, king Doḍḍa (II.), (the son) of king Allâḍa, requests future kings to protect the grant. Verses 91-96 are six of the usual imprecatory verses.

[1] The addition of the titles mantrin and amâtya shows that the donee was a niyôgin.

[3] In the Telugu portion (ll. 131, 177 and 178 f.) this river is called Kauntêya. In the Sanskṛit verses occur the forms Kauntêyagaṅgâ (v. 23), Gaṅgâ (v. 22) and Âdikuntâ (v. 89).

No. 10.—PITHAPURAM PLATES OF VIRA-CHODA,

DATED IN HIS TWENTY-THIRD YEAR.

BY H. KRISHNA SASTRI, B.A.

The copper plates which bear this inscription were forwarded to Dr. Hultzsch by the Government of Madras. They were sent by the Raja of Piṭhâpuram to Mr. D. F. Carmichael when he was Chief Secretary, i.e. between the years 1875 and 1878. Mr. Carmichael had lent the plates for examination to Dr. Burnell, who figured the second side of the third plate in his South-Indian Palæography, second edition, Plate xxix.[1]

The plates are nine in number. Each of them bears writing on both sides, except the first and last which are engraved only on their inner sides. They are not of uniform size; but each measures, on the average, 10″ by 5½″. To the proper right of each plate is a hole, ¾″ in diameter.[2] Through these holes is passed a massive ring which is now cut. It is ½″ thick and 7¼″ in diameter. Its ends are secured in a circular seal which measures 3⅛″ in diameter. As may be seen in the collotype No. 2 on the Plate facing p. 104 of Vol. III. above, the seal rests on an expanded lotus flower and bears, in relief on a counter-sunk surface, the legend śrî-Tribhuvan[âṁ]kuśa in Telugu letters. Above the legend it bears a boar which faces the proper left and has an elephant-goad overhead. In front of the boar are a chaurî, a conch, and the moon; and behind it, another chaurî, a svastika, and the sun. Below the legend there is a drum (?), an expanded lotus flower, and apparently a wooden stand for supporting the abhishêka dish.

As observed by Dr. Burnell, the inscription is written in the transitional Telugu alphabet.[3] This is shown e.g. by the two forms, one the earlier and the other later, in which the mû of Dakshiṇâmûrti in ll. 162 and 163 appears. The final m is used in two cases, viz. in ll. 45 and 63; but in all other cases the anusvâra takes the place of final m. The only groups in which the nasal is not represented by anusvâra are ṇṭa, ṇḍa, nta and nda. The difference in the secondary forms of a and â, i and î, u and û, o, ô and au is not kept up throughout. In three cases the long û is marked by â and u, viz. in the û of mûṇḍunu in l. 215 and the û of dûrppuna in ll. 262 and 263. The ê of pyê of bhûmêr=apy=êka° in l. 278 is added to the secondary y. The writing is protected by raised rims and is consequently in a state of perfect preservation, except certain letters written over erasures. The language of the inscription is Sanskṛit poetry (verses 1-35) and Sanskṛit prose (ll. 2-17; 18-31; 68-71; 80-186; 271-277; and 279 to 280). The description of the boundaries (ll. 187-271) is in a mixture of Telugu and Sanskṛit prose. As regards orthographical peculiarities, it may be noted that a consonant, besides being, as usual, doubled after the secondary form of r, is frequently doubled after an anusvâra, as in ll. 2, 21, 23, 28 etc.; that ri is used for ṛi in krita for kṛita (ll. 2 and 20) and Hrishîkêśa for Hṛishîkêśa (l. 115); and that in conjunct consonants the secondary r is not only omitted in several cases, but is mistakenly represented by ê in sâddhê for sârdha (l. 12), by i in niggitya for nirgatya (l. 15), and by â in Vishṇuvaddhânô for Vishṇuvardhanô (l. 22). Stnâna for snâna (l. 20) and sârtvaṁ for sârthaṁ (l. 61) are due to the vernacular pronunciation of Sanskṛit words. The symbol for ṛ is used in the following cases:— (1) in proper names,—Chiṛiyâṇḍân, Eṛasêvaka, Eṛiyapôta, Kaḍalusiṛukûla, Perumbuṛakkaḍal and [2] On the margins of the ring-holes of plates III. a, IV. a and IV. b, and V. a, respectively, the Telugu numerals 3, 4 and 5 are scribbled. The last figure is not so clear as the first two.

Tirukuruṅguḍi; (2) in the endings of Telugu names of towns,— kuṟṟu, paṟṟu and toṟṟa; (3) in the Telugu words,— cheṟuvu (a tank), êṟu (a stream), kaṟṟu (a bank), koṟaḍu (the stump of a tree), krîḍaṟaśulka (?), munnîṟu (the sea), pâṟu (to flow), podaṟu (a bush) and ṟâyi (a stone); and (4) in the Telugu names of trees or plants,— avuṟu, ṟêla, ṟellu, and veḍatuṟu.

The only copper-plate inscription of Vîra-Chôḍa, which has been published before, are the Chellûr plates of his 21st year.[1] Like these plates and other inscriptions of the later Eastern Châlukyas, the subjoined inscription opens with a mythical genealogy of the Châlukya family (ll. 1-18) and a historical account of the Eastern Châlukya kings (l. 19 ff.). This part of the inscription contains nothing new to us, but agrees in every detail with the account given in the Chellûr plates.[2] The reign of Vîra-Chôḍa is described in verses 18-26. Of these verses, 18-21 correspond to verses 18-21 of the Chellûr plates. Verse 20 gives the correct reading of the town where Vîra-Chôḍa was crowned, viz. Jananâthanagarî,[3] which is perhaps a poetical form of Râjamahêndrapura, the modern Râjamahêndri. In verse 21 the Śaka date of Vîra-Chôḍa's accession is expressed by the numerical words śaśi-kh-âmbar-êndu. This various reading shows that Dr. Hultzsch was right in understanding the word khadvaya in śaśi-khadvay-êndu, as the corresponding verse of the Chellûr plates reads, to represent 'two cyphers,' and not a 'cypher' and a 'two,' which would be another possible explanation.[4] Verse 22 states that Vîra-Chôḍa bore the title Samastabhuvanâśraya.[5] Verses 25 and 26 state that his father, the emperor, viz. Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa I., recalled him, but sent him back "for the conquest of the north" in the fifth year, apparently of Vîra-Chôḍa's reign. The recall of Vîra-Chôḍa and his temporary stay with his father may be considered either as a punishment for misbehaviour and rebellion, or he may have been recalled to help his father against a foreign enemy, perhaps against the Pâṇḍya king who, according to the Piṭhâpuram pillar inscription of Pṛithvîśvara, was defeated by Vedura II., a vassal of Vîra-Chôḍa.[6] On the same occasion the Pâṇḍyas may have adopted the title Râjiga-Chôḷa-manôbhaṅga, 'one who frustrated the wishes of Râjiga-Chôḷa,' i.e. of Kulôttuṅga I.[7] Vîra-Chôḍa's subsequent return to Vêṅgî may have been due to political troubles in his province, his absence from which may have contributed to the rise of feudatory families like the Velanâṇḍu and Kôna chiefs, who, later on, obtained possession of the Vêṅgî country.[8]

The object of the inscription is to record that Vîra-Chôḍa granted, at a summer-solstice, the village of Vîrachôḍachaturvêdimaṅgala, which was formed by uniting three different villages, viz. Mâlavelli with its twelve hamlets (pûṇḍi) and Ponnatoṟṟa, both in the district of Prôlunâṇḍu, and Âlami in the district of Uttaravarusa (ll. 68-71 and 182-186). Lines 80-180 contain a list of the donees. The description of the boundaries of the granted village is given in ll. 186-271. Lines 271-274 assign twelve shares in Vîrachôḍachaturvêdimaṅgala for the maintenance of certain village officers. Seven further shares were assigned to the presiding deities in the centre, in the west, and in the other quarters of Vîrachôḍachaturvêdimaṅgala (ll. 274-276). The date of the grant was the twenty-third year of the king's reign (l. 279 f.), i.e. two years after the Chellûr plates. The inscription ends with the statement that the executors (âjñapti) of this edict were the five ministers (pañcha pradhânâḥ), and that the composer was Viddayabhaṭṭa[9] and the engraver Pennâchârya. The very same persons are mentioned at the end of the Chellûr plates.

[2] The only difference, probably due to a mistake of the writer, to be noted in this portion, is the length of the reign assigned to Guṇaga-Vijayâditya. He is said to have ruled forty (chatvârimśat) years (l. 26), instead of forty-four (chatuśchatvârimśat) as in all the other Eastern Châlukya inscriptions.

[9] The name Viddayabhaṭṭa occurs also in the list of donees.

The donees of the grant were no less than five hundred and thirty-six Brâhmaṇas, who are grouped according to their gôtras. Appendices A. and B. contain the names of these Brâhmaṇas, and the names of the various gôtras to which they belonged, in alphabetical order. The titles which are added to their names are :— sahasra, shaḍaṅgavid, bhaṭṭa, Daśapurîbhaṭṭa or Daśapurîyabhaṭṭa,[1] trivêdin or trivêdibhaṭṭa, and sômayâjin or bhaṭṭasômayâjin.[2] Arasabrahmâ and Pârthasârathi are the only two names that occur without any titles. The majority of the names are of Tamil̤ origin. For most of the following explanations of these names I am indebted to Mr. V. Venkayya, M.A. Tillanâyaka and Ambalattâḍi are names of the god Naṭarâja at Chidambaram. The former means 'the lord of Tillai' (Chidambaram), and the latter 'the dancer in the (Golden) Hall.' Kâmakôṭisahasra is called after the goddess Kâmakôṭi at Kâñchî. Taṇiyaperumân stands for Taṇigaiperumâṉ, i.e. the god of Taṇigai, which is another name of Tiruttaṇi near Arkonam. The temple at Tiruttaṇi is dedicated to the god Subrahmaṇya. Kanda is a Tamil̤ (or Prâkṛit) form of the Sanskṛit Skanda. Veṇṇakûta is a modified form of Veṇṇeykkûttaṉ, i.e. Kṛishṇa, who was very fond of butter (veṇṇey). Ulahamuṇḍân means 'one who swallowed the universe.' This may perhaps refer to Kṛishṇa, who, while yet a child, was one day suspected by Yaśôdâ of having swallowed mud. On being asked by her to open his mouth, he did so, and to her astonishment Yaśôdâ found that the whole universe was within him. Karimâkya is probably a mistake for Karimâṇikya, 'the black gem,' a Tamil̤ surname of Kṛishṇa. Kariyakô, 'the black king,' also refers to Kṛishṇa. Chendâmarakaṇṇa has to be dissolved into śen-dâmarai-kaṇṇaṉ, i.e. 'he whose eyes resemble red lotuses.' This is the Tamil̤ equivalent of the Sanskṛit Puṇḍarîkâksha, an epithet of Vishṇu. Palligoṇḍân, 'he who is sleeping,' refers to Śêshaśâyin (Vishṇu). Siṁhapirân is the lion-god Nṛisiṁha. Śîralaṅgô stands for Śîr-iḷaṅ-gô,[3] which means 'the illustrious yuvarâja.' This refers to Lakshmaṇa, who is often called Iḷaiya-Perumâḷ in Vaishṇava works. Kaḍalusiṟukâla refers to Hanumat, who jumped over the sea (kaḍal) as if it were a small canal (śiṟu-kâl). Malahiniya-ninḍrân[4] is properly Malai-kuṉiya-niṉṟâṉ, meaning 'one who stood so that the mountain bent.' This refers to the sage Agastya, who commanded the Vindhya mountain to prostrate itself before him. Tiruvaraṅgamuḍayân and Tirumalayuḍayân are named, respectively, after the gods at Śrîraṅgam and Tirumalai (or Tirupati). Arulâra or Arulâla is derived from the Aruḷâḷa-Perumâḷ temple at Little Kâñchî. In Attiyârâlibhaṭṭa, Attiyâr is perhaps a mistake for Attiyûr, the Tamil̤ name of Little Kâñchî. Chelva stands for Śelva, i.e. Śelvappiḷḷai, the god at Mêlukôṭe in the Mysore State. Tirupoliyaninḍrân means 'one who stood resplendent.' This is the name of the god at Tirukkurugûr, as mentioned in the Guruparamparâprabhâva. Tirivâyikkulamuḍayân is perhaps derived from Tiruvâykkulam, one of the names of the Râjagôpâla-Perumâḷ temple at Maṇimaṅgalam in the Chingleput district.[5] Viṭṭirindân, 'one who is pleased to sit,' is the name of the Vaishṇava temple at Dûśi in the North Arcot district.[6] Tirukuṟuṅguḍibhaṭṭa is called after the village of Kuṟuṅguḍi in the Tinnevelly district. According to the Guruparamparâprabhâva, Yajñamûrti was the name of a certain saṁnyâsin of the Advaita school. It is said of him that he held a disputation with Râmânuja and, being defeated, became a convert to the Vaishṇava faith. Âlidêvayabhaṭṭa is named after Tirumaṅgai-Âḻvâr, who in Tamil̤ works bears the

[1] According to Dr. Fleet (Gupta Inscriptions, p. 79, note 2) Daśapura is the ancient name of the modern Mandasôr; see also above, p. 38.

[2] The title paṇḍita occurs only in the erased word Prabôdhaśivapaṇḍita (l. 177, foot-note), which seems to be the name of a Śaiva (Ârâdhya) Brâhmaṇa.

[3] The name Śiriḷaṅgô occurs in two inscriptions at Maṇimaṅgalam; South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. III. Nos. 35 and 38.

[4] The name Malaigiṉiyaniṉṟâṉ occurs in three inscriptions at Maṇimaṅgalam; ibid. Nos. 35, 39 and 41.

[5] Ibid. Nos. 33 and 36.

[6] See the Government Epigraphist's Annual Report for 1892-93. The name Viṟṟirundâṉ also occurs in an inscription at Maṇimaṅgalam; South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. III. No. 40.

epithet Tiruvâlinâḍaṉ, i.e. 'he who comes from the prosperous Âli country.' Âlavandân and Aḍahiyamaṇavâla are the names of two Vaishṇava Âchâryas. The first of these was the grandson of Nâdamuni,[1] and the second name is a corruption of Aḻagiyamaṇavâḷa or, in Sanskṛit, Ramyajâmâtṛi, i.e. 'the beautiful bridegroom.'[2] Ghṛitâśi is probably a Sanskṛit rendering of Neyyuṇḍa, which forms part of the name of Neyyuṇḍâḻvâr, one of the Vaishṇava Âchâryas mentioned in the Guruparamparâprabhâva. The list of Âchâryas given on pp. 82 and 83 of this work,[3] includes, among many others, the names of Sundarattôḷuḍaiyâṉ, Periyâṇḍâṉ and Chiṟiyâṇḍâṉ, while that of Periyanambi occurs on p. 153. Sundarattôḷuḍaiyâṉ also occurs in the Tirupparaṅkuṉṟam inscription of Sundara-Pâṇḍya[4] and means 'the god who has beautiful arms.' Tirunâṇḍuḍayânbhaṭṭa is called after Tirunâṇḍu, which occurs in Vaishṇava works as a synonym for Vaikuṇṭha, the abode of Vishṇu. The title Naḍavirukkum, which means 'one who is in the middle,' 'an arbitrator' (madhyastha), occurs in l. 177 of the subjoined inscription and is found also in the large Leyden grant, l. 138. Chîḍa in Chîḍabhaṭṭa is the same as Śîḍaṉ, a Tamiḻ form of śishya, 'a pupil.' Têvaḍi means 'the feet (i.e. the servant) of god.' Ârâmudu means 'fresh nectar;' Manattukkiniyân means 'one who is pleasing to the mind;' and Âyiraṁjôti is 'the thousand-rayed,' i.e. 'the sun.' Two of the Maṇimaṅgalam inscriptions[5] mention the names Dôṇaya and Dôṇaiya; the similar name Dônaya occurs repeatedly among the donees. Such an abundance of Tamiḻ names in the list of donees of Vîrachôḍachaturvêdimaṅgala leads one to infer that a large immigration or importation of Tamiḻ Brâhmaṇas to the north must have taken place during the reign of Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa I. The large proportion of Vaishṇava names among the donees further suggests that about this time the Râmânuja faith counted many devotees, who adopted as their names the Tamiḻ equivalents of Sanskṛit names, which occur in the sacred works of Vaishṇavas.[6] Three of the donees bear the title Brahmamahârâja, which must have been an invention of the Chôḷa king Râjarâja I. in whose inscriptions it is first found.[7] Of these three donees one was called Kulôttuṅgachôḍabrahmamahârâja after the reigning sovereign. The second was a military officer (sênâpati) and had the title Râjarâjabrahmamahârâja, which, as we know from the Chellûr plates, had been conferred on a certain Pôtana. The third had the name Kumâranârâyaṇabrahmamahârâja, which was perhaps derived from a surname of Vîra-Chôḍa himself.

The boundaries of Vîrachôḍachaturvêdimaṅgala were: in the south, Ponnavâḍa and Mallavrôlu; in the west, Kolliprôlu and Chembrôlu; in the north, Polakumbaṟṟa, Ḍaṅkalapûṇḍi and Beṇḍapûṇḍi; and in the east, the sea (ll. 186-188). With line 188 begins a second, much more detailed description of the boundary-line of the granted village. This passage enumerates various canals, tanks, ponds, hamlets, hills, boulders, pieces of waste-land and high ground, foot-paths, ant-hills, valleys etc. It also includes the names of a number of trees, an alphabetical list of which is given in Appendix C. Of the villages that are mentioned

[1] [An abbreviated form of this name is Nâtha in Sanskṛit, as will be seen from the expression sâdhyabhaktinishṭhâ Nâṭhâdayaḥ, which occurs on p. 36 of the Yatîndramatadîpikâ of Śrînivâsadâsa, Telugu edition, Madras, 1868. In his remarks on this work (Report on the Search for Sanskṛit Manuscripts for the year 1883-84, p. 70, No. 154), Dr. Bhandarkar gives a list of the Vaishṇava Âchâryas mentioned at the beginning of the Yatîndramatadîpikâ. In this list occurs Śrîparâṅkuśanâtha as the name of one of the Âchâryas. But the term Śrîparâṅkuśanâtha evidently denotes two individuals, Śrîparâṅkuśa and Nâtha, the former being the name of Nammâḻvâr, alias Śaṭhâri or, in Tamiḻ, Śaḍagôpa. The latter, Nâtha, refers to Nâdamuni.—V.V.]

[2] This is the name given to Râma in Vaishṇava works.

[6] The Nâlâyiraprabandham, which is called the "Drâviḍa-Vêda," is a collection of Tamiḻ poems written by the Âḻvârs. The Râmânuja Vaishṇavas, especially those of the Teṅgalai sect, have a greater regard for Tamiḻ which is the language of their sacred texts, than for Sanskṛit, just as the Mâdhva Vaishṇavas prefer the Kannaḍa language.

in the grant, the following admit of identification. One of the two villages[1] which formed the southern boundary of Vîrachôḍachaturvêdimaṅgala, Ponnavâḍa, may be identified with Ponnada which is found to the east of Piṭhâpuram on the Madras Survey Map of the Piṭhâpuram division. The western boundaries, Kolliprôlu and Chembrôlu, are found on the same map as Gollaprol and Chebrolu, on the high-road from Piṭhâpuram to Kattipudi. Beṇḍapûṇḍi, one of the northern boundaries, is Bendapudi, on the road to Vizagapatam. Two other villages between which the northern boundary passed, Siṅgavikrama and Doṇṭeṅgi (l. 258), are found on the map as Srungarrukham and Tondangi between Bendapudi and the sea. Among the boundaries of Navavâḍa, a hamlet of Vîrachôḍachaturvêdimaṅgala (l. 266), we find Beṇḍapûṇḍi (the modern Bendapudi) and Duggavâḍa. This village is identical with the modern Durgada, which is found on the map between Bendapudi and Chebrolu. Chembrôlu, the modern Chebrolu, belonged to the district of Bottepinâṇḍu (l. 209).[2] The district of Prôlunâṇḍu, in which Mâlavelli and Ponnatoṟṟa were situated (ll. 69 and 182), is already known from two inscriptions in the Kuntîmâdhava temple at Piṭhâpuram, and included also Navakhaṇḍavâḍa (near Piṭhâpuram) and Sarpavaram.[3]

[1] According to the Telugu portion (l. 204) these two villages belonged to the district of Uttaravarusa, in which, according to line 183, Âlami, one of the three components of Vîrachôḍachaturvêdimaṅgala, was situated.

ABRIDGED TRANSLATION.

(Verse 1.) The glorious Hari (Vishṇu), the first of the gods, produced from the lotus of his navel Viriñchi (Brahmâ), in order to create these three worlds. From him was born, it is said, the great sage Atri; (and) from Atri the Moon, who has taken up his abode on the crest of Mahêśvara (Śiva).

[Lines 2-60, except verse 15 which is translated below, agree with the Chellûr plates of Vîra-Chôḍa.]

(V. 15.) " O brave (son) ! Take up the burden of the Vêṅgî country which is hereditary in (our) family. Powerful men, though young, are verily fit for their duties."[1]

(V. 22.)[2] Protecting a crore of the poor by granting (them) the objects of (their) desires; those in fear by (his) arm which dispelled the fears of refugees; and the subjects by adhering to his duty, he bears the name Samastabhuvanâśraya (i.e. the refuge of the whole world), which is full of significance.

(V. 23.) Rising from the earth, attaining to great heights, spreading over all quarters, transcending all heavens and reaching still higher worlds, his fame, which destroys (all) evils, far excels the Gaṅgâ, which drops from heaven, falls upon this earth (and) takes a still more downward course.[3]

(V. 24.) The king of serpents (Śêsha), having abandoned the toils of the burden of the earth, protects the lower world undisturbed; the whole earth, too, avoiding other, bad rulers, is freed from agitation; and the hosts of gods enjoy the numerous sacrifices of the prosperous twice-born. Thus these three worlds are verily in great glee while this (king) is bearing the burden of the earth.

(V. 25.) While ruling the earth unopposed, he was called (back) by (his) father, the emperor, (who was) desirous of gazing on the beauty of (his) body which was blooming with youth.

(V. 26.) Looking at him, the youth, who, like the (waxing) moon, was day by day acquiring new splendour which gave delight to the eyes, the lord of kings could never satisfy his eyes, but sent (his) son back in the fifth year, in order to conquer the north.

(L. 68.) This asylum of the whole world, the glorious Vishṇuvardhana mahârâjâdhirâja, râjaparamêśvara, paramabhaṭṭâraka, the most pious one, the glorious Vîra-Chôḍadêva, having called together all householders, (viz.) the Râshṭrakûṭas etc. inhabiting the district of Prôlunâṇḍu, thus issues his commands in the presence of the ministers, the family priest, the commander of the army, the heir-apparent and the door-keepers :—

[Vv. 27-32 are in praise of the Brâhmaṇa caste.]

[1] This verse follows verse 25 of the Chellûr plates. In these plates it is omitted by the engraver, though required by the context.

[2] This verse follows verse 21 of the Chellûr plates.

[3] The attributes given to the fame and to the Gaṅgâ admit of a second explanation, suggesting that the former went to heaven and the latter to hell.

[4] The names of 8 donees have been erased, viz. of [Ma]timânbhaṭṭa and Mêḍiyabhaṭṭa in l. 99; of Aḍahiyânbhaṭṭa in l. 111; of Śrî-Vâsudêvabhaṭṭa and Śrî [Rama]ṇḍa[ya*]bhaṭṭa in l. 123; of Âlavandânbhaṭṭa in l. 154; of Śrî-Ra[ṅga]nâthabhaṭṭa in l. 166; and of Prabôdhaśivapaṇḍita in l. 177. On the other hand the following 6 donees received 8 extra shares :— Abhirâmamûrti who was the officiating priest (purôhita) of the king (l. 80),— 1 extra share; Niravadyabhaṭṭa who performed the Vâjapêya sacrifice (ll. 148-149),— 1 extra share; Dâmôdarabhaṭṭa (l. 172), — 1 extra share; Râjarâjabrahmamahârâja who was the commander of the forces (sênâpati) (ll. 175-176),— 3 extra shares; Kumâranârâyaṇabrahmamahârâja (l. 176),— 1 extra share; and Prabôdhaśivapaṇḍita (l. 177),— 1 extra share. The totals of the donees and of the shares, as stated in ll. 181-182 of the text (536 and 544), may be arrived at by adding the 8 erased names to 528 which is the number of donees actually named in the plates, and by adding 8 extra shares to the single shares of the 536 donees.

(L. 180.) "Be it known to you that,—having assigned five hundred and forty-four shares —(some getting) less and (some getting) more—to these (Brâhmaṇas), five hundred and thirty-six in number, who are engaged in performing the six duties; having united three villages, viz. the village named Mâlavelli with its twelve hamlets (pûṇḍi) and the village named Ponnatoṟṟa, (both) in your district, and the village named Âlami in the Uttaravarusa district; having converted (these three villages) into a well-established agrahâra, by name the prosperous Vîrachôḍachaturvêdimaṅgala; having fixed an annual assessment of one and a half nishka on each of these shares; and having remitted the siddhâya, avêṇḍâya, abhinava and other (revenue) besides this (assessment), (the tax) called krîḍaraśulka, and what is due to the king from merchants and well-to-do people,—we have given (the said village), with exemption from all taxes, with libations of water, to last as long as the moon and the sun, on the occasion of the summer solstice.

(L. 186.) "The boundary villages of this (village are):—In the south Ponnavâḍa and Mallavrôlu (form) the boundary; in the west Kolliprôlu and Chembrôlu (form) the boundary; (and) in the north Polakumbaṟṟa, Ḍaṅkalapûṇḍi and Beṇḍapûṇḍi (form) the boundaries."

[Ll. 188-266 contain a more detailed description of the boundary-line of the granted village. In this passage the following villages are mentioned besides those already referred to in ll. 186-188:— Liṅgamakuṟṟu, Puluvaṅguṟṟu, Gârapaṟṟu, Mêḍapaṟṟu, Dâreki, Jammapaṟṟu, Bhîmâvura, Kappanipaṟṟu, Siṅgavikrama and Doṇṭeṅgi. The boundary in the east was the sea (l. 188).]

[Ll. 266-271 contain a description of the boundaries of Navavâḍa, a hamlet (pûṇḍi) of Vîrachôḍachaturvêdimaṅgala. In this passage the villages of Beṇḍapûṇḍi, Duggavâḍa, Nâgada and Trummiki are mentioned.]

(L. 271.) "In this (village) one share (was assigned) for the maintenance of one who expounds grammar; two to the expounder of Mîmâṁsâ; one to the expounder of Vêdânta; one to the teacher of the Ṛigvêda; one to the teacher of the Yajurvêda; one to the teacher of the singing of the Sâmans; one to the expounder of Rûpâvatâra (?); one to him who teaches the reciting of the Purâṇas; one to the physician; one to the barber; one to the poison-doctor; (and) one to the astrologer. These are the twelve shares for the maintenance (of holders) of offices. Two shares (were assigned) to the god Vishṇu who resides in the centre of the village; two (shares) also (to Vishṇu) who resides on the western side (of the village); two (shares) to Śrî-Kailâsadêva; (and) one (share) to the other local deities. These (are) the seven shares of gods."

[Ll. 276-279 contain the usual imprecations.]

(L. 279.) The executors (âjñapti) of this edict (śâsana), which was given in the twenty-third year of the years of the glorious and victorious reign, (were) the five ministers (pradhâna). The author of the poetry (was) Viddayabhaṭṭa; the writer (was) Pennâchârya.

[3] Vanni in Tamiḻ and banni in Kanarese mean the same as the Sanskrit śamî,—Prosopis spicigera.

No. 11.— MAUNGGUN GOLD PLATES.

BY MAUNG TUN NYEIN, HONORARY ARCHÆOLOGICAL OFFICER, BURMA.

These two gold plates were found in a brick last year by some people who were digging foundations for a new pagoda at Maunggun village near Hmawza in the Prome district. They were sent by Sir Frederic Fryer, the Lieutenant-Governor of Burma, to Dr. Hultzsch for transmission to the British Museum, London.

Each of the two plates bears three lines of writing and is inscribed on one side only. The letters show through on the reverse. The weight of the first plate is 110 grains, and that of the second 148 grains. The inscriptions consist of quotations from the Buddhist scriptures. They are in the Pâli language and are written in characters which, it is believed, were in vogue in the first century A.D. when the kingdom of Prome (Sirikhettarâ) was in the zenith of its power. The alphabet corresponds to a large extent with that used in the inscriptions at Pagan of the fourth and fifth centuries, and several of the letters also resemble those of the South-Indian class of alphabets. It is probable that the Burmese written language was mainly derived from India, whence colonists settled in Prome which was once a sea-port town.

First Plate.

Whatever laws are produced from cause, the cause of these the Tathâgata has expounded, as well as the cessation of both the cause and the effect. This is the teaching of the great ascetic.

(He has also explained) the four means of obtaining supernatural power (iddhipâda); the four kinds of right exertion (sammappadhâna); the four kinds of earnest meditation (satipaṭṭhâna); the four sublime truths (ariyasachcha); the four subjects of fearlessness (vesârajja);

the five moral qualities (indriya); the five kinds of vision (chakkhu); the six kinds of uncommon wisdom (asâdhâraṇa [ñâṇa]); the seven requisites for attaining supreme knowledge (bojjhaṅga); the sublime eightfold path; the nine transcendent conditions (lokuttarâ dhammâ); the ten forces (bala); the fourteen requisites for the attainment of Buddhahood; the eighteen attributes of a Buddha.

Second Plate.

Whatever laws are produced from cause, the cause of these the Tathâgata has expounded, as well as the cessation of both the cause and the effect. This is the teaching of the great ascetic.

For these reasons (viz. previously acquired virtues) the Blessed one (Buddha) is called the Venerable one, the truly and perfectly enlightened Being, one endowed with knowledge and conduct, the Happy one, one knowing the universe, the Preeminent one, the Bridler of men's wayward passions, the Master of gods and men, and the blessed Buddha.

The Blessed one has well expounded his law, whose benefits are evident to the eye, which is advantageous at all times and seasons, which can boldly invite criticism, which can, if closely observed, lead up to Nirvâṇa, and with whose details, severally, the wise should be acquainted.

No. 12.— AHMADABAD INSCRIPTION OF VISALADEVA; [VIKRAMA-]SAMVAT 1308.

BY REV. J. E. ABBOTT, B.A.

This inscription is on a pillar in the mosque of Aḥmad Shâh I. (A.D. 1411-1443), in the Bhadr at Aḥmadâbâd. I edit it for the first time. The inscribed pillar is to the right of the pulpit and faces the latticed gallery. The letters are on the whole well preserved, though a few are damaged. The inscription is complete, with the exception of the beginning and end of the first line, which contain a part of the date. The name of the month is therefore lost. The language is Sanskṛit, but influenced by Gujarâtî, forming a mixed language common at that period. The form of the letters is such as is found in the inscriptions of Vîsaladêva and other Chaulukya kings of that period.

The inscription belongs to the reign of Vîsaladêva and is dated in [Vikrama-]Saṁvat 1308 (about A.D. 1251), on the 11th day of a month the name of which is broken away, on a Sunday. It records the gift of a trellis window or screen (jâlî) in the temple of Uttarêśvara at Mâhiṁsaka, by one Pêthaḍa, a servant of Sôḍhaladêvî.

The question of special interest is the identification of Mâhiṁsaka, the place in which the Hindû temple stood, which Aḥmad Shâh used as material for his mosque.[1] If it is to be identified with some place distant from Aḥmadâbâd, there are three places of similar name, which might be derived from Mâhiṁsaka, viz. Mânsâ and Mêsânâ to the north of Aḥmadâbâd, and Mahisâ in the Thasra tâluka of the Kaira collectorate;[2] but none of these places contains ruins that suggest of their having been used by Aḥmad Shâh as the quarry for his mosque. The usual custom of the Muḥammadan conquerors was that of desecrating Hindû temples and modifying them on their own site to suit their purposes as mosques. If such were the case

[1] For a description of this mosque see the Bombay Gazetteer for Ahmadabad, p. 275; Hope's Architecture of Ahmadabad; and Arch. Survey Reports for 1874-75, p. 4 f.

[2] I am indebted for information regarding Mânsâ, Mêsânâ and Mahisâ to Mr. F. S. P. Lely, who has kindly had inquiries made regarding these places, and to Lieutenant Carter, who has personally visited the ruins of Mahisâ, here, then Mâhiṁsaka would be the name of a village on the site of Aḥmadâbâd, whose name has been otherwise lost.

No. 13.— FOUR INSCRIPTIONS OF KULOTTUNGA-CHOLA.

BY E. HULTZSCH, PH.D.

A.— Undated inscription at Chidambaram.[7]

This Grantha inscription has been already published in South-Indian Inscriptions, Vol. I. p. 168 f. As stated on a subsequent occasion,[8] the conquests recorded in it prove that it was incised in the time of Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa I., who ascended the throne in A.D. 1070.[9] I now subjoin an improved reading and translation of it.

TRANSLATION.

Hail! Prosperity! (Verse 1.) Having subdued the five Pâṇḍyas by an army which discharged numerous arrows, having burnt like straw the fort of Kôṭṭâra,[3] just as (Arjuna) the son of Pâṇḍu (had burnt) the Khâṇḍava (forest), (and) having crushed that extremely dense army of the Kêraḷas,— that glorious Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa, who resembles a lion in majesty (and) Śakra (Indra) in valour, placed on the shore of the ocean a pillar (commemorative of his) conquest of the three worlds.

(V. 2.) Having subdued the five Pâṇḍyas by masses of powerful armies, that glorious[4] Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa, who has scattered (his) enemies (and) whose fame is spontaneously sung on the further shore of the ocean by the young women of the Persians (Pârasi), duly placed on the holy peak of the Sahyâdri (mountain) a pillar (which commemorates his) conquest of the three worlds (and) before which the crowd of kings is trembling.

B.—Inscription of the 39th year at Tiruveṇkâḍu.[5]

This inscription is engraved on the south wall of the shrine in the Śvêtâraṇyêśvara temple at Tiruveṇkâḍu in the Tanjore district. It is written in the Grantha alphabet and consists of a single Sanskrit verse in the Sragdharâ metre. It records the gift of a lamp to the temple of Śiva at Śvêtâraṇya[6] in the 39th year of Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa,— perhaps the first king of this name.

C.—Inscription of the 44th year at Chidambaram.[1]

This inscription is engraved on the outside of the north wall of the innermost prâkâra of the Naṭarâja temple at Chidambaram. That portion of it which contains the date has been published before in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. XXIII. p. 297 f. and above, Vol. IV. p. 70. The alphabet and language are Tamiḻ. Lines 1-5 and 9-14 are in prose, and lines 5-9 contain one verse.

The inscription is dated in the 44th year of Jayadhara (l. 5 f.). From the Kaliṅgattu-Paraṇi we know that this was a surname of Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa I.,[2] to whose reign the present record must be assigned accordingly. Professor Kielhorn has calculated the details of the date (l. 6 f.) and has found that it corresponds to Friday, the 13th March A.D. 1114.[3]

The first portion of the inscription records donations made to the temple at Chidambaram (Tillai, ll. 7 and 9, or Tiruchchiṟṟambalam, l. 12) by Kundavai Âḻvâr, (the daughter of) Râjarâja and younger sister of Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa. She presented the god with a golden vessel (l. 3) and a mirror (l. 10) and covered (the roof of) the shrine with gold (l. 8). The second portion (ll. 10-14) states that a stone which the king of Kambôja had given to Râjêndra-Chôḷa was, by order of the latter, inserted into the wall of a hall in front of the shrine.

Of the names mentioned in the preceding paragraph, Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa (l. 1 f.) and Râjêndra-Chôḷa (ll. 10 and 11) refer to the reigning king Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa I., who is known to have originally borne the name Râjêndra-Chôḷa (II.) and to have subsequently assumed the name Kulôttuṅga.[4] Râjarâja, the father of Kulôttuṅga's younger sister Kundavai (ll. 2 and 9), is identical with the Eastern Châlukya king Râjarâja I. (A.D. 1022-1063).[5]

[5] As I have stated in the Ind. Ant. Vol. XXIII. p. 298, note 13, Kundavai, the elder sister of the Chôḷa king Râjarâja I., and his daughter Kûndavâ must be distinguished from the present Kundavai. Râjarâja, Râjêndra and Kundavai evidently were favourite names with the Chôḷa dynasty.

(L. 10.) A stone was exhibited by the Kâmbôja king before the glorious Râjêndra-Chôḷadêva. This (stone) was, by order of the lord Râjêndra-Chôḷadêva, placed in front of the shrine of the god who is the lord of Tiruchchirrambalam. This stone was placed in the upper front row of stones of the hall opposite the shrine.

D.— Inscription of the 30th year at Tiruvorriyûr.[4]

This Grantha inscription is engraved on the north wall of the first prâkâra of the Âdhipurîśvara temple at Tiruvorriyûr near Madras. It consists of a single Sanskrit verse in the Vasantatilakâ metre and records the gift of a lamp to the temple of Śiva at Âdhipura, i.e. Tiruvorriyûr,[5] in the 30th year of Jayadhara. On page 105 above it has been already stated that this was a surname of Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa I.

No. 14.—DIBBIDA PLATES OF ARJUNA OF THE MATSYA FAMILY; SAKA-SAMVAT 1191.

By F. Kielhorn, Ph.D., LL.D., C.I.E.; Göttingen.

These plates were received by Dr. Hultzsch, in October 1897, from the Collector of the Vizagapatam district, and are deposited now in the Madras Museum. They were found in the village of Dibbida Agrahâram,[1] in the Vîravilli tâluka of the Vizagapatam district. I edit the inscription which they contain from an excellent impression, supplied to me by Dr. Hultzsch.

[1] Instead of kuḍi-nar-kal, 'the true standard of the city,' the Tañjâvûr inscriptions (South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. II. No. 6, paragraph 1; No. 7, 1; and No. 8, 1 and 8) have kuḍiñai-kal, 'the standard of the city.'

[2] This symbol appears to denote the weight of one kalañju.

[3] I.e. a gold coin named after, or bearing the name of, Madhurântaka. This was the name of the son of the Chôḷa king Gaṇḍarâditya and was also a surname of Râjêndra-Chôḷa I.; see above, Vol. IV. p. 331.

These are five copper-plates, the first of which is inscribed on one side only, and each of which measures about $9\frac{1}{8}''$ broad by $3\frac{5}{8}''$ high. They are numbered in Telugu figures, which are engraved near the proper right margin of the second side of each plate.[2] The plates have slightly raised rims, and, with the exception of the fifth plate which is broken in three pieces and of which a small marginal piece is missing, they are well preserved, so that the writing on them nearly throughout may be read with absolute certainty. The plates are strung on a ring which had not been cut when they were received by Dr. Hultzsch. This ring is about $3\frac{3}{4}''$ in diameter and $\frac{1}{4}''$ thick, and has its ends secured in a seal which bears two fishes, in relief, on an elliptical surface of about $1''$ by $\frac{7}{8}''$.— Though not very uniform, the writing, on the whole, is well engraved. The characters are intermediate between those of the latest Eastern Châlukya inscriptions[3] and the Telugu characters, properly so called. On the forms of individual letters only few remarks are necessary. The signs for th and dh throughout are open at the top (e.g. in âvasatha, l. 36, and raṁdhra, l. 31), and the sign for bh is generally open at the bottom (e.g. in vallabha, l. 1). The sign for ḍ (e.g. in Pâṁḍava, l. 30, and Paragaṁḍḍa, l. 25) has no top-stroke (talakaṭṭu) and therefore closely resembles the ḻ of the Eastern Châlukya inscriptions; on the other hand, a top-stroke is employed in the sign for ḻ (in ajîgaḻan=, l. 12, bhiḻḻa-taruḥ, l. 59, and -tâḻaḥ, l. 61), the right top of which, besides, is formed into a loop.[4] For the initial ṛi we have an unusual (perhaps incorrect) form in Ṛigvêdâdhyâ- at the end of line 39; and the signs for the medial i and î are hardly ever, if at all, properly distinguished. The size of the letters varies between about $\frac{7}{16}''$ and $\frac{3}{16}''$.— The language is Sanskṛit,[5] but the description of the boundaries in lines 52-64 contains some Telugu words. Up to line 36 the inscription is in verse, and five more verses occur in lines 65-73. In respect of orthography, the chief points to be noted are that consonants (especially g, ḍ, t, b and bh, but also ch, j, ṭ, d, dh, p and v), which follow upon an anusvâra, are frequently doubled; and that, when such is the case, bh and dh are doubled by prefixing to them the same aspirated letters,[6] except in the word vasuṁddharâṁ in line 68. Before r, t is doubled in muni-ttridaśa-, l. 5; and y is doubled after î in tṛitîyyâ, l. 32, and pâlanîyyaḥ, l. 71. Besides, instead of ṇṇ we have ṇn in avatîrṇnas, l. 6, and nn in Jâtûkarnna-, l. 41.

The inscription records (in vv. 20, 21 and 26) that on Saturday, the Akshaya-tṛitîyâ of the month Vaiśâkha of the Śaka year counted by the moon (1), the apertures of the body (9), the earth (1) and the moon (1), i.e. of Śaka-Saṁvat 1191, the chief Arjuna of the Matsya family, for the spiritual welfare of his father Jayanta, granted to certain Brâhmaṇas, as an agrahâra, the village of Drubbidi, which he called Jayanta-Nârâyaṇa after his father. The full genealogy of the donor (in vv. 1-19) is as follows :—

From the lotus on Vishṇu's navel sprang Brahman, from him Atri, and from him Kaśyapa. In his lineage was the sage Nâraṅga, who one day, while wandering in the sky, saw the river Matsyâ which rises on the Mukunda mountain, descended to its banks, and engaged there in austere penance. To disturb the sage, the frightened Indra sent the Apsaras Mañjughôshâ. By the sage's curse she was changed into a fish (matsyâ), swallowed the semen which the ascetic had thrown into the water, and in due course gave birth to a son who was called Satyamârtaṇḍa (vv. 1-8). When Jayatsêna, the lord of Utkala,[1] came to know this boy, he gave to him in marriage his daughter Prabhâvatî, and appointed him to rule over the Oḍḍavâḍi[2] country (vv. 9 and 10). In the Matsya family, founded by Satyamârtaṇḍa, there was a long line of chiefs (râjan, nṛipa, bhûpa, etc.), whose names (from vv. 11-19) are given here in a tabular statement.

[4] In ajîgaḻan=, l. 12, the loop does not show on the front of the impression, but is clearly visible on the back of it.

[5] In the word ajîgaḻat, mentioned in the preceding note, the writer has used the aorist of the causal, instead of a past tense of the primitive verb.

[1] I.e. Orissa.

[2] Oḍḍa is one of the names of Orissa; see South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 97, and above, Vol. IV. p. 315.

[3] Ârya is not numbered because apparently he was not a ruling chief.

Of the village granted, two shares were set aside for the gods Hari and Hara[1] (l. 51) while one share was assigned to each of the following twenty Brâhmaṇas (ll. 37-51): The Purôhita (or family priest of the chief) Vâmadêva, a Sôma-yâga sacrificer, of the Bhâradvâja gôtra; the teachers of the Ṛigvêda Mêrubrahman and Viddana of the Harita gôtra, Nâmana of the Kauṇḍinya gôtra, Vennakûta of the Śâlâvata gôtra, Pôtaśarman of the Vâdhûla gôtra, Rêmana of the Mudgala gôtra, and Dommana of the Bhâradvâja gôtra; the students of the Ṛigvêda Vennakûta of the Harita gôtra, Mânaśarman of the Śâlâvata (?) gôtra, and Yajñamûrtyârya of the Kuṇḍina (Kauṇḍinya) gôtra; the teachers of the Yajurvêda Akoṇḍi of the Vatsa gôtra, Bhîmêśvarârya of the Bhâradvâja gôtra, Śṛiraṅgârya of the Kauṇḍinya gôtra; Vîrabhadrêśvarârya of the Gautama gôtra, and Lôkanâtha of the Kâśyapa gôtra; the students of the Yajurvêda Râghava of the Mudgala gôtra and Purushôttamaśarman of the Gautama gôtra; the student of the Kâṇva śâkhâ (of the Yajurvêda) Mâdhavârya of the Jâtûkarṇa gôtra; and the student of the Śrî-bhâgavata (Purâṇa) Mâṅkanârya of the Harita gôtra. The grant made in favour of these donees included the services or taxes,[2] due from the village artisans, viz. the carpenter, goldsmith, barber (?), blacksmith, potter and sesamum-grinder (v. 22); but apparently[3] was exclusive of eight drôṇas[4] of land which had been previously given by the chief to the minister Peddana (ll. 66 and 67).

The boundaries of the village were (ll. 52-64): 'On the east, a babûl tree on the northern side of the embankment of the tank of Mâṅki-Nâyaka;[5] to the south-east of this, a house;[6] thence (the village of) Kâkatikhaṇḍi; thence the embankment east of a nimba tree; thence the embankment of (the) Eḍrabanda (tank); thence an ant-hill; (and) thence the northern corner of the embankment of the tank of the low-caste people. On the south-east of the village, a fixed[7] stone; to the west of this, the tamarind trees of Tûr[ûru]; (and) thence the bricks of a temple. On the south-west of the village, a garlic field on the west of a poison-tree; thence a house of bricks; thence the space between a wood-apple tree and a poison-tree; thence a bhiḻḻa tree; thence the tamarind trees of Anupumâlî; thence a green piece of land to the south of Boḍḍapâḍu; thence an ant-hill; thence three tamarind trees; thence a young palmyra tree (and) thence a stone on an ant-hill. On the north-west of the village, a . . . . . stone on the top of a hill; on the east of this, a grinding-stone; thence a shed and a rock; thence a svarṇapushpî tree; thence a kshîra-tree; thence a . . . . . ant-hill; thence an old fixed stone; (and) thence an ant-hill. On the north-east of the village, a fixed large stone.'

Lines 67-72 of the inscription contain three of the ordinary imprecatory verses.

Regarding the chiefs mentioned in this inscription I have not obtained any information from other sources.[8] Nor am I able to identify any of the localities, except the village of Drubbidi itself, which must be the Dibbida Agrahâram where the plates were found.

The date of the grant regularly corresponds, for Śaka-Saṁvat 1191 expired, to Saturday, the 6th April A.D. 1269. On this day the third tithi of the bright half of Vaiśâkha ended 6 h. 6 m. after mean sunrise, and the day therefore was the proper day for the Akshaya-tṛitîyâ festival.[9]

[3] The passage in which this statement occurs is mutilated in the original.

[5] I suspect that this is another name of the chief who above, in the genealogical table, is called Mâṅkâditya.

[6] Dhishṇi is perhaps the same as dhishṇya.

[7] Khâta seems to be used in the sense of nikhâta.

[8] A Matsya family apparently is mentioned in line 19 of the Chîpurupalle (in the Vizagapatam district) plates of the Eastern Chalukya Vishṇuvardhana I. (of A.D. 632); see Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 17.— According to Mr. Sewell's Lists of Antiquities Vol. I. p. 15. Sir W. Elliot's collection contains some inscriptions of a 'Mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Mâṅkâditya Mahârâja,' from Muddurru in the Vîravilli tâluka.

No. 15.— THREE COPPER-PLATE INSCRIPTIONS OF GOVINDACHANDRA OF KANAUJ.

BY F. KIELHORN, PH.D., LL.D., C.I.E.; GÖTTINGEN.

The originals of these inscriptions are now in the Lucknow Museum. My account of them is based on impressions, kindly furnished to me by Dr. Führer,[11] who also has informed me where and when the original plates were found.[12] I have treated of them in the same manner as of the Kamauli plates of Gôvindachandra, above, Vol. IV. p. 101 ff.

[1] Read -nairṛityâṁ. [2] The reading may possibly be bhâla-.
[3] The ordinary Sanskṛit spelling would be maṇḍapa-.
[4] Metre: Ślôka (Anushṭubh).— Compare Ind. Ant. Vol. XIV. p. 58, ll. 51-54.
[5] With the exception of part of the sign for au, the letters in these brackets are broken away.
[6] The aksharas in these brackets, which I have conjecturally supplied, are entirely broken away.
[7] Here about three aksharas are broken away. [8] Metre of verses 23-26: Ślôka (Anushṭubh).
[9] The word in these brackets is entirely broken away.
[10] Originally paraddatt- was engraved.
[11] Of the inscription C. an impression was given to me some years ago by Dr. Burgess.
[12] See also Dr. Führer's Monum. Antiquities and Inscriptions in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, pp. 185 and 263.

SCALE TWO-THIRDS.

A.—PÂLÎ PLATES OF GÔVINDACHANDRA AND HIS MOTHER RÂLHANADÊVÎ, OF [VIKRAMA-]SAṀVAT 1189.

These plates were found at the village of Pâlî in the Dhuriâpâr pargaṇa of the Bânsgâon tahsîl of the Gôrâkhpur district of the North-Western Provinces, and were in January 1895 presented to the Lucknow Museum by the Collector, Dr. Hoey, who had obtained them through Pirthipal Rai, the Zamîndâr. They are two in number, each of which measures about 1′ 1⅛″ broad by 10″ high, and is inscribed on one side only. The plates have raised rims, and the writing, in consequence, is in an excellent state of preservation throughout. There is a ring-hole in the centre of the lower part of the first plate and a corresponding hole in the centre of the upper part of the second plate, but the ring on which the plates were strung is missing. With the plates, however, is preserved a circular seal, about 2¼″ in diameter, which bears in high relief, across the centre, the legend ś[rî]mad-G[ô]vindachandradêva*, in Nâgarî letters about 9/16″ high; above the legend, the figure of a Garuḍa, squatting down and facing to the proper right; and below the legend, a conch-shell.— Each plate contains 17 lines of well executed writing. The size of the letters is about ⅜.″ The characters are Nâgarî, and the language is Sanskṛit. As regards orthography, the letter b is everywhere denoted by the sign for v; the dental sibilant is frequently employed instead of the palatal, and the palatal occasionally instead of the dental; and j is used instead of y in the word jûti, l. 20.

The inscription is one of the Paramabhaṭṭâraka Mahârâjâdhirâja Paramêśvara Gôvindachandradêva. The king records in it that, after bathing in the Satî at the ghaṭṭa of the god Svapnêśvara, on the occasion of the Akshaya-tṛitîyâ festival in the bright half of the month Vaiśâkha, he made over to his mother, the Mahârâjñî Râlhaṇadêvî,[1] ten nâlukas (of land) in the village of Guduvî, in the Gôyara paṭṭalâ of the Ôṇavala pathaka, as a gift for the Ṭhakkura Jayapâlaśarman, son of the Ṭhakkura Indrâditya and son's son of the Ṭhakkura Pêvalaha, a Brâhmaṇ of the Mudgala gôtra, whose three pravaras were Maudgalya, Âṅgirasa and Bhârmyaśva.— The taxes specially mentioned (in line 26) as due to the donee are the bhâgabhôgakara and pravaṇikara. In line 34 the inscription is dated, in figures only, on Saturday, the 8th of the dark half of Jyaishṭha of the year 1189. The grant was written by the Ṭhakkura Vishṇu.

The date in line 34 regularly corresponds, for the Kârttikâdi Vikrama-Saṁvat 1189 expired and the pûrṇimânta Jyaishṭha, to Saturday, the 29th April A.D. 1133, when the 8th tithi of the dark half ended 15 h. 48 m. after mean sunrise. The preceding Akshaya-tṛitîyâ, on which the donation was made, fell on Sunday, the 9th April A.D. 1133, when the third tithi of the bright half of Vaiśâkha commenced 1 h. 17 m. and ended 23 h. 5 m. after mean sunrise.[2]

The localities I am unable to identify.— From the present inscription it appears that the paṭṭalâ, so often mentioned in cognate grants, was a subdivision of the pathaka,[3] a term which does not occur in the inscriptions of the kings of Kanauj hitherto published, but which is met with also in another Pâlî plate of Gôvindachandra that will be referred to below.[4] Another unusual term in this grant is nâluka, in line 19. This word apparently is derived from, and is equivalent to, the Sanskṛit nalva, a measure of distance equal to 400 (or, according to others. 100, or 120) hastas. The same term occurs, both in the form nâluka and in the abbreviated form nâlu, in the Kahla (now Lucknow Museum) plates of the (Kalachuri ?) Mahârâjâdhirâja Sôḍhadêva, the successor of the Mahârâjâdhirâja Maryâdâsâgaradêva, of V. 1135, of which Dr. Führer has kindly sent me an impression.

[1] In other inscriptions the name is both Râlhaṇadêvî and Râlhadêvî; see above, Vol. IV. p. 113.

[2] The tithi, on which the donation was made, therefore was a kshaya-tithi.

[1] From an impression supplied by Dr. Führer.

[2] Up to this, the text is practically identical with the text of the Kamauli plate of Gôvindachandra, published above, Vol. IV. p. 100 f. The nine verses at the commencement of the inscription are numbered here with numeral figures.

[3] This sign of punctuation is superfluous; read vijayy=.

[4] The akshara in brackets looks as if i had been first engraved, and then altered to ô. Ôṇavala, corrected out of ôṇâvala, occurs as part of the name of a pathaka in a Pâlî copper-plate inscription of Gôvindachandra of V. 1171, the first plate of which has been presented by Dr. Hoey to the Lucknow Museum. In line 13 of that plate, of which also I owe an impression to Dr. Führer, we read: Sarusdrâôṇavala-pathakê | Sirasî-pattalâyâṁ || Pâlîgrâma-prabhṛiti-grâmêshu.

[5] Instead of ap=ltara- nearly all the other plates of the same dynasty have api cha.

[6] Originally râjñîra- was engraved, but the akshara ra is struck out.

[7] Originally -grâma-prabhṛitishu was engraved, with a sign of anusvâra above the line, between ti and shu; but the word prabhṛitishu is struck out again, and the sign of the vowel ê above the ma of grâma is faintly visible on the back of the impression.

[8] One would have expected here daśa nâlukâ aṅkê=pi nâlukâ 10 sa-jala-sthalâḥ sa-lavaṇ-âkarâḥ, etc.

[9] Read °ddhâ.

[10] Originally -Bhârmyâsa- was engraved; read Mudgala-gôtrâya Maudgaly-Âṅgirasa-Bhârmyaśva-tripravarâya.

[11] Read -śr-Îṁdrâ°. [12] Read pakshê=kshaya-. [13] Read -karatal-ôdaka-pûrvaṁ.

[14] Read °dêvy=âsâṁ (for simply °dêvyâ).

[15] One would have expected pradattâ; see above, note 8.

[16] Here follow the seven verses commencing Bhûmiṁ yaḥ pratigṛihṇâti, Śaṅkhaṁ bhadr-âsanaṁ, Bahubhir=vasudhâ, Sva-dattâṁ para-dattâṁ vâ, Shashṭiṁ varsha-sahasrâṇi, Ûm=ikâṁ, and Sarvân=êtân=bhâvinaḥ.

B.—MACHHLÎSHAHR PLATE OF GÔVINDACHANDRA OF [VIKRAMA-]SAṀVAT 1201.

This is a single plate which was found, in September 1888, in a field close to a small hamlet seven miles north of Mâchhlîshahr (Ghiswâ) in the Jaunpur district of the North-Western Provinces, and is now in the Lucknow Museum. It measures about 1′ 3¾″ broad by 11½″ high, and is engraved on one side only. In the centre of the upper part it has a ring-hole, through which passes a ring, with a circular seal which is about 2½″ in diameter and bears the same legend and emblems as the seal of the inscription A., but apparently not so well preserved The plate contains 29 lines of writing which, on the whole, is well preserved. The size of the letters is between ¼″ and 5/16″. The characters are Nâgarî, and the language is Sanskṛit. The writer has done his work well, and in respect of orthography, therefore, it need only be stated that, except in the word babhramur= in line 9, the letter b is denoted by the sign for v, and that the dental sibilant is occasionally employed instead of the palatal.

This is another inscription of the Paramabhaṭṭâraka Mahârâjâdhirâja Paramêśvara Gôvindachandradêva, who records that, on Monday, the Akshaya-tṛitîyâ tithi of the bright half of the month Vaiśâkha of the year 1201 (given both in words and in figures), after bathing in the Ganges at Benares, he granted the village of Pêrôha in the Mahasôya pattalâ to the Paṇḍita Vaṁśadharaśarman, son of the Paṇḍita Padmanâbha and son's son of the Paṇḍita Bharata, a Brâhmaṇ of the Kâśyapa gôtra, whose three pravaras were Kâśyapa, Âvatsâra and Naidhruva.— The taxes specified (in line 20) are the bhâgabhôgakara, pravaṇikara and turushkadaṇḍa. The grant (tâmra) was written by the Kâyastha Dhandhûka.[2]

About the exact equivalent of the date I am somewhat doubtful. It is true that, for the Chaitrâdi Vikrama-Saṁvat 1201 current, the date would regularly correspond to Monday, the 19th April A.D. 1143, when the third tithi of the bright half of Vaiśâkha ended 21 h. 52 m. after mean sunrise. But as current years are only quoted very exceptionally, and as for the Kârttikâdi Vikrama-Saṁvat 1202 expired the date would correspond to Monday, the 15th April A.D. 1146, which was entirely occupied by the third tithi of the bright half of Vaiśâkha, I am rather inclined to assume that this is really the day on which the grant was made, and that in the inscription the year 1201 has been quoted erroneously instead of 1202.[3]

Regarding the localities I can only say that the Mahasôya pattalâ of this inscription undoubtedly is the same district which in an inscription of Jayachchandra[4] is called the Mahasô pattalâ.

EXTRACTS FROM THE TEXT.[5]

[1] I am somewhat doubtful about the akshara in brackets; above it the sign for the medial ê was engraved, but has been struck out again. The Ṭhakkura Vishṇu wrote the grant of Gôvindachandra published above, Vol. IV. p. 113 f.

[2] This very probably is the same writer who in another inscription of Gôvindachandra is described as the 'Ṭhakkura Dhâdhûka;' see above, Vol. IV. p. 114, inscription L.

[3] There are numerous other dates, of both the Vikrama and the Śaka era, in which we find the same error.

C.—BANGÂVAN PLATE OF GÔVINDACHANDRA AND HIS QUEEN GÔSALADÊVÎ, OF [VIKRAMA-]SAṀVAT 1208.

This also is a single plate which was found, in December 1887, in a field near the village of Bangâvan in the Daryâbâd pargaṇa of the Râmsanehî-Ghâṭ tahsîl of the Bâra Bankî district of Oudh, and which is now in the Lucknow Museum. It measures about 1′ 5¼″ broad by 1′ high, and is inscribed on one side only. At the lower proper left corner a square piece, about 1½″ broad by 2¼″ high, is broken away, causing the loss of about four aksharas at the end of each of the lines 19-25 ; otherwise the plate is well preserved. In the centre of the upper part it has a ring-hole, through which passes a ring, with a circular seal which is about 2½″ in diameter and bears the same legend and emblems as the seal of the inscription A.[6] The

² Read saṁvat 1201; the figure for the unit (1) is quite clear and distinct, and cannot be read differently.

³ Read -Vârâṇasyâṁ.

⁵ Metre: Vasantatilakâ.

plate contains 25 lines of writing. The size of the letters is about $\frac{5}{16}''$. The characters are Nâgarî, and the language is Sanskrit. The writer and engraver have done their work in a rather slovenly manner so that the text contains a large number of minor mistakes. As regards orthography, the letter b is denoted by the sign for v, the dental sibilant is often employed instead of the palatal, j is used instead of y in -parjantaḥ, l. 16, and the word śêkhara is written śêshara, in line 19.

This is another inscription of the Paramabhaṭṭâraka Mahârâjâdhirâja Paramêśvara Gôvindachandradêva.[1] The king records in it that, on Tuesday, the full-moon tithi of Kârttika of the year 1208 (given both in words and in figures), his queen, the Paṭṭamahâdêvî Mahârâjñî Gôsaladêvî, endowed with all royal prerogatives, after bathing in the Ganges at Benares near (the temple of) the god Lôlârka,[2] in the presence of that deity, with the king's consent, gave the village of Gaṭiara in the Bhîmamayûtâsa . . [3] paṭṭalâ to the Ṭhakkura Aṇataśarman, son of the Ṭhakkura . . . .[4] and son's son of the Ṭhakkura Kulhê, a Brâhmaṇ of the Vasishṭha gôtra and student of the Chhandôga śâkhâ (of the Sâma-vêda), who had come from Pâṭaliputra.— The taxes specified (in line 22) are the bhâgabhôgakara and pravaṇikara. The writer's name either was not given or is broken away at the end of the inscription.

The date is irregular;[5] for the full-moon tithi of Kârttika of Vikrama-Saṁvat 1208 current ended 17 h. 43 m. after mean sunrise of Monday, the 6th November A.D. 1150, and that of Vikrama-Saṁvat 1208 expired, 3 h. 58 m. after mean sunrise of Saturday, the 27th October A.D. 1151. The date would be incorrect also for Vikrama-Saṁvat 1209 expired. but correct for both 1206 and 1210 expired.

Of the localities, Pâṭaliputra is the modern Patna in the Patna district of Bengal; the village Gaṭiara and the paṭṭalâ in which it was situated I am unable to identify.

[4] The part of the plate which contained the name is broken away.

[5] Compare Ind. Ant. Vol. XIX, p. 367, No. 184 (where on p. 368, line 2, '16 October' is a misprint for '15 October').

[6] From an impression supplied by Dr. Führer.

[7] The inscription begins with the words ôṁ ôṁ siddhiḥ (instead of ôṁ svasti); otherwise the text, up to this, is practically identical with that of the Kamauli plate of Gôvindachandra, published above, Vol. IV. p. 100 f.

No. 16.— SIX EASTERN CHALUKYA COPPER-PLATE INSCRIPTIONS.

BY F. KIELHORN, PH.D., LL.D., C.I.E.; GÖTTINGEN.

A.—ÊḌÊRU PLATES OF VIJAYÂDITYA II.

[A.D. 799-843.][10]

These plates were found, about twenty-five years ago, at the village of Êḍêru (the 'Eedra' of the Indian Atlas, map 94, long. 80° 48′ E., lat. 16° 43′ N.) in the Nûzivîḍu Zamîndârî of the Kistna district of the Madras Presidency, and they are preserved now in the Madras Museum. The inscription which they contain has been already published, by Pandit S. M. Natesa Sastri, in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. XIII. p. 55 ff.;[11] I re-edit it from an excellent impression, supplied to me by Dr. Hultzsch.

These are three copper-plates, the first and last of which are inscribed on one side only, and each of which measures about 7″ broad by $2\frac{7}{8}$″ high. The plates have slightly raised rims,

1 One would have expected here asmat-saṁmatyâ; see above, Vol. IV. p. 109, l. 19 of the text.

2 Read -pâṭana-paṭu-mahasam=.

3 The aksharas in brackets at the end of lines 19-22 are broken away.

4 Read °ṭanây=.

5 This asmâbhiḥ is superfluous.

6 I.e. ṭhakkura-.

7 Here three or four aksharas are broken away.

8 Read -vidhêyîbhûya dâ°.

9 Here follow the four verses commencing Bhûmiṁ yaḥ pratigṛihṇâti, Śaṅkhaṁ bhadr-âsanaṁ, Gâm-ēkâṁ, and Shashṭiṁ varsha-sahasrâṇi.

10 Here and below I add the times of the reigns of the donors, from Dr. Fleet's account of the Eastern Chalukya dynasty in Ind. Ant. Vol. XX., to indicate in a general way the period to which each of the six inscriptions belongs.

11 Compare also Dr. Fleet in Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 101, H.

and are strung on a ring which had not been cut yet when the impression was taken by Dr. Hultzsch. The ring is about 3⅜" in diameter and ⅜" thick, and has its ends secured in the base of an elliptical seal, about 2" by 1¾" in diameter. The seal bears across its breadth the legend śrî-Tribhuvanakuṁśa (for °nâṁkuśa), with, below it, an expanded lotus flower, and, above it, the sun within the moon's crescent.— The writing, which is rather roughly engraved, is, on the whole, well preserved. The characters belong to the southern class of alphabets, and are of the regular type of the period and part of the country to which the inscription belongs. As regards individual letters, it may be stated that for kh (which occurs in pramukhân, l. 15, and in khaṇḍika, l. 21) and for b we have throughout the older square forms, and that, with perhaps one exception,[1] the older, not the later cursive, form is also used in the case of l. It may moreover be noted that the sign for b is generally open on the left (or proper right) side — a form of b, which is employed throughout already in the Chîpurupalle plates[2] of Vishṇuvardhana I. of A.D. 632 — and that occasionally a similarly open sign[3] is used for j, e.g. in Dharmmaj[â]nuja, l. 11, and a(â)jñaptir, l. 25. Final forms of consonants occur for n in pramukhân, l. 15, and perhaps for m in sva-datt[*â]m, l. 27, and vasundharâm, l. 28. The size of the letters is between 3/16" and ¼".— The language is Sanskṛit and, with the exception of three verses at the end, the inscription is in prose. The text generally is plain, but contains a number of mistakes, due to carelessness of either the writer or the engraver. Whether the word kûṭaka, which in line 15 occurs in the place of the usual râshṭrakûṭa, is correct or not, I am unable to decide. In respect of orthography, it may suffice to state that the Dravidian ḻ is used in kaḻadhauta, l. 12, and in the names Chaḻukyânâṁ, l. 4, Paḻḻa-bhaṭṭ[*â]rak[*â]ya, l. 20, and Boḻareṇḍuvaṭi, l. 24; that the sign of the medial â is frequently omitted;[4] and that the word padma is spelt patma, in line 9.

The inscription is one of the Eastern Chalukya Vijayâditya [II. Narêndramṛigarâja], the son of Vishṇuvardhana [IV.] and son's son of Vikramarâma (i.e., apparently, Vijayâditya I.). It records the grant, on the occasion of a solar eclipse, of part of the village of Va[ṇḍ]ṟupiṭe[y]u in the Kaṇḍeṟuvâḍi-vishaya, to a Brâhmaṇ named Paḻḻa-bhaṭṭâraka, an inhabitant of Minamini. The Âjñapti (or dûtaka) of the grant was Boḻama.

The inscription is not dated. Of the localities, none of which have been identified, the Kaṇḍeṟuvâḍi (or °vâṭi) vishaya is mentioned in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 40, l. 43, and p. 45, l. 21, and was most probably mentioned also at the end of line 16 of the inscription published ibid. p. 33 and Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 415, which mentions the villages of Va[ṇḍ]ṟupiṭe[y]u[5] and Koṟṟapaṟu (or °paṟṟu) of the present inscription.[6] Below, p. 129, text l. 23, mention is made of the Uttarakaṇḍeṟuvâḍi vishaya.

[1] I refer to the sign for l, used in -gaṇ-ḍlakaṁtâya in line 20, which comes very near to the later cursive form.

[2] See Plate xxvii. of Dr. Burnell's South-Indian Palæography. Occasionally the open form of the square b occurs also in other early Eastern as well as Western Chalukya inscriptions. It is met with also in Pallava and Eastern Gaṅga inscriptions, and is used throughout in the Chikkulla plates of Vikramêndravarman II. (above, Vol. IV. p. 195), while in the Gôdâvarî plates of Pṛithivimûla (Jour. Bo. As. Soc. Vol. XVI. p. 116) it occurs only once or perhaps twice, out of six times.

[3] On the open j see below, p. 122.

[4] The only important omission of the sign for â occurs at the end of line 5, where it might seem doubtful whether the proper name, given there, should be read Vikramarama or Vikramarâma. In favour of the former reading one might perhaps quote the name Vishṇurama which occurs above, Vol. IV. p. 310, ll. 3 and 4 of the text; but the fact that in the present inscription the name is immediately preceded by the word abhirâma, in my opinion, renders it certain that Vikramarâma is really intended.

[5] See below, p. 120, note 10.

[6] With the name Beṇḍuvaṭi in line 24 of the present inscription one might compare Reṇḍu(ṇṭu)vâḍula in Ind. Ant. Vol. XIII. p. 186, ll. 18 and 21.

[1] From impressions supplied by Dr. Hultzsch.

[2] Read Kauśikî-.

[3] Read °nâm=aśva-.

[4] Read -tanayô.

[5] The third akshara of this word looks as if tya had first been engraved and then altered to tra.

[6] Read -padmaḥ ; Mr. Natesa Sastri read rakshita-padmaḥ. The sun always reddens the water-lilies ; the king always pleased the goddess of fortune (Padmâ) or 1,000 billions (padma) of people. The moon is dear to the night-lotuses ; the king was fond of fostering the happiness of (the inhabitants of) the earth.

[7] Read -karô.

[8] 'He washed off the dirt of the weak (i.e. the poverty of the needy) by the unprecedented (amount of) gold and silver (kaḷadhauta) which (equivalent to his own weight) was placed on the balance.' Compare Ind. Ant. Vol. XIII. p. 186, l. 8 : anêka-tulâdhṛita-śâtakumbha-viśrâṇan-[â]vadâta-śari(rî)rasya.*

[9] The impression looks as if originally, between the aksharas ṇḍe and ṟu, the sign of visarga had been engraved.

[10] Mr. Natesa Sastri omits this name. By Dr. Fleet (Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 101) it was read Vamṟupiṟeyu or Vamṟupiḷeyu. The village is the same which, as situated west of Koṟṟapaṟṟu (see below, l. 23), is mentioned in line 44 of the other known grant of Vijayâditya II., where the name by Dr. Hultzsch was read Vâ[ṇḍhṛâ]pe[dayâ], and by Dr. Fleet Vâṇḍṛûpedayâ ; see South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 34, and Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 417.

[11] The sign of anusvâra in this word is placed within the sign of the vowel i of bi.

[12] Read vaḥ | Asmâbhir=.

[13] Read -gôtrây=Âpastaṁba-sûtrâya Taittirîya-bra° (or, perhaps, °ya-sabra°).

[14] Mr. Natesa Sastri read this name Turkavarmma-, but the third akshara is distinctly śa in the impression. The name Tûrkaśarman occurs below, p. 124, text line 20, and in a Pallava inscription, Ind. Ant. Vol. V. p. 155, l. 20.

[15] Read -trivêdi-pautrâya.

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.

The son's son of Vikramarâma (l. 5), who adorned the family of the Chaḷukyas (l. 4) who are of the Mânavya gôtra and are Hâritiputras (l. 1), and who obtained the success of victory (vijaya-siddhi) in various battles :—

The dear son of the Mahârâja Vishṇuvardhana (l. 7) :—

The asylum of the whole world, Vijayâditya (l. 13), the Mahârâjâdhirâja, Paramêśvara and Bhaṭṭâraka, who is most devoted to religion and is victorious like (the god) Vishṇu, thus issues a command to all the cultivators, headed by the Kûṭakas, of the village of Va[ṇḍ]ṟu-piṭe[y]u in the Kaṇḍeṟuvâḍi-vishaya (l. 15) :—

"Be it known to you ! On the occasion of an eclipse of the sun (l. 20), a field in this village, the extent of which is such that it may be sown with kôdrava[14] grain to the amount of twelve khaṇḍikas, (and ?) a dwelling-place have been given by Us, with exemption from all taxes, to the Brâhmaṇ Paḷḷa-bhaṭṭâraka, an inhabitant of Minamini (l. 17), who belongs to the Kâśyapa gôtra and Âpastamba sûtra, and is a student of the Taittirîya Vêda, a son of the student of three Vêdas Dôṇaśarman and son's son of the student of three Vêdas Tûrkaśarman."

The four boundaries are (l. 22) : On the east, the boundary-line of Koṟṟapaṟu ; on the south, a tank ; on the west, Ṛamâṭi ; and on the north, Reṇḍuvaṭi (and ?) Boḷareṇḍuvaṭi.

[1] This is the actual reading, and the name occurs, spelt in the same way, in other inscriptions ; the correct spelling would be Drôṇaśarmma-.

[2] Read -putrâya.

[3] Perhaps the intended reading is brâhmaṇâya gu-.

[4] Read -âlaṁkṛitâya.

[5] Read ttê=sminn=.

[6] Instead of khaṇḍika Mr. Natesa Sastri read vêṇḍika ; the correct reading has been already given by Dr. Fleet, in Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 106, note 20. Compare also ibid. Vol. XIII. p. 250, l. 27 of the text, râja-mânêna dvâdaśa-khoṇḍi(?)-kôdrava-bîja-vâpa-kshêtram ; and Vol. XIV. p. 55, l. 116, dhânya-khaṇḍakâni.

[7] The engraving is quite clear here, but I cannot read the akshara in these brackets with any confidence. The following sign of punctuation is superfluous. After âvâsanaṁ one would have expected cha.

[8] Read -parihârîkṛitya.

[9] Instead of this one would have expected Tasya chatvârô=vadhayaḥ, or only Tasy=âvadhayaḥ.

[10] Apparently intended for êtê chatvârô=vadhayaḥ.— I suspect that some similar phrase is intended in line 45 of the other grant of Vijayâditya II. (mentioned above, p. 120, note 10), where the published texts have cha[turviṁśatyai] datta[ḥ]* and êtêshâm=apy=ava(?)tta.

[11] Metre from here to the end : Ślôka (Anushṭubh).

[12] Read -saṁgrahê.

[13] Originally harêti appears to have been engraved ; read harêta.

[14] Kôdrava is stated to be 'an inferior sort of grain, Paspalum frumentaceum.'

Lines 25-28 give the name of the Âjñapti, Boḷama, and contain two benedictive and imprecatory verses.

B.—MASULIPATAM (?) PLATES OF VIJAYÂDITYA III.

[A.D. 844-888.]

There is no definite information as to where these plates were found, or what became of them; but, judging from the dimensions, this may perhaps be a grant which is entered as follows in a memorandum of Sir Walter Elliot:—"5. Inscription on 5 plates, received from Mr. Porter, Collector of Masulipatam, 19th December 1846; Vijayâditya. Seal, a Boar, and Tribhuvanâṁkuśa. Length 9½; breadth, 3⅝. Weight, 258 rupees." I edit the inscription[1] from Sir W. Elliot's own impressions, supplied to me by Dr. Fleet to whom I also owe the preceding information.

These apparently are five copper-plates, the first and last of which are inscribed on one side only, and each of which measures 9½" broad by about 3⅝" high. They were strung on a ring for which there is a hole on the proper right side of each plate. The writing on the original plates undoubtedly is well preserved, but the impressions contain some partially illegible passages, owing to the fact that many letters in the original are blocked up with hard rust, which was not cleaned out before taking the impressions.[2]—The writing is well done, and carefully engraved. The characters belong to the southern class of alphabets, of the time and part of the country to which the inscription belongs. As regards individual letters, the chief points to note are, that for kh and l everywhere the later, cursive forms are used, while for b we have the older square form; and that the signs for both b and j throughout are open on the left (or proper right) side. Of the open b I have spoken above, p. 119. The open j is used occasionally already[3] in the Êḍêru plates of Vijayâditya II. (above, p. 120), and in the Ahadanakaram plates of Vishṇuvardhana V. (Ind. Ant. Vol. XIII. p. 186, e.g. in kanadirajuḷ, l. 30). It is also found now and then, more or less developed, in Eastern Gaṅga inscriptions, e.g. in lines 1 and 2 of the Chicacole plates of Indravarman of the year 146 (?) and in line 25 of the Vizagapatam plates of Dêvêndravarman of the year 254 (ibid. Vol. XIII. p. 123, and Vol. XVIII. p. 144); and it occurs pretty frequently in the Chikkulla plates of Vikramêndravarman II. (above, Vol. IV. p. 195), which have also the open b. And both the open j and the open b are used throughout in the two Bâṇa inscriptions, published in Ind. Ant. Vol. X. p. 39, which therefore, in this respect, come nearer to the present inscription than any other records examined by me.[4] Of final consonants which are not joined with a following letter our inscription only contains t (in kênachit, l. 29) and n (in pramukhân, l. 18, pârtthivêndrân,

[1] For an account of the contents of the inscription see Dr. Fleet in Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 103, J.

[2] Excepting the word which precedes the name Târkkaśarmmaṇaḥ in line 20, and one or two aksharas in the names of villages, the illegible passages cause little difficulty.

[3] I do not venture to quote with confidence the Nellore district plates of Vishṇuvardhana II. of A.D. 664 (Ind. Ant. Vol. VII. p. 186), where the open j seems to occur in Bhâradvâja, l. 18, and svamukh-âjñâ°, l. 67.—The Tables in Dr. Burnell's and Prof. Bühler's works on Indian palæography contain no specimen of the open j.

[4] On the Plate facing page 167 of Ind. Ant. Vol. X. there are photolithographs of two short Paṭṭadakal inscriptions, one of which has the ordinary open j (consisting of three separate lines), while the other furnishes an instance of that peculiar form of the open j, which has a vertical line in the middle and three horizontal lines to the right of the vertical line. The origin of the latter form of j, which, together with the ordinary open j, is used e.g. in the spurious Merkara plates (ibid. Vol. I. p. 362), is well shewn by the different forms of j, employed in the Chicacole plates of Dêvêndravarman (ibid. Vol. XIII. p. 275; compare the different forms of j in e.g. Nâgarâja, l. 23, nija, l. 7, and vijaya, l. 1). The origin of the later, cursive j, in my opinion, is equally well shewn by some forms of j in the Alamaṇḍa plates of Anantavarman of the year 304 (above, Vol. III. p. 18; compare the forms of j in e.g. janita-jaya, l. 6, and nija, l. 8). Perhaps I may state here that a form of j, which comes very near indeed to the later cursive j, is used already in the grant of Attivarman (Ind. Ant. Vol. IX. p. 102, e.g. in jana, l. 3, and yajus, l. 6), which shews an early form of the Grantha alphabet and is, in my opinion, not later than A.D. 650.

l. 33, pratâpavân, l. 35, and śrîmân, l. 38). Of these two, t is denoted by the ordinary sign for ta, and n by a slightly smaller form of the ordinary sign for na, with the sign of virâma, which hardly differs from the sign of the superscript r, placed above them. The size of the letters is between $\frac{3}{16}$" and $\frac{1}{4}$".— The language is Sanskṛit. In addition to four benedictive and imprecatory verses and two others which give the names of the Ájñapti and the writer, the text contains five verses eulogizing the donor and his predecessors and the donee; the rest is in prose. Verse 3 does not admit of a proper construction, and in verse 5 an essentially necessary word is omitted. The orthography calls for no remarks.

The inscription is one of the Eastern Châlukya Vijayâditya [III. Guṇaka], the son of Vishṇuvardhana [V.] who was the son of Vijayâditya [II. Narêndramṛigarâja], here also called Châluky-Árjuna. It records that, apparently as a reward for advice which was given in the matter of the defeat of an enemy named Maṅgi, the king, on the occasion of a lunar eclipse, granted the village of Ṭraṇḍa[pa?]ṟu in the Gudravâra-vishaya to the Brâhmaṇ Vinayaḍiśarman, a son of Dâmôdaraśarman and son's son of Tûrkaśarman who was an inhabitant of Urpuṭûru. The Ájñapti of the grant was Pâṇḍarâṅga (whose name occurs again below, p. 130, text l. 46, where a grandson of his is mentioned), and the writer Kaṭṭa[y]a.

The inscription is not dated. Of the localities, none of which have been identified, the Gudravâra vishaya is also mentioned below,[1] p. 137, text l. 22, and in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 48, l. 25. Below, p. 141, l. 22, the name of the district is spelt Gudrâvâra; and an earlier form of the name is Gudrahâra, in Ind. Ant. Vol. XIII. p. 138, l. 17, and Vol. VII. p. 191, l. 12, and a later one Guddavâḍi, ibid. Vol. XIV. p. 53, l. 77, and Vol. XIX. p. 431, l. 79.[2] The name of the village of Urpuṭûru[3] occurs ibid. Vol. XX. p. 416, ll. 25 and 35.

On the rather scanty pieces of historical information furnished by the inscription compare Dr. Fleet, ibid. Vol. XX. pp. 100-103, and Dr. Hultzsch, above, Vol. IV. p. 226.

Since writing the above, I have been able to examine impressions, kindly sent to me by Dr. Hultzsch, of the inscription (or inscriptions) on the Madras Museum plates described in Mr. Sewell's Lists of Antiquities, Vol. II. p. 24, No. 174. I find that lines 1-33 of these plates contain a complete inscription of a Chôḷa chief named Śrîkaṇṭha, who is recorded to have given the village of Mandara to the god Śiva (under the name of Prêtîśvara ?); and that in this inscription, exactly as is the case in the inscription B, here edited, the letters j and b throughout are denoted by the ordinary open j and the open b, while for kh and l the later cursive signs are used.— As Mr. Sewell has not been well served by his native assistant, I may mention that the inscription referred to— it is rather carelessly written— gives the following line of chiefs, who are said to belong to the family of the Chôḷa Karikâla: Sundarananda, Navarâma, Eṟeyamma, Vijayakâma, Vîrârjuna, Agraṇipiḍugu (!), Kôkiḷi, Mahêndravarman, Eḷajôḷa (!), Nṛipakâma, Divâkara, and Śrîkaṇṭha who is described as Chôḷa-kulasya Râmaḥ. The inscription is not dated, and contains no historical information except what may be furnished by the given names.

[1] Above, Vol. IV. p. 49, verse 18, a Gudravâra-dvaya or 'pair of (districts called) Gudravâra' is mentioned.

[3] Perhaps this is 'Vupputuru,' Indian Atlas, map 76, long. 80° 22' E., lat. 15° 57½' N.

[4] From Sir W. Elliot's impressions, supplied to me by Dr. Fleet.

[5] This word was perhaps preceded in the original by an ornamental design.

[1] Originally mâṇḍalasya was engraved, but the â of mâ has been struck out.

[2] Metre: Vasantatilakâ.

[3] Originally, over the v of varddhana, part of the vowel i was engraved.

[4] Metre of verses 2-4: Sragdharâ.

[5] This sign of visarga was originally omitted.

[6] The general sense of the verse is, that beauty and the rest eagerly pay homage to the king, aware that even the moon etc. would not be so suitable a home for them; but the verse, in my opinion, does not admit of a proper construction.

[7] Here, and in other places below, the rules of saṁdhi have not been observed.

[8] The akshara which precedes the syllable sya is quite illegible.

[9] The two aksharas in these brackets are illegible, but have, I think, been correctly supplied; compare brahmaśrî-bhâsvara-dyutiḥ, 'resplendent with holiness,' in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 45, l. 26.

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.

The asylum of the whole world, the Mahârâja Vijayâditya (l. 6), who adorned the family of the Châlukyas (l. 5) who are of the Mânavya gôtra and are Hâritîputras (l. 1), was a fire of destruction to the Gaṅga family, and, as he broke the frenzy of the Kali age, was named Châluky-Ârjuna (l. 7).

[1] Metre : Mandâkrântâ.

[2] Over the akshara dbhu the vowel i has been engraved, but it seems to have been struck out again.

[3] The subject of the sentence apparently is Vijayâdityaḥ, which must be supplied from the context.

[4] Metre of verses 6 and 7 : Ślôka (Anushṭubh).

[6] Metre : Ślôka (Anushṭubh).

[7] Metre : Âryâ.

[8] Metre : Sragdharâ.

[9] The letter in brackets may possibly be ṭ.

[10] The aksharas in these brackets are doubtful.

(V. 1.) Valorous like a lion, he with his unsheathed sharp sword split open (the frontal globes[1] of) the lordly elephants— his adversaries; the fire of his wrath is not extinguished unless it is sprinkled with the tears of the sorrow-stricken wives of his enemies.

His dear son was the asylum of all mankind, the Mahârâja Vishṇuvardhana (l. 10).

(V. 2.) When he ascends his elephant, his enemies ascend the mountain-tops; when his arm takes the sword, the hands of the young women of his adversaries take up the chowries; when he knits his brows, the black bees[2] make honey in the palace of his adversary; when the war-drum is sounded in his abode, the jackals howl in the abode of his opponent.

His dear son— who[3] excels the moon in beauty, the earth in endurance, the tree of paradise in generosity, the sun in splendour, the lion in bravery, and the sea in greatness of disposition— the asylum of the whole world, the Mahârâja Vijayâditya (l. 17), thus issues a command to all the cultivators, headed by the Râshṭrakûṭas, in the Gudravâra-vishaya :—

"Be it known to you! On the occasion of an eclipse of the moon (l. 27), the village of Ṭraṇḍa[pa ?]ru (l. 28) has been given by Us, with exemption from all taxes, to the Taittirîya householder Vinayaḍiśarman (l. 27), a son of Dâmôdaraśarman and son's son of the inhabitant of Urpuṭûru (l. 19), the . . . .[4] Tûrkaśarman, who belongs to the Kauśika gôtra and Âpastamba sûtra.

(V. 4.) He has conquered the host of the six enemies[5] of mankind who have subdued all the world; when she came to him, the Glory of holiness forgot even the lotus-born Brahman; [6] in his society the assemblage of virtues find pleasure,[7] such as they have nowhere experienced; true to his word, he in jest even does not give utterance to false speech.

(V. 5.) When on the field of battle, strewn with horses, soldiers and infuriated elephants that were struck down by various weapons, (the king[8]) had slain Maṅgi, who had defeated the whole host of hostile chiefs and in the excess of his fury had ridiculed the king's liberality, bravery and power, he was well pleased with the marvellous advice of this best one of the twice-born."

The boundaries are (l. 28): On the east and south, Aṅgalûru; on the west, Velpûru; and on the north, Chavi[ṭa ?]paṟu.

The rest of the inscription warns the people not to obstruct this grant; quotes three benedictive and imprecatory verses, ascribed to Vyâsa; (in verse 9) gives the name of the Âjñapti of the grant, Pâṇḍarâṅga, who for his prowess and valour in war is compared to Bîbhatsu, i.e. Arjuna; (in v. 10) contains a prayer for the welfare of the people and the progress of religion; and (in v. 11) records that this edict (śâsana), by order of the king Vijayâditya, was written by the foremost of goldsmiths, Kaṭṭa[y]a, the son of Mâdhava and son's son of Îśâna.

[1] There is no doubt that this was present to the mind of the author of the verse; compare, e.g., Vâsavadattâ, p. 102, hari-kharanakhara-vidâritakumbhasthala-vikala-vâraṇa. According to Dr. Fleet in Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 101, the word nâgâdhipa would seem "to have a double meaning, and to indicate also a defeat of some hostile chief of the Nâgas."

[2] The presence of the black bees in the palace of the enemy as well as the howling of the jackals portend evil. Compare Harshacharita, Bombay ed., pp. 180 and 181, vavâśire śivânâṁ râjayaḥ . . . . babhrâma bhrâmaraṁ paṭalam.

[3] I only give the general sense of verse 3, which I cannot construe. The king was mahâ-sattva on account of his noble disposition; the sea is so, because it contains a number of big creatures.

[4] Here one word, apparently a name, is partly illegible in the original.

[5] Compare South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 35, note 3.

[6] The original has Paṅkêruhabhû; compare, e.g., Ambhôjabhava and Jalajabhava in Ind. Ant. Vol. XII. p. 92, l. 40, and p. 93, l. 46.

[7] According to the dictionaries, the word jôsha, in classical Sanskṛit, would seem to be used only as an adverb, in the form jôsham; but it occurs as a substantive, in the sense of sukha, e.g. in Harshacharita, Bombay ed., p. 159, l. 8.

[8] This has necessarily to be supplied; the king, of course, is Vijayâditya himself.

C.—BEZVÂḌA PLATES OF CHÂLUKYA-BHÎMA I.

These plates were found[1] on the 25th June 1897 in the rock-hewn chamber of the quarry-compound at Bezvâḍa, in the Kistna district of the Madras Presidency, and were sent to Dr. Hultzsch by Mr. J. K. Batten, I.C.S., the Acting Collector of the Kistna district. I edit the inscription which they contain from an excellent impression, supplied to me by Dr. Hultzsch.

These are five copper-plates, each of which measures about 7" broad by 3" high. Plates 2-5 are inscribed on both sides, but the writing on the second side of the fifth plate is less than half a line. The first plate is inscribed on the second side only, and on the first side contains, from the proper right to the left, representations of a conch-shell, the sun, and a club.— With perhaps the exception of the first plate, the plates are quasi-palimpsests. On the plates 2-4 the writing which had first been engraved on them is well beaten in, so that only few traces of it remain; but on both sides of the fifth plate the original writing is still so clearly seen that much of it may be made out without any difficulty. The characters of this original writing closely resemble those which were afterwards engraved on the plates; and this, together with the fact that the words at the bottom of the second side of the fifth plate are sa sarvvalôkâśraya-śrî-Vishṇuvarddhana-ma[hârâ],[2] in my opinion, leaves no doubt that these plates originally were used for another grant of Bhîma I., which either was not completed or for some reason or other was cancelled.— The plates have high rims, and are strung on a ring, which had not been cut yet when this record came into Dr. Hultzsch's hands. The ring is about 4⅓" in diameter and ⅜" thick, and has its ends secured in the back of a circular seal, about 2¼" in diameter The seal bears, in relief, the legend śrî-Tribhuvan[â]ṁkuśaḥ*, with a flower below it, and, above it, a couchant boar which faces to the proper left and is surmounted by the sun and the moon's crescent, while behind it is an elephant-goad.— The writing is well preserved throughout. The characters belong to the southern class of alphabets, of the time and part of the country to which the inscription belongs. As regards individual letters, kh, j, b and l are denoted throughout by the later, cursive signs; but for the initial i (in Indra, l. 8) we have here still the earlier form, consisting of two horizontal dots with a wavy line above them. Of special signs for final consonants the inscription only contains one, for n (in dattavân, l. 21, but not in pratâpavân, l. 46); and of letters which occur more rarely, the initial î, ai and ô (in Îśânataḥ and Airiviya-guṇṭha, l. 32, and ôṁ, l. 1). The size of the letters is about $\frac{3}{16}$".— The language is Sanskrit, except that some Telugu words occur in the proper names. In addition to five benedictive and imprecatory verses, the text contains one verse referring to the donor and another which gives the name of the Âjñapti; the rest is in prose, but in lines 15 and 17 reads as if the official who drew up the grant had had verses before him. The text is full of minor mistakes. In respect of orthography, it will suffice to note the doubling, before y, of t in Sattyâśraya, l. 6, and Vijayâdittya, l. 13, of n in tânny=êva, l. 37, and of l in nirmmâllya, l. 44; the doubling of s before k in yaśasskarâṇi, l. 44; the doubling of m after anusvâra in têshâṁ mmayâ, l. 40; the employment of t and d for the corresponding aspirates in saprârttitô (for saṁprârtthitô), l. 21, pârttivêndrân, l. 42, dharmmârtta-, l. 44, and sâduḥ, l. 45; and the use of the palatal for the dental sibilant in sahaśrâṇi, l. 36.

The inscription is one of the Eastern Châlukya Bhîma [I.] Vishṇuvardhana (usually called Châlukya-Bhîma[3]), of whom no other inscription has yet been found. After having stated (in verse), in a general way, that at the time of his coronation (paṭṭabandha) king Bhîma gave away a village in perpetuity, it formally records that the Mahârâjâdhirâja Vishṇu-vardhana granted the village of Kûkiparru in the Uttarakaṇḍeṟuvâḍi-vishaya to a student

[1] The plates were found together with a set of plates professing to contain a grant of Vishṇuvardhana III., which I consider to be spurious.

[2] See line 21 of the text of the present inscription.

[3] See Dr. Fleet in Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 102.

of the kramapâṭha named Pôtamayya, who (or whose grandfather) was an inhabitant[1] of Ummarakaṇṭhibôl. The Âjñapti of the grant was Kaḍeyarâja (a grandson of the Pâṇḍarâṅga of the preceding inscription), and the writer Koṇḍâchârya.[2]

The inscription is not dated. The localities mentioned in it have not been identified.[3]

It may be noticed that, up to the present, this is the earliest record which gives the full historical genealogy, with the lengths of the reigns,[4] and that this grant for Bhîma I. gives the second name Vishṇuvardhana.

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.

Ôṁ. Adoration to Nârâyaṇa! Kubja-Vishṇuvardhana (l. 7)— the brother of Satyâśraya-vallabhêndra, who adorned the family of the Châlukyas (l. 6) who are of the Mânavya gôtra and are Hâritiputras (l. 2)— (reigned) for eighteen years; his son Jayasiṁha-vallabha (l. 8) for thirty-three years; Vishṇuvardhana (l. 9), the dear son of his younger brother Indra-bhaṭṭâraka, for nine years; his son Maṅgi-yuvarâja (l. 9) for twenty-five years; his son Jayasiṁha (l. 10) for thirteen years; Kokkili (l. 11), his younger brother from a different mother, for six months; his eldest brother Vishṇuvardhana (l. 12), having expelled the younger brother, for thirty-seven years; his son Vijayâditya-bhaṭṭâraka (l. 13) for eighteen years; his son Vishṇurâja (l. 14) for thirty-six years; his son Vijayâditya (l. 14), who built a hundred and eight temples of (Śiva) Narêndrêśvara, for forty[10] years; his son Kali-Vishṇuvardhana (l. 16) for one year and a half; (and) his son Vijayâditya (l. 16) for forty-four years. Bhîma (l. 18) is the son of his brother, the Yuvarâja Vikramâditya.

(V. 1.) That glorious hero, by whose fame all quarters, the earth and the sky are whitened as by the moon's rays, and who gladdens the learned with the excellent god of love,[11] that glorious home of victory, king Bhîma, at the time of his coronation, well pleased, has given a village in perpetuity, requested to do so.

He, the asylum of all mankind, Vishṇuvardhana (l. 22), the Mahârâjâdhirâja, Paramêśvara and Paramabhaṭṭâraka, who is most devoted to religion, having called together all the cultivators, headed by the Râshṭrakûṭas, who inhabit the Uttarakaṇḍeṟuvâḍi-vishaya, thus issues a command to them (l. 25):—

"Be it known to you! The village of Kûkipaṟṟu (l. 27) has been given by us, with exemption from all taxes, to the student of the kramapâṭha Pôtamayya, the son of Drôṇabhaṭṭa who is the son of Rêvamayya, a member of the Kauṇḍinya gôtra and a Vêdic scholar (inhabiting) Ummarakaṇṭhibôl (l. 25)."

[1] Read samastaṁ, without the sign of punctuation. [2] Metre: Śâlinî.
[3] Metre: Indravajrâ. [4] Read narêndrair=. [5] Read -vânta-.
[6] Read =âdadîta. [7] Metre: Ślôka (Anushṭubh).— Read Âjñaptir=.
[8] This sign of punctuation is superfluous. The following Pâda contains one syllable too many.
[9] Read =bhavad=yasya. [10] See Dr. Fleet in Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 100
[11] I do not see the exact force of this statement. In another inscription Bhîma is called śaucha-Kandarpa, 'in purity the god of love;' see Ind. Ant. Vol. XIII. p. 249, l. 14.

The boundaries are (l. 29): On the east, the Pôtaryangari-cheruvu (tank); on the south-east, the Paruvula-gunta (tank); on the south, the Châki-cheruvu (tank); on the south-west, the boundary-line of (?)[1]; on the west, the Chintareni-cheruvu (tank); on the north-west, the Juvvi-gunta (tank); and on the north and north-east, the Airiviya-gunta (tank).

The rest of the inscription warns the people not to obstruct this grant; quotes five benedictive and imprecatory verses, ascribed to Vyâsa; (in verse 7) gives the name of the Âjñapti of the grant, Kadeyarâja, whose grandfather was Pândarânga; and records the name of the writer, Kondâchârya.

D.—MASULIPATAM PLATES OF AMMA I.

These plates were found, some twenty years ago, in the vernacular record room of the Collector's office at Masulipatam, in the Kistna district of the Madras Presidency, and they are preserved now in the Madras Museum. The inscription which they contain has been already published, by Mr. R. Sewell, in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. VIII. p. 77 ff.;[2] I re-edit it from an excellent impression, taken and supplied to me by Dr. Fleet.

These are three copper-plates, the first and last of which are inscribed on one side only, and each of which measures about 8¾" broad by 4⅛" high. The plates have raised rims, and are strung on a ring which had been cut before this record came into Dr. Fleet's hands in the year 1884. The ring is about 5¼" in diameter and ½" thick; it is joined to a circular seal which is about 3¾" in diameter. The seal bears, in relief on a slightly countersunk surface, the legend śrî-Tribhuvan[*â]mkuśa; below the legend, a floral device; immediately above the legend, a boar, standing and facing to the proper right; and above the boar, an elephant-goad surmounted by the moon's crescent. With the exception of a small part of the first plate the writing of which is somewhat corroded, the plates are well preserved.—The writing and engraving are good. The characters belong to the southern class of alphabets, of the time and part of the country to which the inscription belongs. For kh, j, b and l we have throughout the later, cursive signs. The initial i does not occur in the text. Of the three final consonants which occur, n and m are denoted by special signs (in mâsân, ll. 9 and 13, trimśatam, ll. 10 and 11, and chatvârimśatam, ll. 12 and 14), while for t the ordinary sign for ta is used, with the sign of virâma above it (in Kumâravat, l. 27, and anînê(na)śat, l. 29). The size of the letters is about $\frac{3}{16}$".—The language is Sanskrit. Besides two benedictive and imprecatory verses, the text contains eight verses treating of the donor and the donee and their ancestors; the rest is in prose. In respect of orthography, it may be noted that the rules of samdhi have been frequently neglected, and that there is a fairly large number of other minor mistakes, omissions of letters, etc. A special point which may be drawn attention to is, that after an anusvâra a consonant is doubled[3] in Mamggi, l. 8, Vêmggi and Trikalimgga, l. 17, pamchchavimśatim, l. 8, kimchcha, l. 30, and in vatsarânâm nnija-, l. 16, but not in other places where the same rule might have been followed.

The inscription is one of the Eastern Chalukya Ammarâja [I.] Vishnuvardhana. It records that the king granted the village of Drujjûru in the Pennâtavâdi-vishaya to Mahâkâla, a general, and son of a foster-sister, of (Ammarâja's grandfather) Châlukya-Bhîma (or Bhîma I.). The Âjñapti of the grant was (the ?)[4] Katakarâja.

[1] See above, p. 129, note 11.

[2] Compare also Dr. Fleet in Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 266, K.

[3] The same rule is observed once (in regard to m) in the preceding inscription C. We also find it occasionally observed e.g. in the inscriptions published in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 39 ff., and Ind. Ant. Vol. XIII. p. 213 ff. See also above, p. 107.

[4] See above, Vol. IV. p. 309, note 1.

The inscription is not dated. Of the localities, the Pennâtavâḍi vishaya is mentioned also in Ind. Ant. Vol. VII. p. 16, l. 39. The village of Drujjûru has by Mr. Sewell been identified[1] with the village of Zuzzûru in the Nandigâma tâluka of the Kistna district, the 'Joodjoor' of the Indian Atlas, map 75, long. 80° 28′ E., lat. 16° 44′ N. Mr. Sewell may be right, but, excepting 'Gooteemookola' which may be Goṭṭiprôlu, I do not find the names of the villages which in the inscription are said to form the boundaries of Drujjûru, anywhere near the 'Joodjoor' of the map.[2]

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.

Commencing with the words 'May the whole world be blessed !,'[1] lines 1-14 give the genealogy, with the lengths of the reigns, as far as the Mahârâja Vijayâditya, the son of Kali-Vishṇuvardhana, in substantially the same manner[2] as the preceding inscription C.

(V. 1.) From his (i.e. Vijayâditya's) younger brother, the Yuvarâja Vikramâditya, sprang that mighty fire-brand to the cotton— the host of his adversaries, the incomparable king Bhîma, who filled the horizon with the fame of his many excellent qualities for thirty years.

His son Vijayâditya (l. 17) went to heaven when he had ruled the Vêṅgi-maṇḍala, joined with the Trikaliṅga forest, for six months.

(Vs. 2-4.) To him was born a son, able to bear the burden of the earth, king Ammarâja, who rules the whole surface of the earth. The kings in a body have resorted to the shade of his lotus-feet; the bow with which he chastises his enemies is glorified in the three worlds.[3] Even the Vidyâdharîs sing to the lute his fame which, white like the jasmine and the moon, has reddened[4] the surface of the earth, the fame of him whose enemies have perished.

He, the asylum of all mankind, the Mahârâja Vishṇuvardhana (l. 22), having called together all the cultivators, headed by the Râshṭrakûṭas, who inhabit the Pennâtavâḍi-vishaya, thus issues a command to them :—

"Be it known to you !

(Vs. 5-8.) King Châlukya-Bhîma had a foster-mother, named Nâgipôṭi ; she was (to him) like a second earth, like a warrior endowed with endurance. She had a daughter, named Gâmakâmbâ, like unto Ambikâ,[5] who drank her mother's milk, sharing it with king Bhîma. She brought forth a son, endowed with strength[6] like Kumâra, the high-spirited Mahâkâla, (who became) a general of king Bhîma. In battle where fire is produced by the clashing together of the opponents' arms, going before his master, this brave one more than once has annihilated the enemy's army.

To him the village of Drujjûru (l. 31) has been given by Us, with exemption from all taxes."

The boundaries are (l. 32) : On the east, the boundary-line of Tâḷugummi ; on the south, the boundary-line of Goṭṭiprôlu ; on the west, the boundary-line of Malkapôramu ; and on the north, the boundary-line of Adupu.

The rest of the inscription warns the people not to obstruct this grant ; quotes two benedictive and imprecatory verses, ascribed to Vyâsa ; and records that (the ?) Kaṭakarâja was the Âjñapti (of this grant).

E.—MASULIPATAM (?) PLATES OF CHÂLUKYA-BHÎMA II.

[A.D. 934-945.]

These plates belonged to Sir Walter Elliot, and are now in the British Museum. From a rather illegible label on the original, they seem to have been obtained through Mr. J. C. Norris from Masulipatam. I edit the inscription which they contain from Sir W. Elliot's own impressions, supplied to me by Dr. Fleet.[7]

---

[1] Instead of this, the other known grant of Amma I., published in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 39 ff., has an Anushṭubh verse, conveying the same meaning.

[2] Verbal differences are : The family name here, in line 6, is Chalukya (not Châlukya) ; in the same line we have Satyâśraya-vallabha (instead of -vallabhêndra) ; in line 8, Indrarâja (instead of Indra-bhaṭṭâraka) ; in the same line, Vishṇurâja (instead of Vishṇuvardhana) ; in line 11, Vishṇuvardhana (instead of Vishṇurâja) ; and in line 13, Vijayâditya-mahârâja (instead of only Vijayâditya).

[3] Maṇḍala-traya (the bhû-maṇḍala, gagaṇa-m°, and dyu-m°.) is equivalent to tri-lôka.

[4] Or 'has gladdened the inhabitants of the earth.'

[5] I.e. the goddess Pârvatî.

[6] Kumâra, the god of war, also is śakti-yukta, i.e. 'furnished with a spear'(śakti-dhara).

[7] Compare Dr. Fleet in Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 270, N.

These are three copper-plates, the first and last of which are inscribed on one side only, and each of which measures about 7⅛" broad by 3¾" high. They have high rims, and are strung on a ring, about 4¾" in diameter and ⅜" thick, which had been cut already when the original came under Dr. Fleet's notice. To the ring is attached a circular seal which is about 2¼" in diameter. It bears, in relief on a countersunk surface, across the centre, the legend śrî-Tribhuvanâṁkuśa ; above the legend, the sun and moon, two sceptres (or perhaps lamp-stands, or chowries), an elephant-goad, and a boar, standing and facing to the proper left ; and below the legend, a conch-shell and a floral device. The engraving is good ; the letters throughout shew marks of the working of the tool.—The writing for the greater part is well preserved ; but sides i, ii*a* and iii, towards the ends of the lines, have been subjected to the action of fire or some corrosive fluid, and in a few places the first and third plates are corroded right through. The characters belong to the southern class of alphabets, of the time and part of the country to which the inscription belongs. The consonants throughout have the later, cursive forms, and the later form is used also in the case of the initial i (in ittham. l. 22). The sign of the medial au is very similar to one of the signs of the medial ô, so that it is difficult to distinguish between the two signs. Special signs are used for the final n (in mâsân, ll. 9 and 15), and m (in °triṁśatam, l. 7, °viṁśatim, l. 8, etc.), but not for the final t (in °pâlayat, ll. 7 and 17), which is denoted by the ordinary sign for ta, with the sign of virâma above it. The size of the letters is about $\frac{3}{16}$". The language is Sanskṛit, except that one or two Telugu words occur in the description of the boundaries, in lines 32 and 33. In line 28 we have the unusual word pañcha-vârî, the meaning of which apparently is similar to that of the more common pañcha-kula. Besides two benedictive and imprecatory verses, the text contains nine verses treating of the donor and the donee ; the rest is in prose. The grant has been written out somewhat carelessly, and in lines 8 and 9 contains two grossly incorrect statements. In respect of orthography, too, the text shews a fairly large number of mistakes, owing to the disregard of the rules of saṁdhi, the omission of single letters and whole syllables, etc.

The inscription is one of the Eastern Châlukya Châlukya-Bhîma [II.] Vishnuvardhana, but the first of these two names does not actually occur in the text, which describes the king only as 'the son of Mêḷâmbâ and Vijayâditya.' It records that the king, on the occasion of the sun's progress to the north, granted a field at the village of Âkulamannaṇḍu in the Gudravâra-vishaya to a student of the kramapâṭha named Viddamayya, a son of the Sôma-sacrificer Mâdhava, who was a son of Tyâkkiya, a student of the kramapâṭha and inhabitant of Vaṅgipaṟṟu. No Âjñapti is mentioned.

The inscription is not dated. Of the localities, the Gudravâra vishaya has been spoken of above, p. 123. The village of Vaṅgipaṟṟu is mentioned also in Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 416, l. 26 ff. ; perhaps it is 'Vaṅgipuram, Indian Atlas, map 76, long 80° 27′ E., lat. 16° 8′ N. Âkulamannaṇḍu, as Dr. Fleet points out to me, is the 'Aukulmanaud' of map 95, long. 81° 10′ E., lat. 16° 15′ N.

The donee of this grant, Viddamayya,[1] is the donee also of the Pâganavaram grant of Châlukya-Bhîma II., published ibid. Vol. XIII. p. 213 ff., in which (in line 49) the name of his father's father is given as Tûrkama (not Tyâkkiya).

Ant.* Vol. XIII. p. 213, l. 15 (in one of the earliest inscriptions which give 48 years as the duration of the king's reign); Vol. XIX. p. 429, l. 37; and Vol. XIV. p. 56, l. 13.

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.

Kubja-Vishṇuvardhana (l. 6)— the brother of Satyâśraya-vallabhêndra, who adorned the family of the Châlukyas (l. 5) who are of the Mânavya gôtra and are Hâritiputras (l. 1)— ruled over the Veṅg[i]-maṇḍala for eighteen years ; his son Jayasiṁha (l. 7) for thirty-three (years) ; Vishṇuvardhana (l. 7), the son of his younger brother Indra-râja, for nine (years) ; his son Maṅgi-yuvarâja (l 8) for twenty-five (years) ; his son Jayasiṁha (l. 8) for thirty-three[8] (years) ; his son[9] Kokkili (l. 9) for six months ; having expelled him, his eldest brother Vishṇuvardhana (l. 9) (ruled) for thirty-seven (years) ; his son Vijayâditya-bhaṭṭâraka (l. 10)

[2] I cannot decide whether the syllable which follows upon hâ is thi or dhi ; after pûja three syllables are quite illegible in the impression. Perhaps the first half of the verse should be read yad grihê-tithi-pûjâyâṁ pâda-prakshâlan-âmbhasâ.

[4] This sign of punctuation is superfluous ; it may have been struck out already in the original.

[5] Here one akshara is quite illegible, and another is obliterated, the plate being corroded through.

[6] Between krama and kshêtraṁ about seven aksharas are illegible.

[7] Read s=aiva.

[8] This should have been 'thirteen.'

[9] This should have been 'his younger brother from a different mother' or simply 'his younger brother.'

for eighteen (years); his son Vishṇuvardhana (l. 11) for thirty-six (years); his son Vijayâditya-Narêndramṛigarâja (l. 11) for forty-eight[1] (years); his son Kali-Vishṇuvardhana (l. 12) for one year and a half; his son, the Mahârâja Guṇaka-Vijayâditya (l. 13), for forty-four (years); Châlukya-Bhîma (l. 14), the son of his younger brother, the Yuvarâja Vikramâditya, for thirty (years); his son Vijayâditya (l. 14) for six months; his eldest son Amma-râja (l. 15) for seven years; having expelled his son Vijayâditya, who had been inaugurated with the necklet and by the tying on of the tiara,[2] (and who was still) a child, Tâh-âdhipa (l. 16) (ruled) for one month; (and) Vikramâditya-râja (l. 17), the son of Châlukya-Bhîma, ruled the earth for eleven months.[3]

(Vs. 1-3.)[4] (Now) the son of Mêḷâmbâ and Vijayâditya protects the earth, having tied on the hereditary tiara. He has uprooted the haughty adversaries and reinstated his relatives.

He, the asylum of all mankind, Vishṇuvardhana (l. 21), the Mahârâjâdhirâja and Paramêśvara, who is most devoted to religion, having called together the cultivators, headed by the Râshṭrakûṭas, who inhabit the Gudravâra-vishaya, thus issues a command to them (l. 23):—

(Vs. 4-9.) There was an inhabitant of the great village of Vaṅgipaṟṟu, Tyâkkiya, a student of the kramapâṭha, of the Gautama lineage.[5] His son was Mâdhava, a Sôma-sacrificer, devoted to Janârdana (Vishṇu). His son, again, is Viddamayya, a student of the kramapâṭha, eminent in religious learning and full of manliness; whose hospitality purifies the family to the seventh generation;[6] whose[7] sons and grandsons, youths eloquent at committee-assemblies, are honoured by the chief people who have made them serve on the committee of five; who engages in holy performances, follows Manu's guidance, and is not weary of repeating the Vêdas and the syllable ôm.

[1] Compare Dr. Fleet in Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 100.

[2] This seems to me to indicate that Vijayâditya had been inaugurated both as Yuvarâja and as king, the former by the necklet and the latter by the tying on of the tiara (paṭṭabandha). At any rate, there can be no doubt that the kaṇṭhikâ and the paṭṭabandha are two separate insignia. Regarding the necklet (kaṇṭhikâ) as a sign of the wearer having been appointed Yuvarâja, compare South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 47, l. 14, where Vikramâditya, who in five other inscriptions is called Yuvarâja, is described as vilasat-kaṇṭhikâdâma-kaṇṭha, 'one on whose neck there was the glittering necklace;' and see the passages quoted by Dr. Fleet in Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 103, note 27. In Bâṇa's Kâdambarî, Nirṇaya-Sâgara Press ed p. 222, it is said of Chandrâpîḍa, immediately after his inauguration as Yuvarâja, that he was abhishêka-darśanârtham=âgatêna saptarshi-maṇḍalên=êva hârêṇ=âliṅgita vakshaḥsthalaḥ, 'his breast was embraced by the pearl-necklace, which was like the constellation of the seven Rishis, come there to view the inauguration-ceremony.' On the other hand, ibid. p. 214, the paṭṭabandha (in the shape of the ushṇîsha) is enumerated among the insignia which are bestowed at the inauguration of kings. Compare also l. 18 of the text of this inscription.— Six of the published inscriptions state merely that Vijayâditya was expelled while he was still a boy.

[3] On the omission of the reign of Yuddhamalla, see Dr. Hultzsch's remarks in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 44.

[4] I do not think it necessary to give a full translation of the verses here and below.

[5] I.e. of the Gautama gôtra.

[6] Compare, e.g., Ind. Ant. Vol. VI. p. 29, l. 10 of the text of the inscription.

[7] Compare South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 45, l. 28, where the first half of verse 8 of our inscription occurs, also with the word vâra-gôshṭhishu. Vâra here and in pañcha-vârî probably denotes the member of a committee; the word occurs, by itself and in vâra-pramukha, in an apparently similar sense, in the Sîyaḍônî inscription, Ep. Ind. Vol. I. p. 173 ff. The meaning of pañcha-vârî perhaps is similar to that of the more common pañcha-kula; compare with it also the word pâñchâlî in line 16 of the Nepâl inscription in Ind. Ant. Vol. IX. p. 173. According to the late Dr. Bhagvanlal Indraji (ibid. p. 171, note 26) temples and endowments, at the present day, are administered in Nepâl by committees called guṭṭhî (gôshṭhî).

Âkulamannaṇḍu, which[1] . . . . Dâmôdara, a student of the kramapâṭha because he is his grandson."

The boundaries are (l. 32): On the east, a large rivulet;[2] on the south, a rivulet; on the west, the boundary-line of Kraṅkaṭavvâ; and on the north, the same.

The rest of the inscription warns the people not to obstruct this grant, and quotes two benedictive and imprecatory verses.

F.—MASULIPATAM PLATES OF AMMA II.

These plates also were found, some twenty years ago, in the vernacular record room of the Collector's office at Masulipatam, and are now in the Madras Museum. The inscription which they contain has been already published, by Mr. R. Sewell, in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. VIII. p. 74 ff.;[3] I re-edit it from two excellent impressions, taken and supplied to me by Dr. Fleet.

These are three copper-plates, the first and last of which are inscribed on one side only, and each of which measures about 8¼″ broad by 3½″ high. They have high, very sharp rims, and are strung on a ring, about 4¼″ in diameter and ⅜″ thick, which had been cut already before this record came under Dr. Fleet's notice in the year 1884. To the ring is attached a circular seal, about 2⅜″ in diameter. It bears, in relief on a countersunk surface, across the centre, the legend śrî-Tri[bh]uvanâṁkuśa; above the legend, a boar, standing and facing to the proper right, and surmounted by the sun; in front of the boar, a conch-shell with the moon above it; and behind the boar, an elephant-goad; and below the legend, a floral device.— The writing is good, and generally in an excellent state of preservation; but a small piece of the first plate is broken off at the lower proper right corner, causing the loss of two aksharas, which can be easily supplied. The characters belong to the southern class of alphabets, of the time and part of the country to which the inscription belongs. With regard to individual letters,[4] it is sufficient to state that a special sign is used only for the final n (in mâsân, ll. 8, 13 and 15, °ddhatân, l. 16, and dattavân, l. 25). The size of the letters is between $\frac{3}{16}$″ and ¼″.— The language is Sanskṛit, except that several Telugu words are used in the description of the boundaries, in lines 26-30. Besides one benedictory verse, four verses occur in the genealogical part of the text; the rest is in prose. The orthography does not call for any special remarks.

The inscription is one of the Eastern Châlukya Ammarâja [II.] Vijayâditya, also called Râja-mahêndra. It records[5] that the king granted some fields at the village of Pâmbaṟṟu in

[1] The illegible words perhaps stated that the field formerly belonged to Dâmôdara, of whom Viddamayya (although called his pautra) probably was a daughter's son.

[2] According to Campbell's Teloogoo Dictionary the Telugu word kôḍu means 'a rivulet, the branch of a river;' in Kanarese, the same word means 'the peak or top of a hill.'

[3] Compare also Dr. Fleet in Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 271, Q.

[4] I am doubtful about the form of the initial i which occurs towards the end of line 25. It has not come out clearly in the impressions.

[5] It should be noted that the sentence in lines 22-25, which records the actual grant, although preceded by the usual ittham=âjñâpayati, is not worded like an order, but merely states the fact that the king made the grant, and that the donor is spoken of in the third person, as Ammarâja, instead of being denoted, in the ordinary way, by some form of the pronoun of the first person (ahaṁ dattavân, or asmâbhir=dattam). Moreover the first two words (atha tasyâḥ, 'now to the son of that Pammavâ') of the sentence suggest the idea that it was taken from some other record in which the donee's mother had already been spoken of, and that the grant was made in consequence of something or other, done by her or her son.

the Gudrâvâra-vishaya to the Yuvarâja Ball[â]ladêva-Vêlâbhaṭa,[1] also called Boḍḍiya, the son of (the lady) Pammavâ (of) the Paṭṭavardhinî (family).[2] No Âjñapti is mentioned.

The inscription is not dated. Of the localities, the Gudrâvâra vishaya has been spoken of above, p. 123; the villages which are mentioned I am unable to identify.[3]

1 In the original the first name is written Ballaladêva, probably by mistake; the name Vêlâbhaṭa also occurs in Ind. Ant Vol. XIII. p. 250, l. 36.

3 Mr. Sewell, in *Ind. I find 'Guntasalah' in the Indian Atlas, map 95, long. 81° E., lat. 16° 12 N.; about 11 miles north (not south) of it, 'Paumur;' and about 4 miles west (not north) of Paumur, 'Vailpoor.'

[4] -mahârâjô râjâdhirâja- perhaps has only been written by mistake for -mahârâjâdhirâja-.

[5] Read °rakô.

[6] Originally Gudrâvârâ- was engraved, but the sign of the last â has been struck out.

[7] One would have expected cha after this.

[8] In the description of the boundaries which follows, there are several expressions which I do not understand, and I am unable to state with confidence which of the names in it are names of villages. The word pannasa is also found in Ind. Ant. Vol. XIII. p. 250, l. 30, and paṭu apparently ibid. Vol XIV. p. 59, l. 73.

[9] This may possibly have to be read Raṭṭêḍi-. [10] Read tûrpuna.

[11] I make the correction in this word, because the word is spelt pannasa above, and in Ind. Ant. Vol. XIII. 250, l. 30. [12] Read sa. [13] Metre: Ślôka (Anushṭubh).

Lôkamahâdêvî, in substantially the same manner[1] as lines 1-30 of the inscription edited and translated in Ind. Ant. Vol. VII. p. 15 ff.

He,[2] the asylum of the whole world, Vijayâditya (l. 21) the Mahârâja, the Râjâdhirâja,[3] Paramêśvara and Paramabhaṭṭâraka, thus issues a command to all the cultivators, headed by the Râshṭrakûṭas, who inhabit the Gudrâvâra-vishaya:—

Now to the son of that (lady of the) Paṭṭavardhinî (family), named Pamnavâ, viz. to the Yuvarâja Ball[â]ladêva-Vêlâbhaṭa, named Boḍḍiya, Ammarâja Râjamahêndra[4] gave the Nômi field (and) the Pûtaśu[pa]ri[ya ?] field in the southern quarter of the village of Pâmbaṟṟu.

The boundaries of these two fields are (l. 25): [of the first field], on the east, the Inda[nî]-cheṟuvu (tank); on the south, the field of Raṭṭ[ô]ḍi; on the west, the margin of the field of Su[gu ?]mmû; and on the north, the pannasa east of a field of Vêlpu; [of the second field], on the east, the pannasa of Dâmapiya; on the south, a big road; on the west, a river; and on the north, the pannasa . . . . . . of Ganthaśâla.

[He] also [gave] a house-field [the boundaries of which are]: On the east, ... on the south, ... on the west, ... and on the north, the court of audience.

Lines 30-32 warn the people not to obstruct this grant, and quote a benedictive verse, ascribed to Vyâsa.

No. 17.—CHEBROLU INSCRIPTION OF JAYA; AFTER SAKA-SAMVAT 1135.

BY E. HULTZSCH, PH.D.

This inscription is engraved on the four faces of the right one among two pillars in front of the gôpura of the Nâgêśvara temple at Chêbrôlu in the Bâpaṭla tâluka of the Kistna district. I edit it from an excellent inked estampage, prepared in 1897 by Mr. H. Krishna Sastri, B.A. The inscription is in very good preservation. The letters are so clear and well-formed that it can be read as easily as print. The alphabet is Telugu, and the languages are Sanskṛit verse (lines 1-110 and 149-158) and Telugu prose (ll. 110-149).

The inscription opens with some invocations (verses 1-4). Then follows the genealogy of the (Kâkatîya) king Gaṇapati, who traced his descent from the Sun (v. 5), his son Manu (v. 6), and the family of the Raghus (v. 7 f.). The earliest historical ancestor, mentioned by name, is Durjaya (v. 8). His son Bêta (v. 8) is identical with Betma, alias Tribhuvanamalla, of the Êkâmranâtha and Anmakoṇḍa inscriptions.[5] After him ruled Prôla and his son Rudra (v. 8), Mahâdêva, the uterine brother of the last (v. 9), and Mahâdêva's son Gaṇapati (v. 10), who

[1] Minor differences which may be mentioned are: In line 1 we here have the spelling Hâritî- (instead of Hârîti-), and in line 13 Kollabigaṇḍa (instead of Kollabhigaṇḍa); in line 12 we have only Vikramâditya (instead of yuvarâja-Vikramâditya), and in lines 14 and 15 Tâl-âdhipati and Tâl-âdhipa (instead of Tâlapa and Tâlapa-râja); moreover in line 6 the length of Jayasiṁha's reign is (correctly) given as thirty-three (instead of thirty) years.— Verses 2-4 of our inscription occur, in addition to others, in the inscription mentioned above; verse 2 is also found in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 48, l. 20; and verse 3 ibid. l. 22, and in Ind. Ant. Vol. XII. p. 92, l. 23.

[2] I.e. Ammarâja.

[3] The writer perhaps meant to say only 'the Mahârâjâdhirâja.'

[4] I.e. 'the great Indra (or chief) of kings.'

[5] Ind. Ant. Vol. XXI. p. 197.

was surnamed Chhalamattigaṇḍa[1] (vv. 18 and 19). This genealogy agrees with that derived from other Kâkatîya inscriptions,[2] but acquaints us with the name of Bêta's father, which was hitherto unknown.

Verses 13-27 refer to Jâya (v. 20) or Jâyana (v. 13), a chief whose genealogy is given in detail in the Gaṇapêśvaram inscription of Śaka-Saṁvat 1153.[3] He was the chief of the elephant-troop[4] of king Gaṇapati (v. 13) and received from his sovereign, in Śaka-Saṁvat 1135, the city of Shaṇmukha (v. 20), or Tâmrapurî (v. 19), or Tâmranagarî (v. 27). The two last names are Sanskrit equivalents of the Telugu word Chembrôlu (l. 120), the modern Chêbrôlu. The same town is designated 'the city of Shaṇmukha' on account of its temple of Kumârasvâmin (v. 22 and l. 114), which is now called Nâgêśvara. Jâya is stated to have built a wall round Chêbrôlu (v. 27) and to have repaired its temples (vv. 21-26).

The Telugu portion consists of a list of the villages and shares which were the property of the temples at Chêbrôlu, and of the persons who had granted lamps to these temples. This list was evidently compiled from the records of the temples at the order of Jâya, after he had received Chêbrôlu in gift from king Gaṇapati. The majority of the villages and shares apparently belonged to the temple of Kumârasvâmin (ll. 110 and 114). The temples of Chôḍabhîmêśvara and Vâsudêva (l. 119 f.) cannot now be identified at Chêbrôlu. The temple of Ananta-Jina (l. 121) may have been located on the site of a Śiva temple, in the court-yard of which Mr. Krishna Sastri found three beautifully carved Jaina figures. Two further temples at Chêbrôlu, Mûlasthâna[5] and Kâḍuviṭṭêśvara, are mentioned in verse 26.

Of the villages which are referred to in the Telugu portion I can identify only three, viz. Kollûru (l. 114 f.) in the Rêpalle tâluka;[6] Kolaṅkalûru (l. 116), now Kolakalûru,[6] in the same tâluka; and Vallûru (l. 117), 9 miles south-west of Chêbrôlu in the Bâpaṭla tâluka.

As stated before, king Gaṇapati granted Chêbrôlu to Jâya in the month of Chaitra of Śaka-Saṁvat 1135, the cyclic year Śrîmukha (v. 20), i.e. A.D. 1213-14. This is the earliest authenticated date of Gaṇapati's reign. The inscription itself may have been incised some years later; for Jâya must have required several years for accomplishing the buildings which are referred to in the inscription.

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.

A.— Sanskrit Portion.

The inscription opens with invocations, addressed to the boar-incarnation of Vishṇu (verse 1); to the crescent of the moon on the head of Śiva (v. 2); to Gaṇapati (v. 3); and to Sarasvatī (v. 4). Verse 5 praises the Sun. His son was Manu (v. 6). His son was Ikshvâku, who was followed by Sagara, Kakutstha, Dilîpa, Daśaratha, and Râmachandra (v. 7). In the family of these Raghus was born Durjaya, and from him Bêta; after him ruled Prôla, whose son was Rudra (v. 8). He was succeeded by his uterine brother Mahâdêva (v. 9). His son was Gaṇapati (v. 10). The Madra king, the Pâñchâla, the Vidêha king, the Hammîra, the Hûṇa, and the king of Kâśî are stated to have been waiting at his door (v. 12).

(V. 13.) "Verily, prosperous is Jâyana, the chief of the elephant-troop of that lord of the earth (viz. Ganapati), the leader of all actors and Vêdic scholars, (and) the crest-jewel of the assembly of poets."

He was the favourite servant of king Chhalamattigaṇḍa (viz. Gaṇapati) (v. 18).

(V. 19.) "Now once, returning from the conquest of the kings of the Southern region, the heroic Chhalamattigaṇḍa came on the way to Tâmrapurî, (a city) with fluttering banners."

(V. 20.) "In the Śaka year eleven hundred[1] and thirty-five, in the month Madhu (i.e. Chaitra), in the (cyclic) year Śrîmukha, that king gave (Tâmrapurî) to the glorious general Jâya, saying: 'By my order rule thou from to-day this city of Shaṇmukha (Kumârasvâmin), which has been protected before by the arm of the maternal uncle of thy mother.[2]' "

He (viz. Jâya) repaired and whitewashed all the temples (prâsâda) in that city and placed golden pinnacles (kalaśa) on them (v. 21). He covered with gold the image of Tarakârâti (Kumârasvâmin) (v. 22) and supplied vessels of gold, silver, copper and brass for the worship of this god (v. 23). He gave another image of the same god and images of his two consorts,[3] which were made of base metal (lôha) and were meant to be carried about in procession at festivals (maha), and built an enclosure, a maṇḍapa of Śani (Saturn), and a gôpura of three storeys (v. 24).

(V. 25.) "Then he made for this (god) a maṇḍapa for resting after the sport of the 'great hunt'[4] on the day of every Makara-Saṁkrânti. On the painting in this (maṇḍapa), the gods, assembled for the occasion, regard with a thrill the representations of fierce battles between the gods and the demons."

(V. 26.) "He set up again the liṅga of the Mûlasthâna (temple) and (the liṅga called) Kâḍuviṭṭêśvara, which had both been destroyed by robbers."

He surrounded Tâmranagarî with a wall surmounted by towers (v. 27).

B.— Telugu Portion.

(Line 110.) "The villages of this god[5] (are), from the east towards the south:— Nârikêḍapumbûṇḍi. Mañchedlu. Kôvilambûṇḍi. Komarajambûṇḍi. Veñjedlu. Ummetalapûṇḍi. Suddhapûṇḍi. Sêrapûṇḍi. Mulukalapûṇḍi; of this (village), one half (belongs) to the god [Kumâra]svâmin, (and) one half to the god Anantêśvara at Kollûru. Gummapûṇḍi. Vaḍlambûṇḍi. Gûḍapûṇḍi."

(L. 116.) "(The following are) the shares:— 15 kha[6] of land in the middle of the peacock[7] pillars at Kolaṅkalûru; 15 kha at Vallûru; 2 kha at Kranteṭa; 1 kha at Kaḍuṅgâlu; 1 kha at Kôṟûru."

(L. 119.) "To the god Chôḍabhîmêśvara (belongs) Tâḍlambûṇḍi; (and) to Vâsudêva 12 kha in Kaṭṭempûṇḍi."

(L. 120.) "In the land of Chembrôlu, to the god Ananta-Jina, 5 kha; to the pûjâris, 12 kha; to the 14 Brâhmaṇas of the Brahmapurî[1] of the god, 14 kha; to the superintendent of edicts and the emperor of poets, 2 kha; to the astrologer, 2 kha; to the doctor, 2 kha; to the chamberlain, 2 kha; to the accountant, 2 kha; among the three hundred dancing-girls, to each of all those who serve in the temple from the age of eight years, 2 kha; to the door-keeper, 2 kha; to the dancing-master, 2 kha; to one who beats the big drum, 2 kha; to one who beats the small drum, 2 kha; to the vâsekânu, 2 kha; to each of the singers, 2 kha; to one who blows the white conch, 2 kha; to one who blows the trumpet, 2 kha; to one who plays the gauṟu, 2 kha; to one who beats the kettle-drum, 2 kha; to the jagaḍavâḍu, 2 kha; to one who beats the gong, 2 kha; to one who decorates (the temple), 2 kha; to the garland-maker, 2 kha; to the pîligaragavâḍu, 2 kha; to the potter, 2 kha; to the carpenter, 2 kha; to the blacksmith, 2 kha; to the masons, 4 kha; to the washerman, 2 kha; to the torch-bearer, 2 kha; to Alli-Bôya, 2 kha."

(L. 135.) "These persons shall live in peace, doing their respective work and enjoying (their) shares. And the three hundred Brâhmaṇas shall assign one part (of the produce) of their land to the god and enjoy (the remaining) three parts themselves."

Lines 140-149 record the names of 20 persons who had granted lamps. Verses 28-31 contain the usual admonitions to future kings.

POSTSCRIPT.

Another inscription of Jâya and of his sovereign Gaṇapati (No. 250 of 1897) is engraved on three sides of a pillar which is now built into the roof of the Lingôdbhavasvâmin temple at Tsandavôlu, the capital of the chiefs of Velanâṇḍu.[2] The second face of the pillar is turned towards the roof and is hence invisible. The first face opens with the same passage as the Chêbrôlu inscription published above, and breaks off with the words विस्फुरति फणिभर्त्तुः ख्या- of verse 10. The third face bears five Sanskrit verses, the first of which is incomplete at the beginning, and a passage in Telugu prose. I subjoin the text[3] of the first sixteen lines of the third face.

It appears from the above passage that [king Gaṇapati] put the general Jâya (lines 1 and 5 f.) in charge of a temple of Śaṁkara (Śiva), which had been founded by king Kulôttuṅga-Râjêndra-Goṅka[5] and had been named Paṇḍîśvara (l. 5) after [Paṇḍa],[6] the younger brother of Goṅka I. Jâya provided the god with a fresh pedestal (pîṭha), as the old one had been stolen, placed golden pinnacles (kumbha) on the temple, and granted vessels for the worship. King Gaṇapati himself (l. 15) gave to the temple the village of Gôvâṭikâ or, in Telugu, Gôvâḍa[7] (l. 16).

No. 18.—SRAVANA-BELGOLA EPITAPH OF MARASIMHA II.

By J. F. Fleet, Ph.D., C.I.E.

This inscription, engraved on the four faces of the base of a pillar, which is known as the Kûge-Brahmadêva-kambha, at the entrance to the area occupied by the temples on the Chandragiri hill at Śravaṇa-Beḷgoḷa, was first brought to notice and edited by Mr. Rice, in his Inscriptions at Śravaṇa-Beḷgoḷa, No. 38 (see also, id. Introd. p. 18 ff.). I edit my version of it from ink-impressions supplied to me by Dr. Hultzsch.

The writing consists of one hundred and fourteen lines: twenty-seven on the south face of the pillar, covering an area about 1′ 11½″ broad by 2′ 8″ high; twenty-eight on the west face, covering an area about 1′ 9″ broad by 2′ 10″ high; twenty-eight on the north face, covering an area about 1′ 10½″ broad by 2′ 10″ high; and thirty-one on the east face, covering an area about 1′ 10½″ broad by 3′ 1″ high. Lines 28 to 49 on the west face, and the whole of the writing on the north face, are very much damaged; so much so that no connected passages, worth reproduction, can be made out. The rest of the record, however, is in a state of good preservation.— The characters are Kanarese, of the regular type of the period to which the record refers; and they were boldly formed and well executed throughout. They shew, of course, only the later or cursive forms of the kh (in Mânyakhêṭa, lines 12, 100) and b (e.g. baḷa, line 12, aḷuṁbam, line 84).[8] They do not appear to include the separate distinct form of the lingual ḍ. They shew the virâma, represented by its own proper sign, in bhuṁjan and baḷât, line 2, koḷ, line 112, and ir, line 113; and they do not include any final forms. In lines 1 to 109, the average size of the letters is about ¾″ or ⅞″. In lines 110 to 114, the characters are somewhat smaller and thinner, though of the same type, and possibly written out by the same hand, with the rest of the record: this may be due to the person who wrote out the record, for the engraver, having not enough space to finish it in completely uniform characters; or the passage may be, as suggested by Mr. Rice, a slightly later addition.— The language is Sanskṛit in lines 1 to 83, and Kanarese, of the archaic or stilted type, in lines 84 to the end. There are verses in lines 1 to 4, 28 to 99, and 112 to 114; and I am indebted to Mr. H. Krishna Sastri for several very useful suggestions in dealing with both the text and the translation of some difficult passages in the Kanarese verses. The Sanskṛit gadya or ornate prose, in lines 5 to 27, is not very successful, there not being enough of the usual alliteration and rhyming endings; and there is nothing remarkable in such of the Sanskṛit verses as remain in lines 50 to 55: in the Kanarese portion, however, the author, who was evidently an accomplished writer in that language, has done full justice to his topic and to himself, both in sonorous diction and in sense.— The orthography does not present anything calling for special notice.

The inscription is a panegyric of the Western Gaṅga prince Mârasiṁha II. It mentions him by his proper name in line 42, and throughout the rest of the record by various birudas and epithets, of which the most frequent and evidently the most highly prized one is Noḷambakul-Ântaka, "the Death of the family of the Noḷambas,"— with reference to his successes against the Pallavas of the Noḷambavâḍi thirty-two-thousand province. Lines 110 to 114, at any rate, were written after his death; and they tell us that, a year after his completion of the career of conquest which is the subject of the earlier part of the record, he abdicated, and died in the practice of religion, at the feet of a Jain teacher named Ajitasêna, at Baṅkâpur in the Dhârwâr district,— starving himself to death, like so many others whose epitaphs are at Śravaṇa-Beḷgoḷa, by a three-days fast.[1] And it seems plain, in fact, that, like various others of the records at Śravaṇa-Beḷgoḷa, the whole of this inscription is an epitaph,— not a contemporaneous record engraved while he was still alive. The record is not dated; but it may be placed in A.D. 975, as an inscription at Mêlâgâni shews that Mârasiṁha II. either died or abdicated in or shortly before June-July, A.D. 974.[2] The contents of it are noticed in detail on page 169 ff. below.

I have given, elsewhere,[3] a full exposé of the spurious nature of certain copper-plate grants, which purport to present an unbroken genealogical list of the Western Gaṅgas going back to the second century A.D. And I have shewn how utterly unreliable, for purposes of ancient history, are those grants and a Tamiḻ chronicle, called Koṅgudêśa-Râjâkkaḷ, which purports to furnish information of the same kind. The results of the inquiry on that occasion were, that the earliest authentic Western Gaṅga names are those of Śrîpurusha-Muttarasa, who, pending more precise discoveries, was to be placed somewhere in the period A.D. 750 to 850, and of Śivamâra, who was to be placed either immediately before or immediately after Śrîpurusha-Muttarasa; and that the alleged genealogy was invented in the ninth or tenth century A.D., when all the great families of Southern India were beginning to look up their ancestral belongings and devise more or less fabulous pedigrees. Since the time when I wrote, some new records on stone have been brought to notice, and a critical version has been published of a copper-plate grant which was already known but was not satisfactorily available for use. And these new materials, militating in no way with the conclusions at which I arrived, enable me now to put together a genealogical and successional list of the 'Western Gaṅgas of Taḷakâḍ (see page 153),[4] and to make a first serious attempt to determine the real history and chronology of the family.

[1] For a description of the sallêkhanâ or vow of starving to death, see Mr. Rice's Insc̈rs. at Śrav.-Beḷ. Introd. p. 15 ff. He has pointed out (ibid. p. 17) that, among the various instances of it mentioned in the records there, there is one of even so late a date as A.D. 1809 (No. 72). The process sometimes lasted for three months (No. 2). But it was accomplished in three days in also the case of Mallishêṇa (above, Vol. III. p. 207, verse 72).

[3] Above, Vol. III. pp. 159 to 175.

[4] The numbers before some of the names indicate the members of the family who actually ruled, or probably ruled, over the Gaṅgavâḍi province, and the order in which the succession went. When the exact relationship between two consecutive individuals is not established, dots are used instead of lines.

The Western Gangas of Talakâḍ.

The earliest authentic Western Gaṅga name is that of Śivamâra I. His existence is proved by an inscription at Vaḷḷimalai in the North Arcot district,[1] about eighty miles to the east from the Gaṅga town of Kôlâr, which enumerates four generations,— Śivamâra I.; his son, Śrîpurusha;[2] Śrîpurusha's son, Raṇavikrama; and Raṇavikrama's son, Râjamalla,— and says that Râjamalla, having seen the hill on which the record is, took possession of it, and founded a Jain temple there in token of having done so. The record, indeed, does not tell us that these persons were Gaṅgas. But their names fit in so exactly with the statements in the spurious grants and in certain unquestionable records in the Western Gaṅga territory itself which will be mentioned further on, that no hesitation need be felt about identifying them as Western Gaṅgas of Taḷakâḍ.

There are records in Mysore, which may be ascribed to Śivamâra I. One is a stone inscription at Dêbûr,[3] which mentions him as simply Śivamâra, without any regal title of any kind, but uses a technical expression which stamps him as holding a rank and authority considerably greater than those of any mere local governor.[4] And others are stone inscriptions at Râmpura and Mûḍahaḷḷi,[5] which mention "the Koṅguṇi king (arasa) Śivamâra," and

[2] The spurious grants describe Śrîpurusha (whose proper name, Muttarasa, they do not give) sometimes as the son, and sometimes as the grandson (without mentioning the father's name), of Śivamâra I.; to Śrîpurusha they allot two sons, Śivamâra II. and Vijayâditya; and they represent Râjamalla as the son of Vijayâditya (see the tables, above, Vol. III. pp. 161, 177): and curiously enough, it is the pretended earlier records, from Hosûr, Nâgamaṅgala, and Maṇṇe (for the last, see page 160 below, note 7), which wrongly represent Śivamâra I. as the grandfather of Śrîpurusha; while the Sûḍi grant, purporting to be written nearly a century and a half after the Maṇṇe grant, correctly speaks of the two persons as father and son.— This short but valuable record from Vaḷḷimalai disposes finally of one step in the fictitious pedigree, viz. the step which some of the spurious grants place between Śivamâra I. and Muttarasa (see, also, page 156 below, note 5).

[3] Mr. Rice's Epigraphia Carnatica, Vol. III., Nj. 26.— Mr. Rice has preferred to allot this record to the second Śivamâra.— This record mentions a person named Ereya. With this person Mr. Rice identifies the Mahârâja Eramma of an inscription at Madûr (ibid. Ml. 68), and the Erea or Eḷea of an inscription at Mûḍahaḷḷi (ibid. Nj. 132), and the Ereha-Vemmaḍi of a spurious record at Gaṭṭavâḍi (ibid. Nj. 199, with a lithograph) which purports to be dated Śaka-Saṁvat 111. He thus refers the Madûr and Mûḍahaḷḷi records, as well as that at Dêbûr, to the time of Śivamâra II. And he alters the date of the Gaṭṭavâḍi inscription from Ś.-S. 111 to Ś.-S. 711, so as to bring the record on to A.D. 789-90,— sufficiently near to the period of Śivamâra II. The Gaṭṭavâḍi inscription, however, has the later cursive form of the b, in selabyeyara, line 10, and bâḷim, line 11: therefore it cannot be placed before A.D. 804 (see page 155 below, note 8); and the general style of the characters suggests a period at least a century later than even that time.

[4] The expression in question is prithivî-râjyaṁ-geyu, or keyu, "to reign over the earth." It is properly a technical expression of paramount sovereignty (see the second edition of my Dynasties of the Kanarese Districts in the Gazetteer of the Bombay Presidency, Vol. I. Part II. p. 428, note 4); but the exact way in which it is to be applied, has always to be determined by the context and general surroundings. The Western Gaṅgas of Taḷakâḍ were not paramount sovereigns, except occasionally. They belonged to the class of great feudatory nobles, who were more or less independent in their own hereditary territories, and whose position is always very clearly recognisable, if the records are studied attentively, from the various technical titles and expressions that are so carefully used or abstained from. The Silâhâras of Karâḍ, and the great feudatory nobles of some other families, used the expression sukha-saṁkathâ-vinôdadiṁ râjyaṁ-geyu, or, in Sanskṛit, sukha-saṁkathâ-vinôdêna râjyaṁ kṛi. The expression properly used by the Western Gaṅgas, in their own province, was prithivî-râjyaṁ-geyu; and it will be found in almost all of their records which exist in their own hereditary territory: to the contrary I can quote, at present, only râjyam uttar-ôttaraṁ saluttam-ire (another expression of, strictly, paramount sovereignty) in the Kûlagere inscription of the time of Ereyappa, and the use of the purely subordinate expression âḷu, 'to govern,' in the cases of Ereyappa in the Bêgûr inscription, and of Bûtuga II. in the Âtakûr inscription. On the other hand, the proper expression to denote their position and authority outside their own province of Gaṅgavâḍi, was âḷu; and we find this duly used in the case of Mârasiṁha II. in the inscriptions at Adaraguñchi, Guṇḍûr, and Hebbâḷ, and even in the case of Pañchaladêva in the inscription at Muḷgund.

[5] Ep. Carn. Vol. III., Nj. 50, 127. The Râmpura inscription, again, has been assigned by Mr. Rice to Śivamâra II. But the use of the title arasa is a strong indication that the records are to be ascribed to the first Śivamâra. Muttarasa became eventually a Mahârâjâdhirâja and Paramêśvara; in the amplified form Dharma- use the same technical expression of high position. These three records are not dated in any era. And there is nothing in the contents of them to enable us to establish any synchronisms, and so to assign an exact date to them. But the characters of the Dôbûr inscription are attributable to any time within about fifty years on either side of A.D. 800.[1] The period of the record will be determined more closely further on.[2]

The authentic existence of the second of the four persons mentioned in the Vallimalai inscription, viz. Śrîpurusha, had already been established[3] by some undeniably genuine stone records at Talakâḍ,[4] Sivâra,[5] and Sivarpatna,[5] in Mysore. The Talakâḍ inscription, which is dated in his first year,[6] and the inscription at Sivâra, give him the full style of "the Mahârâja Prithuvi-Kongupi-Muttarasa-Śrîpurusha;" while, of the Sivarpatna inscriptions, one styles him "the Mahârâja Śrîpurusha," and the other, which is dated in his twentieth-odd year,—perhaps the twenty-ninth,[7]—calls him "the Konguni Mahârâja Śrîpurusha:" evidently, Muttarasa was his name, and Śrîpurusha, "husband of Fortune," was a biruda. Like the records of Śivamâra I., these records of Muttarasa,— and also those which will be mentioned further on,— are not dated in any era; and they do not contain anything by means of which synchronisms can at present be established. But they are, similarly, to be referred, on palæographic grounds, to the period A.D. 750 to 850, or thereabouts. And one particularly instructive character,— the old square form of the letter b,[8]—

Mahârâjâdhirâja (regarding which, see page 163 below, note 2), the use of the first of these two titles was continued by all his descendants from Raṇavikrama onwards; and it does not seem likely that his son Śivamâra II. would revert to the simple designation arasa.— Another inscription at Mûḍahalli (Nj. 126) is probably also of the time of Śivamâra I.; but the name of the prince is illegible.

[1] I write on the authority of an ink-impression, which Mr. Rice kindly sent for my inspection. I have not had the means of examining the Râmpura and Mûḍahalli records in the same way.

[2] The spurious Hallegere grant (Ep. Carn. Vol. III., Md. 113, with a lithograph) cites a date in the month Jyêshṭha (May-June), Saka-Saṁvat 635 expired, falling in A.D. 713, as being in the thirty-fourth year of Śivamâra I., and so would place the commencement of his rule in A.D. 679-80. This latter date is altogether too early. And it is not likely that the record has even hit off a true date for him in A.D. 713.— The Nâgamangala grant would place the commencement of the rule of his successor Śrîpurusha-(Muttarasa) in A.D. 727-28 (see page 156 below, note 2); and this, with the Hallegere grant, would give Śivamâra I. a rule of forty-eight years, immediately before a rule of seventy-eight years by his son!

[4] Ep. Carn. Vol. III., TN. 1; with a lithograph.

[6] Prathama-vijaya-saṁbatsaraṁ Kârttige punname-andu; lines 3, 4.

[7] The words 'vijaya-sa[ṁ]vatsara[ṁ], followed by the aksharas irppa, are quite clear, in line 2. I conjecture that what follows them stands for ttombattaneyoḷu. But the passage (and, in fact, the whole of the remainder of this record) has been so spoilt in painting the stone for photography, that it is a matter of conjecture only. Since writing this note, I have found an indication that Mr. Rice would take the record to be dated in the twenty-eighth year (Ind. Ant. Vol. XIII. p. 188). The aksharas tteṇṭaneyoḷu, however, seem insufficient for the space and for the marks shewn in the photograph.— This practice of painting inscriptions by hand for photography cannot be too strongly condemned: it presents the records as they appear to the eye of the person who paints them, and not as they really are; it introduces mistakes, or at least doubt, in even the clearest passages,— for instance, the lithograph of the Talakâḍ inscription of Muttarasa shews in the word toṁbaṁttaṟu, line 9, an anusvâra in the second syllable which one cannot believe to be in the original, and the word Kadabûr or Kaḍabûr in one of the Sivarpatna inscriptions, contrasted with what reads at first sight as Kadambûr or Kaḍambûr in the other record at the same place (see page 161 below, note 1), is another case in point; it often results, as in the date of this Sivarpatna inscription, and in fact throughout the record, in the creation of arbitrary and fantastic signs which render whole passages quite unintelligible; and, in short, it prevents altogether the purely mechanical reproduction which is absolutely necessary for the satisfactory and critical study of the records.

[8] It occurs in the Talakâḍ inscription (see the lithograph) in the words sambatsaram (line 4) and toṁbattaṟu (line 9).— For the importance of the old or square and later or cursive forms of kh and b, as a help in fixing the dates of records of the period with which we are dealing, see above, Vol. III. pp. 162, 163. Records containing the cursive forms of these two letters, cannot be placed before A.D. 804. The square forms continued in use up to A.D. 866. But the cursive forms,— the introduction of which, into epigraphic records, seems,to be connected with the encouragement that was given to the Jains and their literature in the time of the Râshṭrakûṭa king proves that at any rate they cannot have been engraved much, if at all, after A.D. 850; while the general palæographic standard of the Taḷakâḍ inscription points distinctly to a time somewhat earlier than A.D. 800, as the date of the preparation of that record. It is, thus, not impossible that the person or persons who fabricated the spurious Hosûr and Nâgamaṅgala grants, had available, or hit off, true dates for him, in A.D. 762 and 776-77, or at any rate in the latter year.[1] But it is not possible that, in A.D. 776-77, he had already been ruling for fifty years, as is claimed by the Nâgamaṅgala grant;[2] for, the synchronisms which are established for some of his descendants, in both lines, shew plainly that the long life and rule, which he undoubtedly enjoyed, were made out by continuing into the ninth century A.D. The approximate limits for him will be indicated below.

There are other records of Śrîpurusha-Muttarasa in Mysore, at Dêvalâpura, Varuṇa, Pûrigâli, Hemmige, Bannûr, and Hoḷalavâḍi.[3] The first four of them belong to the earlier part of his career: for, the Pûrigâli record styles him "the Mahârâja Śrîpurusha," as also, apparently, does the Dêvalâpura stone; the Varuṇa record calls him "the Koṅgaṇi Mahârâja Śrîpurusha;" the Hemmige record describes him as "Pṛithivî-Koṅgaṇi-Muttarasa," without any title; and the Bannûr record probably styles him "Pṛithu[vi-Koṅguṇi-Muttarasa-Śrî]purusha," again without any title. All of the records which contain such a reference at all, use the same technical expression of high position and authority which is used in the case of Śivamâra I.[4] And the Hoḷalavâḍi inscription marks an epoch in his career, by also giving him the paramount titles; it styles him "the Koṅguṇi Mahârâjâdhirâja and Paramêśvara Śrîpurusha."

As far, therefore, as individual names go, the authentic history of the Western Gaṅgas of Taḷakâḍ starts with these two persons, Śivamâra I. and his son Śrîpurusha-Muttarasa.[5] Records giving names for earlier times may, of course, be obtained hereafter; for,

Amôghavarsha I. (A.D. 814-15 to 877-78),— were then in use, and are found in a record of A.D. 865. And a record of much about the same date shews both the forms of b, mixed (loc. cit. p. 163, note 1).— The old or square form of the b occurs in also one of the Sivarpatna records of Muttarasa, in the word Kadabûr, line 5; and doubtless also in the same word in line 3 of the other Sivarpatna record, where, however, the true appearance of the original has been much spoilt by painting the stone for photography. I do not find a b of either form in the Sivâra record. And none of the four records appears to include a kh.— My attention has been drawn to the fact that a cursive kh appears, in the lithograph, at the end of line 12 of the Harihar grant of Vinayâditya of A.D. 694 (Ind. Ant. Vol. VII. p. 300). An inspection, however, of the photograph, which is given with the lithograph in P. S. and O.-C. Inscrs. No. 17, will shew that this is only due to an injudicious touching up by hand of a damaged square kh; this was done at a time when it was thought more important to publish clear and easily legible lithographs, than to produce absolutely mechanical and faithful facsimiles which an unpractised eye might find it difficult to deal with.

[1] Just as a possibly true year may have been available, or was hit off, for Bûtuga II., in the spurious Sûdi grant (see page 167 below, note 2) which refers itself to his time. But calculations shew that the details of the dates cited in the Hosûr and Sûdi grants are not correct for the years that are quoted; and this detracts a good deal from any value that might be attributable to them.

[2] This would place the commencement of his rule in A.D. 727-28. And, as the spurious Suradhênupura grant (see page 160 below, note 7), which cites the Sarvajit saṁvatsara, Śaka-Saṁvat 729 (expired), = A.D. 807-808, as the third year of Śivamâra II., would thus place the commencement of the rule of Śivamâra II. in A.D. 805-806, this would give Muttarasa a total rule of seventy-eight years.

[3] Ep. Carn. Vol. III., Mv. 25, 55; Ml. 87; TN. 53, 113; Nj. 23.— He is apparently also mentioned as Śrîpurushayya in an inscription at Belavatte (ibid My. 6), and as Muttarasa in another inscription at Bannûr (ibid. TN. 115), from which Mr. Rice has inferred (ibid. Introd. page 3) that Bannûr was his birth-place. This Bannûr inscription mentions also the name of Ereyappa, and therefore seems to be, not of Muttarasa's own time, but about a century later.

[5] Mr. Rice (Ep. Carn. Vol. III. Introd. pp. 3, 7) has placed between them a Mârasiṁha I., whom he identifies with the alleged and unnamed son of the first Śivamâra and father of Śrîpurusha-(Muttarasa) who is mentioned in some of the spurious grants (see page 154 above, note 2); quoting "the Salem grants" as his authority for doing so. But there is no foundation in fact, of any kind, for this. The alleged generation between Śivamâra I. and Śrîpurusha-Muttarasa has now been disposed of by the Vaḷḷimalai record (page 154 above).

that the Western Gaṅgas were a people of importance and power at least a couple of centuries before the time of Śivamâra I., is shewn by the fact that the Kadamba king Mṛigêśavarman claims to have defeated them.[1] But it is not at all probable that they will give a connected genealogy: the plainly imaginary nature of some of the names which the spurious grants place before that of Śivamâra I., is a strong indication that materials for compiling a genuine earlier pedigree were not available even then; and the most that we may expect, is, a few detached notices.[2] All that we know as yet about the Gaṅgas during the centuries immediately following the time when Mṛigêśavarman was in conflict with them, is, that they were conquered by the Western Chalukya king Kîrtivarman I. in the period A.D. 567-68 to 597-98,[3] and again by his son Pulikêśin II. about A.D. 608,[4] and that the Harihar grant of Pulikêśin's grandson Vinayâditya dated in A.D. 694, speaks of them as hereditary servants of the Western Chalukya kings.[5] And it is plain that they first came prominently to the front on the downfall of the Western Chalukya dynasty. Even then, they did not immediately assert the independence which, undoubtedly, they subsequently enjoyed for a while. That they felt their way gradually to the latter step, is shewn by the facts that Śivamâra I., while adopting a technical expression indicative of considerable power, used simply the title of arasa, "king," and that Muttarasa, though making an advance on this, did not at first assume any higher designation than that of Mahârâja, and developed into a Mahârâjâdhirâja and Paramêśvara, as which he figures in the Holalavâḍi record, only at some later time. Now, the last Western Chalukya king, Kîrtivarman II., lost the northern and central portions of his dominions to the Râshṭrakûṭas, under Dantidurga, before A.D. 754. He was still in possession of the southern territory up to A.D. 757. But shortly after that time he was completely overthrown by Dantidurga's successor, Krishṇa I.,— say, about A.D. 760. And the same period saw the extinction of another great dynasty of Southern India,— that of the original Pallavas of Conjeeveram, who also, through the possessions that they held in the Nolambavâḍi province, must have had much to do, though not so directly as the Western Chalukyas, with the Gaṅgas of Talakâḍ. The last great Pallava king known to us,— and, unquestionably, the last representative of his line,— was Pallavamalla-Nandivarman, Nandipôtavarman, or Nandipôtarâja, son of Hiraṇyavarman.[6] He was a contemporary of the Western Chalukya king Vikramâditya II., at some time in the period A.D. 733-34 to 746-47. And we have records dated in his twenty-first, twenty-second, and fiftieth years.[7] Now, he succeeded to the Pallava throne after a distant kinsman, Paramêśvaravarman II.;[8] the latter was preceded by his father, Narasiṁhavarman II.; and Narasiṁhavarman was preceded by his father, Paramêśvaravarman I., who was contemporaneous at some time in the period A.D. 655 to 680 with Vikramâditya I.,

And the person whom Mr. Rice thus misplaces,— through a mistake which is to be attributed to the imperfect original rendering of the Udayêndiram grant of Hastimalla-Pṛithivîpati II. in Mr. Foulkes' Manual of the Salem District, Vol. II. p. 369 ff.,— is Mârasiṁha I., grandson of the second Śivamâra (see page 162 below).

[1] Ind. Ant. Vol. VI. p. 25; for "the family of Tuṅgagaṅga," read "the lofty family of the Gaṅgas."

[2] This much, at any rate, is certain,— as I have already said (above, Vol. III. p. 175),— that nothing will ever be obtained to authenticate such dates as those of A.D. 248 and 466 which two of the spurious grants purport to give for Harivarman and Avinîta-Konguṇi, unless it upsets in some way or other the genealogy that is asserted by the grants; and, on the other hand, if the genealogy asserted by the grants (or anything like a real basis from which it can have been concocted) is ever authenticated, then the dates will be upset, in favour of much later ones. The genealogy and the dates cannot possibly stand together.— It is not likely, however, that there is any real basis of ancient fact for either the asserted genealogy or these two dates; see the Postscript, page 174 below.

[6] See Dr. Hultzsch's South-Ind Inscrs. Vol. II. p. 342 ff.

[7] They are, respectively, the Udayêndiram grant (South-Ind. Inscrs. Vol. II. p. 361); the Kaśâkûḍi grant (ibid. p. 342); and an inscription at the Pañcapâṇḍavamalai hill (above, Vol. IV. p. 136, A). In respect of the last of them, we must understand that it is dated in the fiftieth year in which he was still reigning; not in simply the fiftieth year from the commencement of his reign, cited at a time when he himself was dead,— a rendering, suggested as possible by the editor of the record, for which there is no substantial authority.

[8] And there was, perhaps, also a short intermediate reign, of Mahêndravarman III.

the great-grandfather of Vikramâditya II. In such circumstances, it is not at all probable that Pallavamalla-Nandivarman can have completed the fiftieth year of his reign between A.D. 733 and 747. It is much more likely that his reign did not even commence till A.D. 715 or later. And fifty years from that point would bring him on to just the time to which we may refer Śivamâra I. and Muttarasa. The spurious Maṇṇe grant, indeed,[1] would carry him on to even later times: it says, speaking of Śivamâra II., that "his forehead was adorned by a fillet (of royalty) placed there with their own hands, when they performed (his) anointment to the sovereignty, by the two ornaments of the Râshṭrakûṭa and Pallava lineages named Gôvindarâja and Nandivarman, who were (already) anointed on (their own) foreheads."[2] Gôvindarâja seems to be the Râshṭrakûṭa king Gôvinda III., whose reign began about A.D. 783-84 and ended in A.D. 814-15: Śivamâra II. was undoubtedly contemporaneous with him towards the end of his reign; and we shall find reasons, further on, for believing that he did assist or recognise the succession of Śivamâra II. to the leadership of the Gaṅgas. Nandivarman must be Pallavamalla-Nandivarman, son of Hiraṇyavarman.[3] He cannot have had anything to do with Śivamâra II. at so late a time as the date of his succession on the death of Muttarasa. And it seems that, mixed up with a real act of Gôvinda III. towards the second Śivamâra, the Maṇṇe grant has preserved an anachronistic reminiscence of a real act of Pallavamalla-Nandivarman towards the first Śivamâra; viz. that, on the downfall of the Western Chalukyas, he formally recognised Śivamâra I. and crowned him as the chief, more or less feudatory, of a powerful tribe on the borders of his own outlying province of Noḷambavâḍi. The date of A.D. 760, mentioned above as the closely approximate time of the complete extinction of the Western Chalukya power, is within the period to which Śivamâra I. is to be referred, and within the time to which the reign of Pallavamalla-Nandivarman may be carried on. And we shall probably be very near the truth, if we take A.D. 755 as the initial date of the succession of Śivamâra I. to the leadership of the Western Gaṅgas, and A.D. 760 as the time when he was recognised by Pallavamalla-Nandivarman. We may then place the accession of Muttarasa about five years later, in A.D. 765; and, as there are indications, as already mentioned, that he had a long rule, and as we have a record which is actually dated in perhaps his twenty-ninth year, we may assume that he ruled for about forty years, up to A.D. 805. As the record which seems to be dated in his twenty-ninth year still gives him, like the earlier ones, the title of Mahârâja, it would appear that it was in the last ten years of his time that he threw off all semblage of vassalage and assumed the paramount titles; till then, he must have been more or less feudatory, at first to Pallavamalla-Nandivarman, and then to a kinsman of his own, Vijaya-Narasiṁhavarman, who, as we shall see just below, succeeded to the Pallava throne after Pallavamalla-Nandivarman.[4]

[2] The original, which I am able to quote from photographs which Mr. Rice kindly sent me, runs—(plate iv. a, line 10 ff.)— R[â]shṭraku(kû)ṭa-Pallav-ânvaya-tilakâbhyâṁ mûrddh-âbhishiktạ-Gôvindarâja-Nandivarmm-âbhidhêyâbhyâṁ samanushṭi(shṭhi)ta-râjy-âbhishêkâbhyâṁ sni(ni)ja-kara-ghaṭita-paṭṭa-vibhûshita-lalâṭapaṭṭô* * * * * * * śrî-Śivamâradêva[ḥ*].—I have taken lalâṭapaṭṭa, 'the flat surface of the forehead,' as simply an alliterative expansion of lalâṭa. Otherwise, we might divide the compound, lalâṭa-paṭṭô, and translate "the (hereditary Gaṅga) fillet (of royalty) on his forehead was adorned by (other) fillets placed there with their own hands," etc.; this, however, does not seem so satisfactory a rendering.

[3] It might, perhaps, be said that he is the later Nandivarman, also called Vijaya-Nandi-Vikramavarman, son of Dantivarman (see page 159 below). But this does not seem at all probable. And, if it were so, an anachronism in the other direction would be involved; for, Nandivarman, the son of Dantivarman, cannot be placed as early as A.D. 797, which is the pretended date of the Maṇṇe grant; he cannot be placed before A.D. 804, which is the date that we have for Dantivarman.

[4] The Humcha inscription of A.D. 1077-78—(see Mr. Rice's Annual Report for the year ending 31st March 1891; this record contains a great deal of mythical matter, relating to the Sântara family as well as to the Western Gaṅgas, and is, of course, of no more value than the spurious copper-plate grants in respect of the early history which it pretends to give)—asserts that Śrîpurusha-(Muttarasa) was the first of the Western

We shall revert presently to the descendants of Śrîpurusha-Muttarasa. Meanwhile, we may conveniently notice here another branch of the Western Gaṅga family, which succeeded to the Pallava dominions.

Two virgals or monumental tablets at Âmbûr in the North Arcot district,[1]—which commemorate the death in battle of two heroes, followers of a certain Pirudi-Gaṅgaraiyar, on an occasion when the army of the Nuḷamba, i.e. the Pallava prince of Noḷambavâḍi, attacked the village for a cattle-raid,—cite the twenty-sixth year of a king named Vijaya-Nṛipatuṅga-Vikramavarman. There are other inscriptions of the same king in the Tanjore and Trichinopoly districts.[2] And on palæographic grounds, as well as for reasons connected with the history of that part of the country, it is necessary, Dr. Hultzsch tells us, to place the reign of this Vijaya-Nṛipatuṅga-Vikramavarman before that of the Chôḷa king Parântaka I. (about A.D. 900 to 940). There are also two copper-plate grants of the same king,[3] one of which, obtained at Bâhûr near Pondicherry, and dated in his eighth year, names his immediate ancestors and gives the pedigree that he claimed. That pedigree is, first, the Purâṇic genealogy of the Pallavas, from the god Brahman to the eponymous Pallava, the alleged founder of the family. From his family, the grant says, there were born Vimala, "Koṅkaṇika," and "other kings." When they had passed away, a certain Dantivarman became king. His son was Nandivarman, whose wife was Śaṅkhâ, of the Râshṭrakûṭa family. And their son was Nṛipatuṅgadêva, or Vijaya-Nṛipatuṅgavarman as he is called in the Tamiḻ portion of the grant,—i.e. the Vijaya-Nṛipatuṅga-Vikramavarman of the stone records at Âmbûr and elsewhere. Now, the seal of the other grant of Vijaya-Nṛipatuṅga-Vikramavarman bears the bull-crest of the Pallavas,—in due accordance with the descent that is put forward for him. But we may safely adopt Dr. Hultzsch's suggestions, that the name of "Koṅkaṇika" is a reminiscence of the "Koṅkaṇi" who is represented as the original ancestor of the Western Gaṅgas in the Udayêndiram grant of Hastimalla-Pṛithivîpati II.,[4] and who is, of course, the mythical Koṅguṇivarman whom the spurious grants from Mysore claim as the founder of the Western Gaṅga family; and that consequently, in spite of the Pallava pedigree, a connection with the Western Gaṅgas was claimed by Vijaya-Nṛipatuṅga-Vikramavarman. And we may also safely follow Dr. Hultzsch in his identification of Dantivarman with the Dantiga, king of Kâñchî, whom the Râshṭrakûṭa king Gôvinda III. subdued and levied tribute from in A.D. 804,[5] and in his inference that the Râshṭrakûṭa princess Śaṅkhâ, wife of Nandivarman, was a daughter of Gôvinda's son and successor Nṛipatuṅga-Amôghavarsha I. (A.D. 814-15 to 877-78), after whom her son must have been partly named.

There are also, we are told by Dr. Hultzsch,[6] various stone records, not yet published, which may be attributed with some probability to Dantivarman and Nandivarman: there is a record of Dantivarman in the Vaikuṇṭha-Perumâḷ temple at Conjeeveram;[7] and there are inscriptions at the Viriñchipuram temple in the North Arcot district, and at Śaduppêri, near Vêlûr in the same district,[8] dated in the ninth, forty-seventh, and fifty-second years of a Vijaya-Nandi-Vikramavarman who may be identified with Nandivarman, son of Gaṅgas to assume the designation of Permanaḍi, and that he took it from a Pallava king of Kâñchi, on defeating him. We have already seen that it was Muttarasa who first assumed the paramount titles. And so, though his records have not yet disclosed the use of the designation Permanaḍi by him, the Humcha record very possibly preserves, in the above assertion, a real historical item, mixed up in the usual mythical matter in which it follows more or less the spurious grants. The said king of Kâñchi, defeated by him, would be his kinsman Vijaya-Narasiṁhavarman,—defeated when he threw off the yoke of vassalage.

Dantivarman. And at Ukkal in the North Arcot district there are inscriptions[1] giving the name of a Kampavarman, or more fully Vijaya-Kampa-Vikramavarman, who may have belonged to the same family with Vijaya-Nṛipatuṅga-Vikramavarman and his ancestors.

But, of more importance for present purposes, is the fact that, at Kîḻ-Muṭṭugûr in the North Arcot district, there is an inscription,[2] dated in the eighteenth year of a king Vijaya-Narasiṁhavarman, which shews, in the sculptures below it, the Western Gaṅga emblems of the elephant and the goose or swan,— the emblems being connected with Vijaya-Narasiṁhavarman himself by the fact that he was, evidently, the maker of the grant that is registered in the record. The name of this person is, characteristically, a Pallava name: but the emblems mark him as a Western Gaṅga; and he has been appropriately described by Dr. Hultzsch as "a Pallava by name, but Western Gaṅga by descent." Now, the alphabet of this record at Kîḻ-Muṭṭugûr is more archaic than that of the Âmbûr inscriptions; and Vijaya-Narasiṁhavarman must, therefore, be placed at any rate before Vijaya-Nṛipatuṅga-Vikramavarman. That he was connected with Vijaya-Nṛipatuṅga-Vikramavarman, and also with Vijaya-Kampa-Vikramavarman, is plainly indicated by the use of the prefix kô, "king," in all three cases, and of the word vijaya, in the Tamiḻ form viśaiya, as part of the proper names: and it appears that one of the grants of Vijaya-Nṛipatuṅga-Vikramavarman actually places a Narasiṁha in the genealogy, before Dantivarman.[3] Whether Kampavarman came before Narasiṁhavarman, or after him, is not yet known. But the retention of the Western Gaṅga emblems by Narasiṁhavarman refers him to a period when the members of this branch of the Gaṅga family had not fully turned themselves into Pallavas. And it seems probable that he was the one who secured the succession to the Pallava dominions. If so, as he must have done it on the death of Pallavamalla-Nandivarman, son of Hiraṇyavarman, we may place his initial date somewhere about A.D. 760 to 770.[4] He was eventually followed by Dantivarman, Nandivarman or Vijaya-Nandi-Vikramavarman, and Vijaya-Nṛipatuṅga-Vikramavarman. And one or other of them, or perhaps Vijaya-Kampa-Vikramavarman, discarded the emblems of the Western Gaṅgas and adopted those of the Pallavas,— thus converting himself into a Pallava, just as the Eastern Chalukyas became Chôḻas in the time of Kulôttuṅga-Chôḻadêva I.[5] The exact connection of Vijaya-Narasiṁhavarman with Śivamâra I. remains to be discovered.

We revert now to the descendants of Śripurusha-Muttarasa. The spurious Sûḍi grant gives the name of Śivamâra II., as his eldest son;[6] and the spurious grants from Suradhênupura and Maṇṇe purport to be records of this person himself.[7] Now, one of the [1] See above Vol. IV. p. 182, note 4.— Two of these inscriptions are at Ukkal, in the Arcot tâluka; and one of them is dated in his tenth year, and the other in his fifteenth year: these two records mention him as Kampavarman. An inscription at Dûśi, near Mâmaṇḍûr in the same tâluka, gives his name in the fuller form of Vijaya-Kampa-Vikramavarman. I am able to quote these details through Dr. Hultzsch's kindness in sending me advanced proofs of some pages of his South-Ind. Inscrs. Vol. III.

[2] Ibid. p. 177; see also p. 182.

[6] This grant (for which, see page 167 below, note 2) would give him the second name of Saigoṭṭa; so, also, the Humcha inscription of A.D. 1077-78 (see page 158 above, note 4). He is evidently the Saigoṭṭa-Śivamâra, an alleged feudatory of a king Amôghavarsha, for whom a record of about the eleventh century A.D., at Kalbhâvi in the Belgaum District (Ind. Ant. Vol. XVIII. p. 309), purports to furnish a date in A.D. 308, 314, or 329 (the details of the date are so incorrect that the exact year which is intended cannot be determined).

[7] These two grants are mentioned by Mr. Rice in his Ep. Carn. Vol. III. Introd. p. 3. The Suradhênupura grant is not yet available in detail. But I am able to quote the Maṇṇe grant from photographs which Mr. Rice was kind enough to send me.— It appears that the Suradhênupura grant cites the Sarvajit saṁvatsara, Śaka-Saṁvat 729 (expired),— A.D. 807-808, as the third year of Śivamâra II., and thus would place the of his rule in A.D. 805-806.— The Maṇṇe grant, however, taking the genealogy as far as

Sivarpaṭṇa inscriptions makes mention of a Śivamâra who was governing the village of Kadabûr or Kaḍabûr,[1]—which may be identified either with the modern 'Kadaburu' in the Guṇḍlupêṭ tâluka of the Mysore district, or with Kaḍaba in the Gubbi tâluka of the Tumkûr district,—in the time of Śrîpurusha-Muttarasa, and in, perhaps, his twenty-ninth year.[2] There is nothing in this record to establish any relationship between this Śivamâra and Muttarasa. But we may take it as tolerably certain that he was a son of Śrîpurusha-Muttarasa, as stated in the spurious grants, and that we have here another authentic name, that of Śivamâra II. We have already noticed the fact that the spurious Maṇṇe grant speaks of a fillet of sovereignty being placed on his head by the Râshṭrakûṭa king Gôvinda III. (from about A.D. 783-84 to A.D. 814-15). Spurious as the record is, there is nothing impossible in the truth of the statement; especially if it is taken in connection with certain statements in the records of Gôvinda III. himself, which tell us that he released from long captivity, and sent back to his own country, one of the Gaṅgas, who had been imprisoned by his father Dhruva.[3] The Râshṭrakûṭa records, indeed, do not disclose the name of the Gaṅga who was thus treated. But the clue to his identity is furnished by the spurious Maṇṇe grant, which asserts that Śivamâra II. made himself famous by being victorious against the armies of the Râshṭrakûṭas, the Châlukyas,[4] and the Haihayas (i.e. the Kalachuris), when they were encamped at a village named Mudukundûr, and that he defeated the countless cavalry of Dhruva which had overrun the whole earth.[5] Śivamâra II. may very well have been entrusted with the command in some war between his father and Dhruva. And we may suppose that, during the campaign, he was eventually defeated, captured, and imprisoned by Dhruva, and that, on Muttarasa's death, he was liberated by Gôvinda III., in order to succeed to the leadership of the Gaṅgas, on which occasion the Râshṭrakûṭa king would very likely crown him,—as the spurious Maṇṇe grant asserts,—with some feudatory crown. This event may be placed somewhere about A.D. 805. The same passages in the Râshṭrakûṭa records tell us that, after no long time, Gôvinda III. found it necessary to re-conquer the Gaṅga, who through excess of pride stood in opposition to him, and to put him in fetters

Śivamâra II., son of Śrîpurusha, then tells us that Śivamâra's son was Mârasiṁha; it then proceeds to record a grant that was made to a Jain temple at Mânyapura with the permission of this Mârasiṁha, who, having attained the position of Yuvarâja, was administering the whole of the Ganga maṇḍala; and then, after specifying the boundaries of the grant, it gives the date, in the month Âshâḍha (June-July), Ś.-S. 719 (expired), falling in A.D. 797. It would thus establish for Śivamâra II. a date, when he either was ruling or else had ruled and passed away, eight years before the commencement of his rule according to the Suradhênupura grant.—A Mârasiṁha, son of Śivamâra II., is not mentioned in any other record that has as yet come to notice. And the person who is introduced in the Maṇṇe grant seems to be the Mârasiṁha I. of the Udayêndiram grant,—in reality the grandson of Śivamâra II.

[1] In this record, the third akshara of this name appears at first sight to be a badly formed mbû; but this must be attributed to the original being spoilt in painting the stone for photography. A place which is undoubtedly the same, is mentioned in also the other Sivarpaṭṇa inscription; there, the third akshara is nothing but bû, and, unless we assume that the painting of the stone has produced the obliteration of an anusvâra over the second akshara, the name is distinctly either Kadabûr, with the dental d, or Kaḍabûr, with the lingual ḍ.

[4] To avoid attributing to the Maṇṇe grant any more anachronisms than are inevitable, we may take this as referring to the Eastern Chalukyas. Narêndramṛigarâja-Vijayâditya II., of that dynasty, is described (see Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 101) as waging war for twelve years, by day and by night, and fighting a hundred and eight battles, with the armies of the Gaṅgas and the Râshṭrakûṭas: the passage, however, does not mention the name of any individual Gaṅga; and the period of Vijayâditya II., A.D. 799 to 843, covered a great deal more than the time of Śivamâra II.

[5] The original runs—(plate iv. a., line 3 ff.)—Mudukundûr-nâma-grâm-ôpavishṭa-Râshṭraku(kû)ṭa-Châḷukya-Haihaya-pramukha-prapi(vî)ra-sanâtha-vallabha-sainya-vijaya-vikhyâpita-prabhâvaḥ [||*] Api chaḥ (read cha) | Dhôr-âśvîyaḥ samantât-prabalam-upagata-vyâpta-dik-chakravâḷaṁ nirjity-âtula-saṁkhyaṁ etc.—Dhôra is the Prâkṛit form of the name of Dhruva; it is used in also the passages referred to in note 3 above.

again. This would probably be about five years later,—say in A.D. 810. And it was doubtless this second imprisonment of Śivamâra II. that let in his younger brother Raṇavikrama to the Western Gaṅga succession.[1]

A copper-plate grant from Udayêndiram in the North Arcot district[2] carries this line of descent three generations further: it mentions, in the lineage of "Koṅkaṇi, the first of the whole Gaṅga race,"—in which lineage, it says, following the spurious grants, there had been born Vishṇugôpa, Hari (i.e. Harivarman), Mâdhava, Durvinîta, Bhûvikrama, and "other kings,"—Śivamâra II.;[3] his son Pṛithivîpati I., otherwise called Aparâjita;[4] Mârasiṁha I., "the light of the Gaṅga family," son of Pṛithivîpati I.; and Mârasiṁha's son, Pṛithivîpati II., otherwise called Hastimalla, "a flamingo in the tank of the Gaṅga family." In the way of historical information, it tells us that Pṛithivîpati I. saved Iriga and Nâgadanta, sons of king Diṇḍi,—one of them from Amôghavarsha, i.e. the Râshṭrakûṭa king Amôghavarsha I. (A.D. 814-15 to 877-78), and the other from the jaws of death; that he fought a battle at a place named Vaimbalguḻi; and that he defeated the Pâṇḍya prince Varaguṇa in the great battle of Śrîpuṟambiya;[5] and that Pṛithivîpati II. received from Madiraikoṇḍa-Parakêsarivarma-Parântaka, i.e. the Chôḻa king Parântaka I. (about A.D. 900 to 940), "the dignity of lord of the Bâṇas,"—i.e. that Parântaka I. conferred on him the leadership of the Bâṇa kingdom,[6] which is defined elsewhere as "the land to the west of the Andhra country."[7] And it registers the fact that, at the request of Pṛithivîpati II., Parântaka I., in the fifteenth year of his reign,—i.e. in or about A.D. 915,—converted the village of Kaḍaikkôṭṭûr, together with Udayaśandiramaṅgalam (Udayêndiram itself), into a brahmadêya, or grant to Brâhmaṇs, which was then called Vîranârâyaṇachchêri after one of his own appellations. The record says that, from the time when the Bâṇa kingdom was conferred on Pṛithivîpati II., it was thought that he was born of the race of Bali, i.e. of the Bâṇa race; and the Tamiḻ portion of it actually calls him Śembiyaṉ-Mâvali-Vâṇarâya, meaning apparently, "(he who was appointed) Mahâbali-Bâṇarâja (by) the Chôḻa king." And it further discloses the fact that, while retaining the Western Gaṅga title of "lord of Nandi (i.e. Nandagiri)," he took the title of "lord of the city of Paṟivipurî,"[8] and assumed the banner of a black-buck and the crest of a bull. It is thus evident that, like his connections who became Pallavas, Pṛithivîpati II. turned himself regularly into a Bâṇa.

[1] Somewhere about the end of the time of Śivamâra II. there was,—if the Kaḍaba grant (above, Vol. IV. p. 332) might be relied on,—a certain Châkirâja, who is described in that record as "king of the whole of the Gaṅga province," in A.D. 813. But I have not found any trace of such a name in the Gaṅga records.

[2] South-Ind. Inscrs. Vol. II. p. 375. It was first brought to notice by the Rev. T. Foulkes, in the Manual of the Salem District, Vol. II. p. 369 ff. But it has only recently been made properly available, by Dr. Hultzsch's critical edition of it; and some remarks by me (above, Vol. III. pp. 165, 167), based on Mr. Foulkes' version of it, require alteration.

[3] The synchronisms which the record establishes for Pṛithivîpati I. and his grandson,—and still more, the actual date of A.D. 915, or closely thereabouts, for the grandson,—oblige us to identify this person with the second Śivamâra, not with his grandfather of the same name.

[4] Dr. Hultzsch has suggested (above, Vol. IV. p. 182) that Pṛithivîpati I. may be the Pirudi-Gaṅgaraiyar who is mentioned in the Âmbûr records of the twenty-sixth year of Vijaya-Nṛipatuṅga-Vikramavarman (page 159 above).

[5] The modern Tiruppiṟambiyam (the 'Thiruparambiam' of the Madras Postal Directory) in the Kumbhakôṇam tâluka of the Tanjore district (see South-Ind. Inscrs. Vol. II. p. 381).

[6] An inscription of Parântaka I. at Sholinghur in the North Arcot district, six years earlier in date (above, Vol. IV. p. 221), also mentions the conferring of the Bâṇa kingdom on Pṛithivîpati II., and the popular belief, from that time, that he belonged to the Bâṇa race; it further gives him the name of Vîra-Chôḻa, and speaks of his defeating some unnamed enemy in the battle of Vallâḻa.

[7] Above, Vol. III. p. 78, verse 7.

[8] In the Sholinghur inscription (see the last note but one) this name appears in a slightly different form; Pṛithivîpati II. is there called "the king of the people of Paṟivai."

In the other line of descent from Śrîpurusha-Muttarasa, the Vaḷḷimalai inscription has given us the names of his son Raṇavikrama, and Raṇavikrama's son Râjamalla.[1] The latter is evidently the Dharma-Mahârâjâdhirâja[2] Satyavâkya-Koṅguṇivarma-Permanaḍi-Râjamalla, "lord of Kovaḷâla, the best of towns," and "lord of the mountain Nandagiri," who is mentioned as the ruling prince in an inscription at Husukûru, in Mysore,[3] dated Śaka-Saṁvat 792 (expired), = A.D. 870-71. This must be taken as his final date. An earlier record, at Doḍḍahuṇḍi in Mysore,[4] mentions him as simply Satyavâkya-Permanaḍi, and his father Raṇavikrama as the Dharma-Mahârâjâdhirâja Nîtimârga-Koṅguṇivarma-Permanaḍi, "lord of Kovaḷâla, the best of towns,"[5] and "lord of the mountain Nandagiri:" this record was written on the death of the father; it tells us that Nîtimârga died, and that there survived, to (render service to) his son Satyavâkya, a domestic official named Agarayya, who is apparently described in the text, and represented in the sculptures above it, as tending Nîtimârga in his dying moments.[6]

The Husukûru inscription of A.D. 870-71, quoted above, mentions also a certain Bûtarasa, who then, in the time of Râjamalla, was governing the Koṅgaḷnâḍ and Pûnâḍ districts, as Yuvarâja. With this person, whom we may conveniently enter in the table as Bûtuga I.,[7] and who, as the Yuvarâja or chosen successor, was in all probability the actual successor,

[1] The spurious Sûḍi grant (see page 167 below, note 2) gives Râjamalla's name, and two of his secondary appellations, correctly,— Satyavâkya-Koṅguṇivarma-Râjamalla. But it calls his father Vijayâditya; as, also, do some other records of the same class.— It is not unlikely that the name of Vijayâditya was borrowed, by a particularly gross mistake, from the Eastern Chalukya dynasty, two members of which had hostile relations with the Gaṅgas: for one of them, Narêndramṛigarâja-Vijayâditya II., see page 161 above, note 4; the other is his grandson, Guṇaka-Vijayâditya III., who, we are told, being prompted by the Râshṭrakûṭa king, conquered the Gangas, at some time in the period A.D. 844 to 888 (see Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 102, and above, Vol. IV. p. 226); in this passage again, there is unfortunately no mention of the name of any individual Gaṅga.

[2] This title means literally "a Mahârâjâdhirâja by or in respect of religion," or by free translation "a pious or righteous Mahârâjâdhirâja." It occurs, in earlier times, unquestionably as a title of paramount sovereignty, in the case of the Pallava king Śiva-Skandavarman. In the Western Ganga records, however, it is an amplification which attracts attention, of the plain title Mahârâjâdhirâja which, coupled with Paramêśvara, is given in the Hoḷalavâḍi inscription (see page 156 above) to Muttarasa, who, in one period of his career, was undoubtedly a paramount king. And the recurrence, in the subsequent Western Gaṅga records, of the same amplified form without any other paramount title, suggests that it was used by the Western Gaṅgas more as a hereditary and honorific designation than with the intention of implying any claim to paramount sovereignty. Like the great feudatory nobles of other families, the Western Gaṅgas were doubtless semi-independent in their hereditary province; but in all other respects they seem distinctly to have acknowledged the supremacy of the Râshṭrakûṭa kings.

[3] Ep. Carn. Vol. III., Nj. 75.

[4] Ibid. TN. 91; with a lithograph. The original stone is now in the Bangalore Museum.— That this record was written not much, if at all, after A.D. 850, is shewn by its containing the old square form of the kh, in vâkhya, by mistake for vâkya, line 6.

[5] Mr. Rice's transcription of the text gives puravarêśvara; but his lithograph shews puraparasvara; while a genuine photograph from the stone itself, sent to me by Dr. Hultzsch, shews clearly puraparêsvara, which may stand either for puravar-êśvara, or for pura-paramêśvara.— These two hereditary titles are used in the records on almost every occasion. But it will not be necessary to repeat them in every instance in the following pages.

[6] He seems to be represented as drawing out from Nîtimârga's left side a dagger with which the death-blow had been given.

[7] The name Bûtarasa is only another form of Bûtuga; other forms are, in Kanarese Bûtayya, and in Sanskṛit Bhûtârya, (see page 166 below); and we may at any time obtain genuine records mentioning Bûtarasa as Bûtuga or Bûtayya. He is, in fact, spoken of as Bûtuga in the Humcha record, and in the spurious Sûḍi grant, which latter record would further give him the biruda of Guṇaduttaraṁga, "the lintel of virtue."— The Sûḍi grant says that he married Abbalabbâ, daughter of (the Râshṭrakûṭa king) Amôghavarsha (I.) (A.D. 814-15 to 877-78). This statement, however, remains to be verified; and it may possibly be based on nothing but the fact that his descendant Bûtuga II. married a daughter of Amôghavarsha-Vaddiga (see page 166 below).— The name Bûtuga is rather a peculiar one, if, as according to Kittel's Kannaḍa-English Dictionary, it means only 'a shameless man; (a boaster).' It is derived from bûtu, which means, according to the same authority, foul, shameless, obscene language; obscenity,' but to which Reeve and Sanderson's Kanarese Dictionary would give the meanings of 'exaggeration, fear, apprehension.

of Râjamalla,[1]—we may venture to identify the Dharma-Mahârâjâdhirâja Satyavâkya-Koṅguṇivarma-Permanaḍi of an inscription at Biḷiûr, in Coorg,[2] which cites a date in the month Phâlguna (Feb.-March), Śaka-Saṁvat 809 (expired), falling in A.D. 888, as being in his eighteenth year, and thus fixes the commencement of his rule in A.D. 870 or 871. And, as we know that not long after this date there was a ruler of the Gaṅgavâḍi province named Ereyappa, whose son Râchamalla was killed by Bûtuga in or before A.D. 940, to Bûtuga I. we may also ascribe an inscription at Iggali, in Mysore,[3] which, again, mentions the ruling prince as the Dharma-Mahârâjâdhirâja Satyavâkya-Koṅguṇivarma-Permanaḍi, and mentions Ereyappa also, and further speaks of a certain Râcheya-Gaṅga, who, it tells us, died fighting against the Noḷamba, i.e. the Pallava prince of the Noḷambavâḍi province, in the twenty-second year, i.e. in A.D. 891-92.[4]

Bûtuga I. must have been succeeded by Ereyappa. We have a record of this prince, mentioning him by the name of Ereyappa, in the Bâgûr inscription,[5] which describes him as a spotless moon in the sky that was the family of the Gaṅgas, and says that, having deprived all his enemies of power, he was governing the Gaṅgavâḍi ninety-six-thousand as an united whole,[6] and which further mentions a war between the army of the Nâgattara and a certain Vîra-Mahêndra[7] who was probably one of the Pallavas of Noḷambavâḍi, and an attack upon a person named Ayyapadêva.[8] And, from the way in which the date fits in, we may ascribe to

[1] The spurious Sûḍi grant (see page 167 below, note 2) would make him a grandson of Râjamalla, giving the intermediate names of Nîtimârga-Koṅguṇivarma-Ereganga, son of Râjamalla, and of a second Satyavâkya-Koṅguṇivarma-Râjamalla, son of Ereganga and elder brother of Bûtuga-(Bûtarasa). As Yuvarâja, he may, of course, have been the grandson, quite as well as the son, brother, or nephew, of Râjamalla. But I cannot find anything to authenticate any of the alleged intervening names.

[2] Ind. Ant. Vol. VI. p. 102, No. II., with a lithograph; Coorg Inscriptions, p. 5.— As is to be expected from its date, this record shews the later cursive form of the b, in Biḷiûr, line 8, beddore, line 9, elpadimbarum, line 10, and several other words, and the later cursive kh, in likhittam, line 13. In sarvba, for sarvva, line 7, and in some similar combinations, and in Beḷiûru, line 14, it has a form of b which might suitably be called the "open" b.

[4] I am dealing with only the really important and useful records,— mostly those which can be used to determine the succession or may be referred to specific individuals, through their giving personal names or dates, or which otherwise present points of leading interest. In Ep. Carn. Vol. III., a record at Kyâtanhaḷḷi (Sr. 147, with a lithograph) mentions Satyavâkya-Koṅguṇivarma-Permanaḍi and Ereyappa, and another at Mûḍahaḷḷi (Nj. 130) mentions Permâḍi, Mahâdêvî, and Ereyappa; inscriptions of a Satyavâkya at Râmpura (Sr. 148, with a lithograph), at Kappusôge (Nj. 68), at Gaṭṭavâḍi (Nj. 97), and at Nagarle (Nj. 155), may be records of Satyavâkya-Bûtuga I. (or of some other Satyavâkya), and so also may another inscription at Kotûr, in Coorg (Ind. Ant. Vol. VI. p. 103, No. III; Coorg Inscriptions, p. 6); and an inscription at Paṭṭasômahaḷḷi (Sr. 134) may be referred either to Bûtuga I. or to Ereyappa. But these records teach us nothing, and cannot be placed with any certainty until we obtain other records, assignable without any doubt, mentioning the priests, etc., whose names occur in them.

[5] Ep. Ind. Vol. I. p. 346; for a lithograph, see the frontispiece of Mr. Rice's Mysore Inscriptions.

[6] The expression in the original is êka-chchhattra-chchhâyeyoḷ, "under the shadow of a single umbrella." Its purport is explained by such passages as that which tells us that Gaṅgarâja, the minister of the Hoysaḷa prince Vishṇuvardhana, having driven out all the feudatories of the Chôḷa king from the Gaṅgavâḍi province, "brought under one umbrella all that (territory) which had become (split up into various separate) districts,"—nâḍ-âdud-ellaman-êka-chchhatrada-mâḍi (Ep. Carn. Vol. III., Ml. 31, line 34; and compare a similar passage in Inscrs. at Śrav.-Beḷ. No. 90).

[7] Mr. Rice (Ep. Carn. Vol. III. Introd. pp. 4, 5) seems to identify this person with the Mahêndrâdhirâja of an inscription at Baragûr, who was the son of Pallavâdhirâja and of Jâyabbe, younger sister of a Gaṅga who had the appellation of Nîtimârga, i.e., apparently, of Ereyappa himself.— From a transcription which Mr. Rice has kindly sent me, it appears that the Baragûr inscription describes the younger sister of Nîtimârga as also a daughter of Râjamalla. This Nîtimârga, therefore, was a son of Râjamalla.

[8] I have said (Ep. Ind. Vol. I. p. 350) that it is possible,— but by no means a certainty,— that this person may be the Western Chalukya Ayyaṇa I., of the time between the period of the Western Chalukyas of Bâdâmi and the period of the Western Châlukyas of Kalyâṇi. Mr. Rice, however (see Ep. Carn. Vol. III. Introd. p. 4, him an inscription at Kûlagere, in Mysore,[1] which mentions the ruling prince as the Dharma-Mahârâjâdhirâja Nîtimârga-Koṅguṇivarma-Permanaḍi, and is dated Śaka-Saṁvat 831 (expired), = A.D. 909-910. The Iggali inscription has given a date for him in A.D. 891-92. That, however, is a date for him in the time of his predecessor. And, from an inscription at Honnâyakanhaḷḷi,[2] it would appear that his rule began in Ś.-S. 815 (expired), =A.D. 893-94.[3] It would seem that he did not secure the succession without some opposition. We have, just after the date mentioned above for the commencement of his rule, an inscription at Tâyalûr, in Mysore,[4] i.e. within the Western Gaṅga territory, which is dated Ś.-S. 817 (expired), = A.D. 895-96, and mentions, as then reigning or ruling, a certain Noḷambâdhirâja,— that is to say, the Pallava prince of the Noḷambavâḍi province. The explanation of this is evidently furnished by the statement in the Bêgûr inscription that, when that record was drawn up, Eṟeyappa was governing, after having deprived all his enemies of their power; plainly, his accession to the leadership of the Western Gaṅgas was opposed, and chiefly by the Pallavas of Noḷambavâḍi, who succeeded in occupying for a time part at least of his hereditary possessions.

From the Âtakûr inscription,[5] we know that Eṟeyappa had a son named Râchamalla I.,[6] and that it was by fighting and killing Râchamalla that another member of the family, Bûtuga II., obtained the succession. As will be seen further on, this occurred in or before A.D. 940. We have no records attributable to Râchamalla I. But the length of time from the initial note 3), appears to have obtained evidence that Ayyapadêva was a Pallava.—The evidence seems to be the Hirê-Bidanûr inscription (mentioned by Mr. Rice as the Goribidnur inscription in Mys. Inscrs. Introd. p. 45), which, according to a transcription that Mr. Rice has kindly sent me, distinctly mentions Ayyapadêva as Pallav-ânvaya and as having also the name of Noḷambâdhirâja.

[1] Ep. Carn. Vol. III., Ml. 30.—As I have already intimated (page 152 above), my identifications, upon which this part of the succession is arranged, must be taken as tentative for the present: the miscellaneous subordinate items of information, contained in the records at present available, do not help at all; and we want more facsimiles in the case of records which are not dated. But my identifications are at any rate more satisfactory than those proposed by Mr. Rice. Thus (ibid. Introd. p. 4, and see also his Classified List which follows page 36), he would identify the Nîtimârga of the Kûlagere inscription, and Eṟeyappa, with, respectively, the Nîtimârga and his son Satyavâkya (whom I identify with Raṇavikrama, the son, and Râjamalla, the grandson, of Muttarasa) of the Doḍḍahuṇḍi inscription (page 163 above); whereas, the date of the Kûlagere inscription, and the period in which we must of necessity place Eṟeyappa, are altogether inconsistent with the use of the old form of the kh in the Doḍḍahuṇḍi inscription. And he would further identify with the Nîtimârga of the Kûlagere inscription the Satyavâkya (whom I identify with Bûtuga I.) of the Iggali inscription (page 164 above); whereas, it seems clear to me that a Nîtimârga is not to be identified with any Satyavâkya.

[2] Mentioned by Mr. Rice in Ep. Carn. Vol. III. Introd. p. 4. I assume that Mr. Rice means that this record actually contains the appellation of Nîtimârga, and that he does not simply allot it to a Nîtimârga (namely, to the Nîtimârga to whom he would allot also the Doḍḍahuṇḍi and Kûlagere records) on some merely inferential grounds.

[3] Here, again, I am dealing with only the really important records. Other records of Eṟeyappa, in Ep. Carn. Vol. III., are TN. 115, at Bannûr, and Nj. 78, at Husukûru. For others which mention him with his predecessor, and for one which may belong to either of them, see page 164 above, note 4. And we may perhaps allot to him records of a Nîtimârga at Kaṇṇegâla (TN. 140), and at Gaṭṭavâḍi (Nj. 98).

[4] Ep. Carn. Vol. III., Md. 13.—Mr. Rice (ibid. Introd. p. 4) speaks of it as "apparently an independent grant by Noḷambâdhirâja," but also suggests that Noḷambâdhirâja was "perhaps subordinate to Nîtimârga," i.e. to Eṟeyappa. I think, however, that the true explanation is that which I suggest. He also (loc. cit.) proposes to treat as "an intrusive Pallava inscription" another record at Tâyalûr (Md. 14, with a lithograph), which is dated in the month Śrâvaṇa (July-Aug.), Śaka-Saṁvat 829 (expired), falling in A.D. 907: here, however, there is nothing to refer the record to any particular family; it only registers a grant made by villagers, and it does not mention the ruler at all.

date of Ereyappa, A.D. 893-94, to the latest date that we have for Bûtuga II., A.D. 949-50, renders it probable that he did actually succeed to the leadership of the Gangas, though perhaps for no long period; and the Râshṭrakûṭa record which mentions his overthrow and fixes the latest date for it, seems, in fact, to describe him as actually in possession.

The next in succession was Bûtuga II.,[1] whose name appears in Kanarese in also the form of Bûtayya and in Sanskrit as Bhûtârya, and who had the full appellation of the Dharma-Mahârâjâdhirâja Satyavâkya-Koṅguṇivarma-Permanaḍi-Bûtuga,[2] and the birudas of Gaṅga-Gâṅgêya, "a very Kârttikêya, Karṇa, or Bhîshma, among the Gaṅgas," Gaṅga-Nârâyaṇa, "a very god Vishṇu among the Gaṅgas," Nanniya-Gaṅga, "the truthful Gaṅga," and Jayaduttaraṁga, "the lintel of victory."[3] It has already been noted that the Âtakûr inscription tells us that he obtained the succession by fighting and killing Râchamalla I., son of Ereyappa; and, that this occurred in or before A.D. 940, is shewn by a Râshṭrakûṭa grant from Dêôlî, dated in that year, which mentions the fact of the overthrowing of Râchamalla (therein called Rachhyâmalla), and implies that Bûtuga (therein spoken of as Bhûtârya) received material assistance from the Râshṭrakûṭa king Kṛishṇa III.[4] The Hebbâl inscription of A.D. 975, from the Dhârwâr district,[5] tells us that, during the reign of the Râshṭrakûṭa king Kṛishṇa II., Bûtuga II. married Rêvaka, who was a daughter of Vaddiga (grandson of Kṛishṇa II.) and an elder sister of Kṛishṇa III., and that he received, as her dowry, the districts known as the Puligeṟe or Purigeṟe three-hundred, which was the country that lay round, and was named after the ancient name of, Lakshmêshwar, in the Miraj State, about the centre of the Dhârwâr district,— the Beḷvola three-hundred, which lay in the same neighbourhood and included, as various records shew, Gadag, Aṇṇîgere, Kurtakôṭi, and Nargund, in Dhârwâr, Hûli in the Belgaum district, and Kukkanûr in the Nizâm's Dominions,— the Kisukâḍ seventy, which was a small district of which the chief town was Paṭṭadakal, the ancient Kisuvoḷal and Paṭṭada-Kisuvoḷal, in the Bâdâmi tâluka, Bijâpur district,— and the Bâge, Bâgenâḍ, or Bâgaḍage seventy, which was another small district lying round Bâgalkôṭ, the ancient Bâgaḍage and Bâgaḍige, the chief town of the Bâgalkôṭ tâluka in the same district. This marriage must be placed somewhere towards the end of the reign of Kṛishṇa II.; say, about A.D. 910.[6] The same record mentions also another wife of Bûtuga II., named Kallabbarasi, and his mother Bhujjabbarasi, the elder sister of Baṭṭayya, Siṁhavarmarasa, and Chechchapayya. Of the time of Bûtuga II. himself, we have an inscription at Âtakûr, in Mysore,[7] dated in the Saumya saṁvatsara, Śaka-Saṁvat 872

[1] The Humcha inscription and the spurious Sûḍi grant represent him as a younger brother of Râjamalla, i.e. Râchamalla I. This statement, however, has not yet been verified.

[2] The spurious Sûḍi grant would give the first component of this appellation in the form of Satyanîtivâkya; this, however, is an anomalous form, which is not at all likely to be authentic.

[3] These birudas are given in the Âtakûr inscription. In the last of them, jayad is, by euphonic combination, for jayada, the Kanarese genitive singular of jaya.

[4] The original says, according to Dr. Bhandarkar's translation, that Kṛishṇa III. "planted as it were in a garden in the field of the Gaṅgas the holy tree of Bhûtârya, having uprooted the poisonous tree of Rachhyâmalla" (Jour. Bo. Br. R. As. Soc. Vol. XVIII. p. 251); so, also, the Karâḍ grant of A. D. 959,—"he planted in Gaṅgapâṭî, as in a garden, the pure tree Bhûtârya, having uprooted the poisonous tree Rachhyâmalla" (above, Vol. IV. p. 289).

[5] Above, Vol. IV. p. 350.

[6] Kṛishṇa II. succeeded to the throne in or very soon after A.D. 878; and the latest date that we have for him is A.D. 911-12. According, therefore, to the actual wording of the Hebbâḷ inscription, the marriage may have taken place at any time between A.D. 878 and 912. But we must place it as late as possible in that period; because Kṛishṇa II. was a great-grandfather at the time of the marriage, and Maruḷadêva, the son of Bûtuga II. and Rêvaka, was not born;— so the record tells us,— until the reign of Vaddiga, i.e. between A.D. 933 and 940.

[7] Ep. Ind. Vol. II. p. 168; since then, it has been edited by Mr. Rice also (Ep. Carn. Vol. III., Md. 41, with a lithograph), to whose rendering I owe the name of the hound Kâli in line 10.— Mr. Rice (ibid. Introd. p. 6, and see the Classified List of the Inscriptions) would connect with Bûtuga certain inscriptions at Varuṇa in Mysore (My 35 to 37 and 40 to 45), which appear to mention Châlukya princes named Narasiṁha and Gugga or Goggi,

(current),=A.D. 949-50, which records the facts that Krishna III. fought and killed the Chôla king Râjâditya at Takkôla,—the modern Takkôlam, on the south-east of Arconum Junction in the North Arcot district, Madras Presidency,[1]—and that Bûtuga II., being pleased with the prowess in battle of his follower Manalarata, of the lineage of Sagara, who had the biruda of Bûtugana-ankakâra, "the warrior or champion of Bûtuga," and the hereditary title of "lord of Valabhî, the best of towns," bestowed on him, as a mark of favour, a hound named Kâli; that the hound was set at a big boar on a hill in the village of Belatûr in the Kelale district; that the hound and the boar killed each other; and that, in commemoration, the stone which bears the record, and which has on it a sculpture shewing the fight of the hound and the boar, was set up at Âtakûr, and a small grant of land was made. It is an addition at the top of this record which tells us that Bûtuga II. had, previously, obtained the Gangavâdi province by fighting and killing Râchamalla I., the son of Ereyappa; and it adds that it was Bûtuga II. who actually slew the Chôla king Râjâditya, and that Krishna III. then gave to Bûtuga II., i.e. confirmed him in the possession of, the four districts mentioned above as forming the dowry of Rêvaka, and also gave him the Banavâsi twelve-thousand province.[2]

The Hebbâl inscription tells us that the son of Bûtuga II. and Rêvaka was Maruladêva; but it does not say that he ruled, and perhaps implies that he did not. To Maruladêva and Bijabbe, it says, there was born a son, whom it perhaps names as Rachcha-Ganga; and he, it says, did rule: we have, however, as yet, no records attributable to him.

Next in succession, it tells us, there came another son of Bûtuga II., by another wife named Kallabbarasi, viz. Mârasimha II., who had, as we learn from it and other records, the full a god named Bûtêsvara, which seems to commemorate either Bûtuga II. or his predecessor Bûtarasa-Bûtuga I., and a battle between two persons called Bûdiga and Polukêsi, the latter of whom, he suggests, may have been the Western Châlukya king Irivabedanga-Satyâśraya,—whose period, however (A.D. 997 and 1008), is half a century too late for Bûtuga II. Till we have lithographs, it is impossible to make any satisfactory use of these inscriptions.

[1] I owe this identification to Dr. Hultzsch, who tells me that at Takkôlam there is, among other records, an inscription of Krishna III. himself.—Takkôlam is a postal town, in the Wâlâjâpêt tâluka, and, as such, is duly mentioned in the Indian Postal Guide, which I had overlooked.

[2] A copper-plate grant from Sûdi, in the Dhârwâr district (above, Vol. III. p. 158, with a partial lithograph), purports to be another record of Bûtuga II., and to be dated in the month Kârttika (Oct.-Nov.), falling in A.D. 938 or 939, of the Vikârin samvatsara, coupled with Saka-Samvat 860 expired, perhaps correctly (according to the northern luni-solar system of the sixty-year cycle), or perhaps by mistake for 861 expired (according to the southern luni-solar system). It presents a perfectly possible date for Bûtuga II.; and it quotes his birudas correctly. On the other hand, it includes the fictitious genealogy, before Sivamâra I., which is given in the unquestionably spurious records; in mentioning a real historical fact, viz. the marriage of Bûtuga II. with a daughter of Amôghavarsha-Vaddiga, it leaves us to infer that her name was Dîvalâmbâ, whereas the name given in the Hebbâl inscription is Rêvaka; the characters in which it is engraved present a decidedly later general appearance than those of the Âtakûr inscription, and of any records, that I am acquainted with, belonging to within fifty years or so after the asserted date; and the details of the date do not work out correctly for either of the two years to which it is possible to refer them. These points present reasons for viewing the record with great suspicion. And there is the following additional reason for stamping it conclusively as a spurious record: namely, it mentions the victory over the Chôla king Râjâditya as a fact already accomplished in A.D. 938 or 939; whereas, not only is this event not mentioned in the Dêôlî grant of A.D. 940, which enumerates the achievements of Krishna III. pretty fully, and would certainly not have omitted such an event as that, if it had occurred, but also the Âtakûr inscription distinctly places the event in A.D. 949-50.—I have said (above, Vol. III. p. 176) that the characters of the Sûdi grant seem to be distinctly more modern than those of the Korumelli grant of Râjarâja I. (Ind. Ant. Vol. XIV. p. 48, and lithograph), which was issued in or after A.D. 1022. The Korumelli grant is from the eastern part of Southern India. Among the western records, the characters of the Sûdi grant resemble most closely those of the grant of the Silâhâra prince Mârasimha, of A.D. 1058 (Cave-Temple Inscriptions, No. 10 of the brochures of the Archæological Survey of Western India, p. 102, and lithograph).—The Sûdi grant purports to supply various other items of history in connection with Bûtuga II. (amongst them, that after the defeat of Râjâditya, he besieged Tañjâpurî, i.e. Tanjore, which was possibly a fact; see above, Vol. III. p. 283), and a few in connection with some of his predecessors. I do not quote them; because it is undesirable to encumber my pages, further than cannot well be avoided, with alleged names and events for which we have no reliable authority.

style of the Dharma-Mahârâjâdhirâja Satyavâkya-Koṅguṇivarma-Permanaḍi-Mârasiṁha, with the birudas[1] of Gaṅga-Kandarpa, "the Gaṅga god of love," Gaṅga-Vidyâdhara, "the Gaṅga Vidyâdhara or demigod,"[2] Gaṅgachûḍamaṇi, "the crest-jewel of the Gaṅgas," Gaṅgamaṇḍalika, "the Gaṅga chieftain," Gaṅgavajra, "the Gaṅga diamond or thunderbolt," Gaṅgarasiṁha, "the lion of the Gaṅgas," Gaṅgaroḷgaṇḍa, "the hero among the Gaṅgas," Guttiya-Gaṅga, "the Gaṅga of Gutti," with reference, apparently, to the town of Gutti in the Bellary District,[3] Noḷamb-Ântaka, "the Death of the Noḷambas," and Noḷambakuḷ-Ântaka, "the Death of the family of Noḷambas," i.e. of the Pallavas of the Noḷambavâḍi province, Chaladuttaraṁga, "the lintel of firmness of character," Dharmâvatâra, "the incarnation of religion," Jagadêkavîra, "the sole hero of the world," and Maṇḍalika-Triṇêtra, "a very god Śiva among chieftains." He is evidently the Satyavâkya-Permanaḍi, in connection with whom an inscription at Kârya,[4] in Mysore, cites a date in the month Mâgha (Jan-Feb.), falling in A.D. 968, of e Prabhava saṁvatsara, Śaka-Saṁvat 890 (current), as being in his fifth year,— thus u. his initial point in A.D. 963 or 964. And an inscription at Mêlâgâni,[5] in Mysore, which mentions him as Permaḍi-Mârasiṁha, tells us that news that he had passed away[6]

[1] Some of them occur in the Hebbâḷ inscription, and all of them in the Śravaṇa-Beḷgoḷa epitaph.— He was, perhaps, also known as Râjachûḍâmaṇi, "the crest-jewel of kings;" in which case, he was the father-in-law of the Râshṭrakûṭa prince Indra IV. (see page 170 below, note 4): but this is not certain.

[2] The word vidyâdhara denotes a "particular kind of good or evil genius attending upon the gods" (Monier-Williams' Sanskṛit Dictionary).

[3] But, taking gutti as a corruption of gupti, we might render this biruda by "the secret or reticent Gaṅga," on the analogy of Nanniya-Gaṅga, "the truthful Gaṅga," which occurs in the case of his father (see page 166 above).

[4] Ep. Carn. Vol. III., Nj. 192.— The day is called Peṛetale-divasa, "the day of Śiva (peṛe-tale, peṛe-dale, = 'he on whose head is the crescent'): the same day of Śrâvaṇa is mentioned in an inscription of A.D. 907 at Tâyalûr (ibid. Md. 14; noticed on page 165 above, note 4); and the same day of Mârgaśîrsha, in an inscription at Râmpura (ibid. Sr. 148; noticed on page 164 above, note 4). One would think, at first sight, that the expression denotes the day of the fourteenth tithi of the dark fortnight, on which there is the Śivarâtri-festival in honour of Śiva, in every month, all through the year; in which case, we might compare with it the expression Śiva-tithi, "the tithi of Śiva" (in No. 292 of Prof. Kielhorn's Śaka dates; Ind. Ant. Vol. XXIV. p. 202), applied in verse to Mâgha kṛishṇa 14, which in another record (No. 325 in the same list) has the fuller name of Śivarâtri-mahâtithi, also in verse. But it really denotes the eighth tithi, as rendered by Mr. Rice in his translations: thus, a verse in the Chaturvarga-Chintâmaṇi, Vol. III. Part II. p. 865, line 9, for which I am indebted to Prof. Kielhorn, says— saptamî Saptasaptês=tu Ashṭamârtês=tath=âshṭamî, "the seventh is Sûrya's tithi, and the eighth that of Śiva;" and it appears to be applied to the eighth tithi of both the bright and the dark fortnights. In a similar way, the spurious Sûḍi grant (see page 167 above, note 2) names the eighth tithi of the bright fortnight of Kârttika "the tithi of Nandîśvara," i.e. of Śiva as the lord of the bull Nandi; and the Nandîśvara day of the bright fortnight of Phâlguna, without any specification of the tithi, is mentioned in the Peggu-ûr inscription of A.D. 978 (see page 173 below). — In this last record, the name is followed by a word which has not been satisfactorily settled yet. Mr. Kittel read Nandîśvaraṁ talpa-devasam=dge, and translated "when the Nandîśvara (day) was the chair-day" (Ind. Ant. Vol. VI. p. 102); and Mr. Rice has suggested the reading of Nandîśvaraṁ tallaj-âvasam=âge (in which, however, we ought to have âvâsam), with the translation "at the rising of the happy house (or sign) of Taurus" or "on the day that Nandîśvara was stopped" (id. Vol. XIV. p. 76, and Coorg Inscriptions, p. 7). But neither rendering is satisfactory; the latter, in particular. Nothing final can be said until we have a purely mechanical facsimile of the record. But the published lithographs seem to make it certain that the reading is not tallaj-âvasam (according to Mr. Rice), and probable that it is tale-devasam, rather than talpa-devasam (according to Mr. Kittel). And we have the same expression, tale-devasam=âge, in a Chôḷa inscription of A.D. 1032 at Suttûru (Ep. Carn. Vol. III., Nj. 164; treated by Prof. Kielhorn, from another transcript, above, Vol. IV. p. 69), in a passage which mentions the full-moon of Kârttika as the tale-devasa, and then specifies the second tithi (of the dark fortnight) as the date of the record. It has been proposed to translate tale-devasa in this passage by "first day;" in support of which we might quote tale-bâgalu, 'front door, principal entrance (of a house),' and tale-vîḍu, 'a chief place;' but it is not apparent why the full-moon day, which is the last day of the bright fortnight, should be called "the first day" with reference to the second tithi of the dark fortnight, and still less so why the Nandîśvara day, the eighth tithi, should itself be called "the first day."

[5] See Inscrs. at Śrav.-Beḷ. Introd. p. 18, note 7.

[6] The word in the original is atita, literally 'gone by.' It may mean that he was dead; or it may refer to his abdicating and going into religious retirement at Baṅkâpur.

had reached the Pallava princes Pallavâditya, Noḷambâdhirâja, and Chorayya-Noḷamba, who were then at Sâyra-Miniyûr,[1] in the month Âshâḍha (June-July), falling in A.D. 974, of the Bhâva saṁvatsara, Ś.-S. 896 (expired). An inscription at Nagarle, in Mysore,[2] dated Ś.-S. 892 (expired), = A.D. 970-71, mentions him as Permâḍi. An inscription at Adaraguñchi, in the Dhârwâr district,[3] with a date in the month Âśvayuja, falling in October, A.D. 971, of the Prajâpati saṁvatsara, Ś.-S. 893 (expired), mentions him as then governing the Gaṅgavâḍi ninety-six-thousand, the Purigeṟe three-hundred, and the Beḷvola three-hundred; in the reign of the Râshṭrakûṭa king Khoṭṭiga. An inscription at Guṇḍûr, in the same district,[4] with a date in the month Âshâḍha, falling in June, A.D. 973, of the Śrîmukha saṁvatsara, Ś.-S. 896 (current), mentions him as still governing the Puligeṟe three-hundred and the Beḷvola three-hundred, in the reign of Khoṭṭiga's successor, Kakka II. The inscription of A.D. 975 at Hebbâḷ, in the same district,[5] speaks of him as having had in his hands, in the course of his career, the government of a very large area, including not only the Gaṅgavâḍi province, the Puligeṟe three-hundred, and the Beḷvola three-hundred, but also the Noḷambavâḍi thirty-two-thousand, the Banavâsi twelve-thousand, the Sântalige thousand, and everything included as far as "the great river."[6] And his epitaph at Śravaṇa-Beḷgoḷa, now edited, gives a full list of his

[5] Above, Vol. IV. p. 350.

[6] The word used in the original is perdore, which is a compound from per, 'great,' and tore, 'a stream or river:' in other places, it appears in the forms of peddore and beddore; and we may at any time meet with the later form heddore. Kittel's Dictionary gives perdore and heddore in the sense of 'a large stream or river,' but without suggesting any identification. And Mr. Rice has said that the term generally denotes the Kṛishṇâ (Coorg Inscrs. p. 5, note), and has applied it in that sense in an inscription at Basarâḷ in Mysore (Ep. Carn. Vol. III. Md. 122, and Introd. p. 19). But there are passages in which it certainly does not denote the Kṛishṇâ. The Biḷiûr inscription of A.D. 888 (see page 164 above, under Bûtuga I.) speaks of that village as peddore-gareya Biḷiûr (line 8), which may no doubt be literally translated, as was done by Mr. Rice, by "Biḷiûr of, i.e. on, the bank of the peddore," but means more probably "Biḷiûr of (the district that was known by the name of) the banks of the peddore,"— especially if we pay attention to the expression beddore-gareya elpadimbaruṁ eṇṭ-okkaluṁ in lines 9, 10 of the record. And the Peggu-ûr inscription of A.D. 978 (see page 173 below, under Râchamalla II.) mentions a certain Rakkasa, described as beddore-gareyan=âḷutt-ire (line 8), which may no doubt be literally translated by 'while governing the bank of the beddore,' but seems much more probably to mean "while governing (the district that was known by the name of) the banks of the beddore." These two records are in Coorg, and belong to that part of the country only. There can be no reference in them to the Kṛishṇâ, which, even at the nearest point, is almost three hundred miles away. And Mr. Rice has suggested (Coorg Inscrs. p. 5, note) that in these two records the words peddore and beddore probably denote the Lakshmaṇtîrtha. In this, he followed Mr. Kittel, who said (Ind. Ant. Vol. VI. p. 100) that the term may perhaps here denote the Lakshmaṇtîrtha, especially because that river is also called dodda-hole, a term in which dodda, again, means 'great,' and hole is synonymous with tore. Now, perdore would be exactly represented in Sanskṛit by mahânadî, which is explained in Monier-Williams' Sanskṛit Dictionary as meaning 'any great river which has a long course.' The Lakshmaṇtîrtha is a perennial river, which supplies several important irrigation canals. But its whole course is not more than sixty miles; after which it flows into the Kâvêri. There is no apparent reason why it should be classed among the great rivers. And it seems much more likely to me that,— as was, in fact, suggested as an alternative possibility by Mr. Kittel (loc. cit.),— in the Biḷiûr and Peggu-ûr inscriptions, the words peddore and beddore denote the Kâvêri, which, with its course of about four hundred and seventy-five miles, may fairly be classed among the great rivers of India: the Kâvêrî, also, rises in Coorg; and it runs right through the very centre of the province, whereas the Lakshmaṇtîrtha only runs for some twenty to twenty-five miles through the south-east corner of it; and the province might be called "the banks of the Kâvêrî" much more appropriately than "the banks of the Lakshmaṇtîrtha."— It may be noted here that, in Thacker's Reduced Survey Map of India, 1891, and in Constable's Hand Atlas of India, 1893, plate 34, the name Lakshmaṇtîrtha has been applied, not to the Lakshmaṇtîrtha itself (which is, in fact, not fully shewn), but to that part of the Kâvêrî which lies in Coorg.— The Basarâḷ inscription, mentioned above, defines the limits, apparently in A.D. 1237, of the territory of the Hoysaḷa king Vîra-Somêśvara: and it specifies, on the east, Kâñchî,— on the west, Vêḷâvura, i.e. Bêlûr in the achievements:[1] it mentions several times his successes against the Pallavas of the Noḷambavâḍi country (lines 19, 22, 86, 88), which bordered on his own hereditary territory; it further tells us that he became known as "the king of the Gurjaras," through conquering the northern region for the Râshṭrakûṭa king Kṛishṇa III. (ll. 7, 8),— that he overthrew a powerful opponent of Kṛishṇa III. named Alla (ll. 9, 84),[2]— that he broke the power of the Kirâtas or mountain-tribes in the neighbourhood of the Vindhya mountains (ll. 10, 11),— that he protected the encampment of the emperor (i.e., probably, of Khoṭṭiga, or else of Kakka II.), at the town of Mânyakhêṭa (l. 12),[3]— that he crowned Indrarâja, i.e. Indra IV. (grandson of Kṛishṇa III.),[4]— that he prevailed against an opponent named Vajjaḷa (ll. 14, 85),[5]— that he despoiled the ruler of the Banavâsi country (l. 15),— that he made the Mâṭûras do obeisance

Hassan district, Mysore,— on the north, the perdoṛe,— and, on the south, a place the name of which Mr. Rice tells us, is defaced but looks like Chalaśeṛavi, and which, he seems to suggest, may possibly be 'Chalaśeri' near Ponâni in the Malabar district. Here, the term perdoṛe cannot denote the Kâvêrî; because Bêlûr is to the north of that river. Nor can it denote the whole course of the Kṛishṇâ; because at that time the Dêvagiri-Yâdava king Siṅghaṇa was in possession of the territory lying south of the Kṛishṇâ and west of the Tuṅgabhadrâ, as far at any rate as Banawâsi. In this record, therefore, perdoṛe probably means the Kṛishṇâ on from the point at which the Tuṅgabhadrâ joins it. In the Hebbâḷ inscription of A.D. 975, mentioned in the text above, perdoṛe may mean either the Kṛishṇâ towards the north, or the Kâvêrî towards the south. In the Muḷgund inscription of the same year (see page 172 below, under Pañchaladêva), it must mean the Kṛishṇâ, because of the mention of the southern ocean as the boundary on the south, and because the record itself is to the north of the Kâvêrî.

[1] There is also a mention of him in a record at Doḍḍabâgilu (Ep. Carn. Vol. III., TN. 93); but the record is rather fragmentary, and the published text cannot be quoted to any useful purpose.— Mr. Rice would find a reference to him, under the name of Mârasiṁhavarman, in an inscription at Haḷe-Bûgâdi (ibid. My. 15), which mentions also an Akâlavarsha, i.e., doubtless, one or other of the Râshṭrakûṭa kings named Kṛishṇa. But here the termination varman seems to indicate someone else.

[2] This person has not yet been identified.— As Dr. Hultzsch has reminded me, the name occurs in two inscriptions at Gwalior, in the case of Alla, a guardian of the fortress there, who was a son of Vâillabhaṭṭa of the Varjâra family (Ep. Ind. Vol. I. p. 154 ff.); his date, however, was A.D. 875-76, a century before the time of Mârasiṁha.

[3] Mânyakhêṭa (Mâlkhêḍ in the Nizâm's Dominions) was the Râshṭrakûṭa capital.— Siyaka-Harsha, one of the Paramâra kings of Mâlwa, claims to have taken the wealth of Khoṭṭiga in battle, and apparently, in A.D. 972-73, to have sacked even Mânyakhêṭa itself (Ep. Ind. Vol. I. pp. 225, 226). The present passage may mean that, on that occasion, Mârasiṁha repulsed the invader at the very gates of Mânyakhêṭa; or it may refer to some event in the warfare between Kakka II. and Taila II.

[4] This was evidently done in an attempt to continue the Râshṭrakûṭa sovereignty after the overthrow of Kakka II. by the Western Châlukya Taila II. in A.D. 973 or 974. The attempt is to be attributed to the close connection that existed between the two families: as we have already seen, Bûtuga II. was a brother-in-law of Kṛishṇa III., and owed his possession of the Gaṅgavâḍi province to that king (page 166 above); and Indra IV. was the son of a son of Kṛishṇa III. by a daughter of Gaṅga-Gâṅgêya, i.e. Bûtuga II. (Inscrs. at Śrav.-Beḷ. No. 57: Mr. Rice, id. Introd. p. 21, at first identified the Gaṅga-Gâṅgêya of this record with Râchamalla II., a successor of Mârasiṁha; but his grounds for doing so were completely erroneous, and he has now adopted the correct identification in Ep. Carn. Vol. III. Introd. pp. 5, 6). We are also told (again in Inscrs. at Śrav.-Beḷ. No. 57) that Indra IV. was the son-in-law of a person called Râjachûḍâmaṇi, "the crest-jewel of kings," whom Mr. Rice (id. Introd. pp. 20, 21) was disposed to identify with a certain Piḷḷa who is mentioned in another record at Śravaṇa-Beḷgoḷa (No. 58); but it does not seem that the biruda Râjachûḍâmaṇi, in that record, is intended to belong to Piḷḷa, and it appears not at all unlikely that it really denotes Mârasiṁha II. The attempt to carry on the Râshṭrakûṭa sovereignty was not successful, though Indra IV. lived on for some nine years, eventually dying in A.D. 982 (see Inscrs. at Śrav.-Beḷ. No. 57, and Ind. Ant. Vol. XX. p. 35, where some corrections have to be made in the relationships stated by me).— Mr. Rice (Inscrs. at Śrav.-Beḷ. Introd. p. 19) would identify the Indrarâja of this passage in the epitaph of Mârasiṁha II. with the Râshṭrakûṭa king Khoṭṭiga; on the grounds that, on the analogy of the biruda of Nityavarsha-Indra III., the name Indra indicates a Nityavarsha, and Nityavarsha was the biruda of Khoṭṭiga also. But I cannot follow him in this circular reasoning: "Khoṭṭiga" is itself the Prâkṛit form of a proper name, analogous to "Gojjiga" for "Gôvinda"; and, whatever may be the Sanskṛit word which it represents, that word is at least not "Indra."

[5] This person might be identified with Vajjaḍa II., of one of the Koṅkaṇ branches of the Silâhâra family, whose initial date was somewhere about A.D. 975. But another record at Śravaṇa-Beḷgoḷa, No. 109 (noticed further on), appears to describe him as the younger brother of Pâtâlamalla, which name does not occur in the Silâhâra records.

to him,— that he reduced the hill-fort of Uchchangi, which even the Kâḍuvaṭṭi,[1] great as was his prowess, had previously failed to reduce (ll. 20, 93),— that he destroyed a Śabara prince named Naraga (ll. 21, 54, 96),— that he made the Chêras, the Chôḷas, and the Pâṇḍyas, as well as the Pallavas, bow down before him (ll. 21, 22),— and that he destroyed a Châlukya prince named Râjâditya, who had declared war against him (ll. 50, 51):[2] in recapitulating some of his conquests, lines 100 to 102 add, among the places at which he was victorious, the banks of the river Tâpî (the Tapti), the town or village of Gonûr,[3] and Pâvaseya-kôṭe or the fortress of Pâvase:[4] it says that he preserved the doctrine of Jina (l. 22), and founded Jain temples and mânastambhas[5] at various unnamed places; and finally, as already noted, it tells us (ll. 110 to 112) that eventually he abdicated, and ended his days in the practice of religion at Bankâpur (in the Dhârwâr district), at the feet of a Jain teacher named Ajitasêna.[6] From other sources, we learn that Mârasiṁha's successes against Vajjaḷa and at Gonûr and Uchchangi were actually achieved for him by a minister named Châmuṇḍarâya or Châvuṇḍarâja, who wrote the Châmuṇḍarâya-Purâṇa[7] and was a minister of also Râchamalla II. who came next but one in the succession after Mârasiṁha II. Thus, another record at Śravaṇa-Beḷgoḷa[8] tells us that "the array of his (Châmuṇḍarâya's) enemies was broken, like a herd of deer, on him, resembling a tusked elephant running to and fro (among them), when he stood in front of the victorious elephant, his lord, the glorious king Jagadêkavîra-(Mârasiṁha II.), when the latter, at the command of king Indra,[9] lifted up his arm to conquer Vajjaḷadêva, whose strength was as terrible as that of the ocean disturbed (and bursting its boundaries in the universal disorder) at the end of the age, (and) who was the younger brother of Pâtâlamalla;" and the Châmuṇḍarâya-Purâṇa tells us[10] that Châmuṇḍarâya was born in the Brahma-Kshatra race,— that he was a pupil of Ajitasêna,— that his lord was

[1] From a transcription which Mr. Rice has kindly sent me, I find that the Mêlâgâni inscription of A.D. 974 (see Inscrs. at Śrav.-Beḷ. Introd. p. 18, note 7) goes on to mention a person who was called "the affliction (saṁgashṭa, = saṁkashṭa, = saṁkaṭa) of all people; the ornament of the Pompala family; born in the Kâḍuvaṭṭi race; supreme lord of Kâñchîpura; he who is like a thunderbolt in the van of battle;" . . . . (just after this, unfortunately, the record comes to an end, without disclosing his name). This shows us that kâḍuvaṭṭi, in line 92-93 of the epitaph, is not a verbal form, but is the nominative which is required in apposition with tuṁga-parâkramaṁ and the following verbs. And we can now recognise the same name, for an earlier period, in the Gulgânpode Bâṇa inscription No. II., which mentions "the whole of the forces of the Kâḍuvaṭṭi" (Ind. Ant. Vol. X. p. 39, text line 6).

[2] This person has not been identified yet.— The same name occurs among the Chalukyas, about a century and a half earlier, in the case of Râjâditya, father of the Mahâsâmanta Buddhavarasa, of the Śalukika (= Chalukika, Chalukya) race, who is mentioned in the Tôrkhêḍe grant (above, Vol. III. pp. 57, 58).

[3] Mr. Rice tells me that Gonûr is the village of that name,— the 'Goonoor' of the Indian Atlas, sheet No. 59,— three miles on the north-east of Chitaldroog. It may be noted, however, that the Madras Postal Directory mentions also a 'Gonur' in the Salem district, and a 'Gonuru' in the Bangalore district.

[4] There is a village named Hâwasi (= Pâvase) in the Karajgi tâluka of the Dhârwâr district. It is doubtful, however, whether this can be the place intended.

[5] The word mânastambha, which means literally 'a column of honour,' is explained by Mr. Rice (Inscrs. at Śrav.-Beḷ. Introd. p. 19, note 2) as denoting technically "the elegant tall pillars, with a small pinnacled maṇṭapa at the top, erected in front of the Jain temples;" and he refers us to a discussion regarding them in Fergusson's Indian and Eastern Architecture, p. 276.

[6] This person is mentioned again as the teacher of Mârasiṁha's minister Châmuṇḍarâya (see further on).

[7] This work appears to have been finished in the Îśvara saṁvatsara, Śaka-Saṁvat 900 (current), = A. D. 977-78 (Inscrs. at Śrav.-Beḷ. Introd. p. 22) — A record at Âlgôḍ (Ep. Carn. Vol. III., TN. 69) mentions the names of Gôvindamayya, his sons Mâbalayya and Îśvarayya, who were followers of Noḷambakul-Ântaka, i.e. Mârasiṁha II., and Mâbalayya's son Châvuṇḍa. Can this person be the minister Châmuṇḍarâya?

[8] Inscrs. at Śrav.-Beḷ. No. 109.— In Mr. Rice's text, I alter Vajvaḷa into Vajjaḷa, and ahat-dantikaṁ into ahit-dantikaṁ. I assume that the rest of the text is correct.

[9] I.e. Indra IV., the grandson of Kṛishṇa III.; see page 170 above, and note 4.

[10] See Inscrs. at Śrav.-Beḷ. Introd. p. 34.— The Purâṇa mentions various other birudas and achievements of Châmuṇḍarâya; they may be quoted when the text can be verified.

Jagadêkavîra, otherwise called Noḷambakul-Ântaka, i.e. Mârasiṁha II.,—and that he acquired the biruda of Samaradhuraṁdhara, "the yoke-bearer or leader in war," from his defeat of Vajjaḷadêva in "the Kheḍaga war,"[1] and the biruda of Vîramârtaṇḍa, "a sun among heroes," from the valour which he displayed in the plain of Gonûr in battle against the Noḷambas, and the biruda of Raṇaraṅgasiṁha, "a lion in the battle-field," from his fight at the fort of Uchchaṅgi. The details given in the epitaph and the Purâṇa indicate, in addition to external fighting, some local insurrections, which must probably be attributed to opportunity afforded by the absence of Mârasiṁha on the campaign in Gujarât for Kṛishṇa III. And not the least remarkable among them is the statement that he had occasion to despoil the ruler of the Banavâsi country; for, that province had been given to his father by Kṛishṇa III., and presumably had passed by inheritance into his own hands. The explanation of this, however, and of the immediately following mention of the reduction of the Mâṭûras, seems to be furnished by a record at Dêogiri in the Karajgi tâluka, Dhârwâr district, of the tenth century A.D. and referable to A.D. 958,[2] which mentions a Mahâsâmantâdhipati Śântivarman of the Mâṭûra family, with the hereditary title of "supreme lord of the town of Trikundapura," and having the Nandanavana-umbrella, the crest of a horse, and the mirror-banner, who was governing the Banavâsi twelve-thousand. From A.D. 878, or earlier, to 945, the administration of the Banavâsi province was in the hands of the Chellakêtana family.[3] In A.D. 949-50 Kṛishṇa III. gave the province to Bûtuga II., who doubtless allowed the Chellakêtanas to continue to govern it for him. Bûtuga must have died a few years before A.D. 963-64, when Mârasiṁha II. succeeded Rachcha-Gaṅga. And it would seem that when he died, or else during the time of Rachcha-Gaṅga, the Mâṭûras seized the province from the Chellakêtanas, and that they retained it until Mârasiṁha could make it convenient to reduce them.

Mârasiṁha II. must have been immediately succeeded by the Dharma-Mahârâjâdhirâja Satyavâkya-Koṅguṇivarma-Pañchaladêva, whom a fragment at Mulgund, in the Dhârwâr district,[4] with a date in the Yuvan saṁvatsara, Śaka-Saṁvat 897 (expired), falling in August, A.D. 975,[5] describes as governing "without any disorder" the whole territory from the eastern, the western, and the southern oceans as far as "the great river."[6] Pañchaladêva seems, then, to have taken advantage of the confusion that must have attended the overthrow of the Râshṭrakûṭa king Kakka II. by the Western Châlukya Taila II., to set himself up as an independent king; but he was shortly afterwards killed in battle by Taila II. Earlier facts connected with him are to be found in the Adaraguñchi inscription,[7] which tells us that in A.D. 971, when Mârasiṁha II. was governing the Gaṅgavâḍi ninety-six-thousand, the Purigeṟe three-hundred, and the Beḷvola three-hundred, under the Râshṭrâkûṭa king Khoṭṭiga, he himself was governing a small circle of villages which was known as the Sebbi thirty and [1] Dr. Hultzsch has suggested to me that "Kheḍaga" may stand for Khêṭaka, i.e. Mânyakhêṭa.

[2] The inscription is on a stone in Survey No. 85. I quote it from an ink-impression.— It is dated, with full details, in the Kâlayukti saṁvatsara, coupled with Śaka-Saṁvat 522 by mistake for 520 or 523. But the characters place it in the tenth century; and I believe that the real date of it is Monday, 15th November, A.D. 958, in the Kâlayukti saṁvatsara. Ś.-S. 880 expired. It does not register a grant of land; and it is, therefore, difficult to say, at present, why a false date should have been cited in a record which, in all other respects, seems to be thoroughly genuine.

[5] The details of the date are Bṛihaspativâra, i.e. Thursday, coupled with Bhâdrapada kṛishṇa 2 and the Kanyâ-saṁkrânti. And the corresponding English date is Thursday, 26th August, A.D. 975: on this day, the Kanyâ-saṁkrânti occurred at 16 h. 5 m. after mean sunrise (for Ujjain), and the given tithi ended about 26 minutes earlier, but might doubtless be made the current tithi of the saṁkrânti by more exact calculations.

probably took its appellation from the ancient name of Chabbi or Chebbi in the Hubli tâluka, Dhârwâr district, and in the Guṇḍûr inscription,[1] which mentions him as governing a ninety-six district in A.D. 973; this ninety-six district has not been identified; but possibly the expression is an abbreviation for the Gaṅgavâḍi ninety-six-thousand, which Mârasiṁha II.,— who is mentioned in the same record in connection with the government of only the Purigeṟe three-hundred and the Belvola three-hundred, under Khoṭṭiga's successor Kakka II.,— may have entrusted to Panchaladêva, in the course of ridding himself of the cares of office before passing into religious retirement at Baṅkâpur. The Mulgund inscription describes Pañchaladêva as Châlukya-pañchânana, "a lion to the Châlukyas," and also as "subsisting (like a bee) on the waterlilies that were the feet of Chaladuttaraṁga, Jagadêkavîra, the glorious Noḷambakul-Ântakadêva:" these epithets both stand in the string of titles that precedes the mention of Pañchaladêva's name; and the second of them, while capable of being interpreted to mean that Mârasiṁha II. was still alive, in retirement at Baṅkâpur, in August, A.D. 975, may perhaps refer to only the previous relations between the two persons.

Shortly after Pañchaladêva, there was Râchamalla II., who had the full style of the Dharma-Mahârâjâdhirâja Satyavâkya-Koṅguṇivarma-Permanaḍi-Râchamalla. An inscription at Peggu-ûr, in Coorg,[2] which mentions him by all his appellations, furnishes a date for him in the month Phâlguna (Feb.-March), falling in A.D. 978, of the Îśvara saṁvatsara, Śaka-Saṁvat 899 (expired), and speaks of a certain Rakkasa, with the biruda of Aṇṇanabanṭa, "the warrior of his elder brother," who was governing the district called "the banks of the great river;"[3] and an inscription at Doḍḍa-Homma, in Mysore,[4] which, however, does not mention him by his proper name, perhaps furnishes for him (or else for Pañchaladêva) a date in the preceding year.[5] He was probably the last of the great Western Gaṅga princes; and his final date seems to be A.D 984.[6] Châmuṇḍarâya, who has already been mentioned in connection with Mârasiṁha II., was a minister of Râchamalla II. also; and, while holding office under this master, he caused to be made the colossal Jain image of Gommaṭa or Gommaṭêśvara at Śravaṇa-Belgoḷa,[7] and attained so great a reputation for devotion to the faith to which he belonged, that he was remembered long after his death, and was quoted as one of three special promoters of [3] The expression used in the original is beddoṟe-gare; as regards the meaning of beddoṟe and its application here to probably the Kâvêrî, see page 169 above, note 6.

[4] Ep. Carn. Vol. III., Nj. 183; according to the published reading, the prince to whom this record belongs had the biruda of Jasaduttaraṁga, "the lintel of fame."— The full details of the date are, the Îśvara saṁvatsara, Śaka-Saṁvat 899 (expired); the full-moon of Âshâḍha; Aṅgâravâra, i.e. Tuesday; an eclipse of the moon. And the corresponding English date is Tuesday, 3rd July, A.D. 977; on this day, the given tithi ended at about 13 hrs. 30 min. after mean sunrise (for Bombay), and there was an eclipse of the moon.

[5] Mr. Rice has allotted to him a record at Kottatti (Ep. Carn. Vol. III., Md. 107) which would give his name in the form of Râjamalla, with the birudas of Jagaduttaraṁga, "the lintel of the world" (which seems rather dubious), and Haraḷ-Ântaka. But the date is so unsatisfactory, that it is impossible to place this record properly. The published text represents the date as the Pramâdin saṁvatsara, coupled with Śaka-Saṁvat 899. Pramâdin, however, was either Ś.-S 876 current, = A.D. 953-54, or Ś.-S. 936 (current), = A.D. 1013-14; while Ś.-S. 899 current, = A.D. 976-77, was the Dhâtu saṁvatsara, and Ś.-S 899 expired, = A.D. 977-78, was the Îśvara saṁvatsara. Even if Pramâdin has been read by mistake for Pramâthin, there still remains a mistake, either in the original or in the reading of it, of Ś.-S. 899 for 901 (expired) or 902 (current), = A.D. 979-80.

[6] Mr. Rice tells us (Inscrs. at Srav.-Beḷ. Introd. p. 22) that he has inscriptions, not yet published, which prove that the reign of Râchamalla II. ended in Śaka-Saṁvat 906 (expired), = A.D. 984-85.

[7] This is recorded in Inscrs. at Śrav.-Beḷ. Nos. 75, 76, and more fully in No. 85, verses 6, 7. — The image still exists. For a full account of it and of the legends connected with it, see the Introduction of Mr. Rice's book, p. 22 to 33; the frontispiece of the book gives a photograph of the image.

POSTSCRIPT

While the first proofs of the above article were passing through the Press, I began to make a fuller examination, than has as yet been attempted, of the dates of the spurious records of Western India, for all of which there should be some explanation forthcoming, if we can only find the clue to the solution of them.

I have referred to two of these dates in note 2 on page 157 above. One of them is from the spurious Tanjore grant (Ind. Ant. Vol. VIII. p. 212), which purports to give a date in A.D. 248 for an imaginary Western Gaṅga whose name is given in this record as Arivarman, by a mistake— (due to the carelessness of the writer in writing, in line 10, śrîmadarivarmma instead of śrîmaddharivarmma, i.e. in omitting a subscript dh)—for the Harivarman of the other spurious records of the same series. The details of the date are the Prabhava saṁvatsara, coupled with Śaka-Saṁvat 169 expired, the new-moon tithi of Phâlguna, Friday, the Rêvatî nakshatra, the Vṛiddhi yôga, and the Vṛishabha lagna. And, in the period to which the concoction of this record is to be referred on palæographic grounds, I find that in the Prabhava saṁvatsara, Ś.-S. 1009 expired, the new-moon tithi of Phâlguna ended on Friday, 25th February, A.D. 1088. The moon, indeed, was not then in Rêvatî, and did not come to Rêvatî till about 4 hrs. 28 min. after mean sunrise on the Saturday: but the moon often is in Rêvatî on the new-moon day of Phâlguna, and may possibly have been actually so shewn for that day in Ś.-S. 1009 expired by an erroneous almanac or by a calculation worked out wrongly for the person who fabricated the record; or the forger may have added that detail on chance, simply to give a greater air of plausibility to the record, as he certainly did in respect of the Vṛiddhi yôga, which cannot ever occur on the new-moon day of Phâlguna.[2] The result of the 25th February, A.D. 1088, fully meets the palæographic requirements of the case, and, I believe, fixes the actual time at which this record was concocted: viz., the forger was working on, or had in view, Friday, the new-moon day of Phâlguna of the Prabhava saṁvatsara, Ś.-S. 1009 expired; and he produced the necessary appearance of antiquity by striking off from the Śaka year,— in order to suit, more or less, a fictitious pedigree and chronology that had already become established and well-known,[3] and at the same time to obtain a saṁvatsara which would be correct according to the southern luni-solar system,— exactly fourteen of the sixty-year cycles, and thus obtained the year Ś.-S. 169 expired which he actually quoted in the record.

The second of the two dates to which I have referred in note 2 on page 157 above, is from the spurious Merkara grant (Ind. Ant. Vol. I. p. 363, and Coorg Inscrs. p. 1), which has been supposed to give a date in A.D. 466 for an imaginary Western Gaṅga named Avinîta-Koṅguṇi. This date has to be explained in a different way. The details of the date are the year 388, not specified either as current or as expired, the fifth tithi of the bright fortnight of Mâgha, Monday, and the Svâti nakshatra. The saṁvatsara is not specified; and so we have not the particular help that we have in the case of the Tanjore grant. Also, the era is not specified. As regards this detail, it has always been assumed that the Śaka era was intended, with the

[1] The verse, which mentions Châmuṇḍarâya as "Râya, the minister of king Râchamalla," is to be found about half-way through Inscrs. at Śrav.-Bel. No. 137.

[2] At sunrise on the Friday in question, the yôga was Śubha; and the Vṛiddhi yôga had occurred about eleven days earlier.— The remaining detail, the Vṛishabha lagna, means only the rising of the sign Taurus. I cannot calculate it with the Tables available to me; but it would naturally occur at some time or other during the twenty-four hours of the Friday.

[3] The Tanjore grant was certainly not the earliest of the spurious records in order of fabrication.

exception that Prof. Kielhorn has marked the point as dubious in examining this date as a Śaka date (Ind. Ant. Vol. XXIV p. 11, No. 169, and p. 181, No. 7); and no doubt the person who fabricated the record did intend the year to pass muster as Śaka-Saṁvat 388. But, even with the correction made below, the date is not a correct one for Ś.-S. 388, either current or expired; and it is not by means of the Śaka era at all, that we solve the puzzle of this date. The solution is furnished by an era which is still in use in Bombay and Madras under the name of the Fasli or harvest reckoning with the epoch of A.D. 590-91, which is the true original epoch, and in other parts of India with the artificial epochs of A.D. 592-93 and 593-94. It has, indeed, always been supposed that these harvest reckonings were created in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries A.D. by the emperors Akbar and Shâh Jehân. But, if so, a most extraordinary coincidence happened, in the creation by Shâh Jehân of a reckoning with the exact epoch of an era which had existed a thousand years before his time; and I think it can be made clear that what Akbar did was simply to adapt an original Hindû era to official purposes in certain parts of the country, with an alteration of two or three years in the proper reckoning of it, and that what Shâh Jehân did was to accept for official purposes in other parts of the country the true original reckoning which had survived there.[1] The era with the epoch of A.D. 590-91 appears first in the Goa grant of Satyâśraya-Dhruvarâja-Indravarman (Jour. Bo. Br. R. As. Soc. Vol. X. p. 348), which is dated in the twentieth year of his government, coupled with Ś.-S. 532 (expired) = A.D. 610-11. It appears next in the records of the Eastern Gâṅga kings of Kaliṅganagara, who were his descendants; for instance, in the Chicacole grant of Indravarman II., dated in the year 128 (Ind. Ant. Vol. XIII. p. 119), the donation was made on the occasion of an eclipse of the moon in the month Mârgaśira, which eclipse is that of the 12th November, A.D. 718. Traces of it are distinctly to be found in several of the spurious dates of Western India. And I believe that the fictitious Western Gaṅga chronology and pedigree derive their origin from genuine dates in this era, which were ignorantly or intentionally applied as Śaka dates and were then coupled with imaginary names. As regards the date now under consideration, that of the Merkara grant,— the specification of the Svâti nakshatra, if it means anything at all, requires us to understand that the writer of the record wrote "the bright fortnight" by mistake for "the dark fortnight;" for, the moon can never be in Svâti on Mâgha śukla 5, but may be on Mâgha kṛishṇa 5. In the year 388 of the era of A.D. 590-91, Mâgha kṛishṇa 5 began on Monday 20th January, A.D. 979; but the moon did not come to Svâti till late on the Tuesday or soon after sunrise on the Wednesday. In the next year, however, 389, Mâgha kṛishṇa 5 ended on Monday, 9th February, A.D. 980; and on that day the moon was in Svâti at sunrise and for more than ten hours after sunrise. The result meets fully the palæographic requirements of the case. If we take the date of the 20th January, A.D. 979, we must assume that the mention of the Svâti nakshatra was introduced in circumstances similar to those suggested above for the mention of the Rêvatî nakshatra and the Vṛiddhi yôga in the Tanjore date. But I believe that the result of the 9th February, A.D. 980, is the proper one and fixes the actual time at which this record was concocted: viz., the forger was working on, or had in view, Monday, Mâgha kṛishṇa 5, of a year which was described in the almanac that was consulted as the Śaka year 901 (expired), and may have been also described there as, or else was known to him to be, the year 389 of an era to which possibly no name was attached; he produced the necessary appearance of antiquity by adopting the figures of the more recent era, with the intention that they should be supposed to be figures of the earlier era, the Śaka; he purposely omitted to quote the saṁvatsara, because he saw that, the difference (901— 389 = 512) being not divisible exactly by sixty, the saṁvatsara for Ś.-S. 901 expired would not be correct for Ś.-S. 389; and, in copying out the date, he made the mistake of writing śuddha

[1] I shall go into the matter fully in separate articles on the Records of the Eastern Gâṅga Kings of Kaliṅganagara and on the Spurious Dates of Western India.

(actually sudhdha, as he put it) instead of kṛishṇa, and for some reason or other cited the year as 388 instead of 389.[1]

[1] It is probable that the year was 389 current; and he may have turned it into 388 in order to cite the expired year. Be that as it may, instances of the quotation of a wrong year can be adduced from unquestionably genuine dates. And, among the spurious dates, an interesting and instructive instance is furnished by the Kurtakôṭi grant (Ind. Ant. Vol. VII. p. 217), which purports to be of the time of the Western Chalukya king Vikramâditya I. and to be dated Śaka Saṁvat 530 (or 532) expired: the details of this date are correct— (except that the solar eclipse, quoted as a total one and described conventionally as such, was an annular eclipse; to the extent, however, of eight and a half digits, and therefore a well-marked one)— for Sunday, 11th May, A.D. 1119, in Ś.-S. 1041 expired, and in the year 529 (current) of the era of A.D. 590-91: here, the forger produced the necessary semblance of antiquity by distinctly quoting the year of the later era as a Śaka year; and here, again, he intentionally omitted to quote the saṁvatsara, because he knew that the saṁvatsara for Ś. S. 1041 expired would not be correct for Ś.-S. 529 or 530 (or 532) expired.

[5] Mr. Rice's text has pravâśita, which, of course, at once suggested pravâsita, "expelled (from Mânyakhêṭa)." The real reading is quite clear.

[6] Mr. Rice's translation represents the Noḷamba as swollen with pride from receiving obeisance from the son of . . . . . . of the Mâṭûra family; and this implies some proper name, illegible, after vaṁśaja. But there is no room for any name: at the beginning of line 18, there is only one illegible akshara, which is evidently to be restored as râ; and at the end of line 17, after the ja, the back of the impression distinctly shews remnants of sya.

28 to 49 — Lines 28 to 47 contain five Sanskṛit verses, in the Śârdûlavikrîḍita metre. The original has suffered so much damage that only a few detached words can be made out, —no connected passages capable of translation. And it is sufficient to note that we have — śrî-Gaṁga-chûḍâmaṇiḥ, line 31; Pallava, line 33; Gaṁga-bhûpati and Noḷamb-Ântakaḥ, line 35; Noḷamb-Ântakaḥ, line 39; Pallava, line 41; and śrî-Mârasiṁha, line 42.[1] Lines 48 and 49 contain the first two pâdas of another verse, in the same metre, which, again, are almost quite illegible; and the verse ends as follows: —

56 to 83 — These twenty-eight lines appear to contain six or seven more Sanskṛit verses, of which we can recognise that one is in the Sragdharâ metre, and one in the Śârdûlavikrîḍita metre. The original has here suffered still more damage; and nothing worth quoting can be made out, except śrî-Gaṁga-chûḍâmaṇir, line 74.

[1] The mânyavêvôdyatô in Mr. Rice's text suggests, at first sight, a mistake for another reference to Mânyakhêṭa. The original, however, really has (line 30) n=ânya ôv=âkitô, "no other enemy, indeed."

TRANSLATION.

[After the exclamations Ôm !, Hail !, the record opens with a verse, a good deal of which is illegible and cannot be restored, but which is directed to the praises of a person not mentioned in it by name apparently, but identical of course with the Mârasiṁha of the rest of the record, who is here described as enjoying, through the power of the sword of his arm, the whole earth, up to the ocean,— as being a very jewel to adorn the kings of the Gaṅga lineage,— and as darkening, like a bank of clouds, the moon that was the faces of the women of his foes. It then proceeds] :—

[3] Metre, Mattêbhavikrîḍita.

[4] [5] These marks of punctuation are very exceptional in the middle of a verse. There ought, for uniformity, to be a similar mark after the word Pâṇḍya; there, however, it is omitted.

the great lustre of moonlight for the water-lily that is the Ganga family, standing up very high on the surface of the whole earth; (who had the appellation of) Satyavâkya-Konguṇivarman, the pious Mahârâjâdhirâja; who became known as "the king of the Gurjaras," by conquering the northern region for Kṛishṇarâja (III.); who displayed prowess in destroying the pride of the mighty Alla who set himself in opposition to Vanagajamalla-(Kṛishṇa III); who by (his) might preserved the throne and all the other insignia of royalty for Gaṇḍamârtaṇḍa-(Kṛishṇa III.); who dispersed the bands of the . . . . Kirâtas who dwell on the skirts of the forests of the Vindhya mountains; who by the strength of (his) arm [protected] the encampment of the emperor, when it was located at (the city of) Mânyakhêṭa; who by (his) prowess [accomplished] the festival of the binding on of the fillet (of sovereignty) of the glorious Indrarâja (IV.); who by . . . . prevailed against . . . . of Vajjaḷa who was (ever) prepared for war; who came to be greatly extolled for capturing the . . . . and the jewelled earrings and the rutting elephants and all the other possessions of the lord of the Vanavâsi country who bowed down in fear; who made those who belonged to the Mâtûra lineage do obeisance (to him); who destroyed in war all the kings of the Noḷambas who misconducted themselves through self-conceit in consequence of the arrogance of the strength of arm of hundreds of princes and the pride of troops of elephants; who eradicated the thorn-like troubles of (his) kingdom; who ground to powder the hill-fort of Uchchangi; who destroyed the leader of the Śabaras named Naraga; who by (his) prowess made the Chêras, the Chôḷas, the Pâṇḍyas, and the Pallavas to bow down (before him); who preserved the doctrine of Jina; who . . . . the great banner . . . .; who [acquired the means for making] great gifts by appropriating the wealth of powerful hostile kings; (and) who protected the surface of the (whole) earth by building bridges and . . . . ,— travel abroad throughout all countries to the end of time, as long as the moon and stars shall endure! Ôm! Ôm! Ôm!

[Lines 28 to 47 mention the person who is the subject of eulogy as the crest-jewel of the Gaṅgas, the Gaṅga king, Noḷamb-Ântaka, and Mârasiṁha, and speak of victories over the Pallavas. And then the record continues]—

(L. 50)—He, the glorious crest-jewel of the Gaṅgas, became a very forest-fire for (the destruction of) the lion Râjâditya, the crest-jewel of the Châḷukyas, who in these words[1] had made a brave declaration of war. When the world was wasting away with a feverish apprehension that Madhu and Kaiṭabha and other leaders of the demons, slain by (the god Vishṇu) the foe of (the demon) Mura, had thus risen again, (old) foes in (fresh) illusory disguises, he, Noḷamb-Ântaka, made the (whole) circuit of the earth happy with the . . . . [lamentations] of the demon-like Naraga, which intermingled with the tears of joy of the earth.

[Lines 56 to 83 contain a further description of the prowess and conquests of the same person, who is mentioned again as the crest-jewel of the Gaṅgas in line 74. But no connected passages can be made out here. The record then continues]:—

(L. 84)—Shall I praise the valiance which put to flight and conquered Alla, who was possessed of strength that was too great to be realised?; shall I praise the magnificence which brought shame to Vajjaḷa, who was famous in the world?; shall I praise the bravery which utterly slew the . . . . of the Pallava kings?: say, how shall I praise him, the lintel of firmness of character?; I know not how! Glorious was the array[2] of him who was a very Triṇêtra (Śiva) among chieftains, at that time when the skull-wearers,[1] having cut off (and arranged) in a string all the newly decapitated heads of the Pallavas, (and) having greatly tottered (under the burden of them), (and) having placed (them) on the ground, made proclamation to the other chieftains and said — "Aho! Let not your own newly decapitated heads come into this string; but, having seen (what has happened to the Pallavas), preserve yourselves (by timely submission) in the ranks of (living) men!" The achievement of him, the king Gaṅga of Gutti, became the theme of praise in all the three worlds,— the achievement of taking, amidst a slaughter of the (whole) earth, the great fortress of Uchchaṅgi, which previously had been found impregnable by (even) . . . . . . the Kâḍuvaṭṭi,[2] possessed of eminent prowess, who, inspiring terror for some time, surrounded and besieged (it), but had to quit (it). Kanda:— With the very greatest ease, the head of Naraga, who had acquired such fame that he was considered to be a very Kâḷa or Râvaṇa or Śiśupâḷa, (but) who became (his) bondsman, fell into the hand of him, the crest-jewel of the Gaṅgas. He has spoken, (and) he will protect; let not your courage fail;[3] the protection of Yama (shall be with you): he will give you that which he has promised: shall any of the deeds or words of him, the crest-jewel of the Gaṅgas, ever fail?

[2] Mr. Rice has in his text given oṭṭaje, which means 'a heap, mass, company, abundance, a row,' but in his translation has given 'tribute,' for which the proper Kanarese word is oṭṭaja. The actual reading is oṭṭaji which is probably to be taken as a variant of oṭṭaje.

(L. 100)— Ôm! Having thus fought (and) conquered (the aforesaid) enemies, and numerous other people, on the banks of the Tâpî in the neighbourhood of the forests of the Vindhya mountains, at Mânyakhêṭa the best of towns, at Gonûr, at Uchchaṅgi, in the Banavâsi country, at the fortress of Pâvase, and in various other localities, (and) having set up great banners[4] at various places, (and) having bestowed great gifts, he, the glorious Nôḷambakuḷ-Ântakadêva, who had (thus) become famous,— (who had the titles of) the Vidyâdhara of the Gaṅgas, the hero among the Gaṅgas, the lion of the Gaṅgas, the crest-jewel of the Gaṅgas, the Gaṅga Kandarpa (god of love), the Gaṅga diamond (or thunderbolt), the lintel of firmness of character, the Gaṅga of Gutti, the incarnation of religion, the sole hero of the world, the keeper of promises, the sun (for the destruction) of enemies, the rough in battle, the very Triṇêtra (Śiva) among chieftains,— caused to be made, at various places, Jain temples and mânastambhas.[5] (May there be) auspiciousness!

(L. 110)— Ôm! Having carried out acts of religion in a most worthy fashion, one year later he laid aside the sovereignty, and, at the town of Baṅkâpura, in the performance of worship in the proximity of the holy feet of the venerable Ajitasêna, he observed the vow (of fasting) for three days, and attained rest.

(L. 112)— Metre:— Aho! Chôḷa king, quiet down by gentle rubbing (thy palpitating) heart!; O Pâṇḍya, cease thy . . . . . . , and give up weeping!; O Pallava, run not away in fear; O . . . . . . retreat not from thy territory, (but) remain . . . . . .! the Gaṅga chieftain, Noḷamb-Ântaka, has gone in triumph to the abode of the gods!

[1] A kâpâlika is a worshipper of Śiva, characterised by carrying skulls of men as ornaments and by eating and drinking from them. The mention of kâpâlikas is introduced here in connection with the comparison of Mârasiṁha with Śiva as "a very Triṇêtra among chieftains."

[2] For "the Kâḍuvaṭṭi," see page 171 above, note 1. In line 92, I analyse biṭṭa uṁgaḍa. The latter word may possibly be a proper name; or it may be something similar to gaḍa, 'indeed, certainly;' or it may perhaps stand for uggaḍu, = uggaṭa, = utkaṭa, 'excess; affliction, trouble.'

[3] In eḷde, we have another variant of erde, = ede, 'the chest, (the heart), courage;' it occurs again in line 112. For erde-giḍu, 'courage to fail,' see Kittel's Dictionary, under erde.

[4] Dhvaja, 'banner,' probably stands here for dhvaja-stambha, 'flag-staff,' i.e. a stone column representing a banner.

No. 19.— ASSAM PLATES OF VALLABHADEVA; SAKA-SAMVAT 1107.

By F. KIELHORN, PH.D., LL.D., C.I.E.; GÖTTINGEN.

These plates belong now to the Asiatic Society of Bengal, to which they were presented[1] by Mr. W. Winckler, Assistant Executive Engineer of Tezpur, the chief town of the Darrang district of Assam, Constable's Hand-Atlas of India, Plate 30 Bb. The text of the inscription has already been published by Dr. Hultzsch, in the Zeitschrift D. Morg. Ges. Vol. XL. p. 42 ff. I re-edit the inscription[2] from excellent impressions which were taken by Dr. Fleet in February 1886, and given to me by him some years ago.

These are five copper-plates, the first and last of which are inscribed on one side only, and each of which measures from $7\frac{13}{16}''$ to 8″ broad by from $5\frac{1}{4}''$ to $5\frac{1}{2}''$ high. Plates i to iv[3] are numbered with numeral figures, which are engraved on the proper right margin of the second side of each plate. In the middle of the upper part each plate has a hole, for a ring, which had been cut already when the impressions were taken. The ring is $1\frac{9}{16}''$ in diameter and $\frac{1}{4}''$ thick; on it there slides another, thin pear-shaped ring, the ends of which are joined and were evidently run into the socket of a seal; but the seal is not now forthcoming. Some sides of the plates are quite smooth, others have rims, partly raised and partly fashioned; but, on every side, the writing is in a perfect state of preservation. The engraving is good throughout; the letters are shallow and, though the plates are thin, do not shew through on the backs. The average size of the letters is about $\frac{5}{16}''$.— The characters belong to a variety of the northern alphabet which was used, about the 12th century A.D., so far as I can judge at present, in the most eastern parts of Northern India. They closely resemble those of the Deopara inscription of Vijayasêna, published with a photolithograph in Ep. Ind. Vol. I. p. 305 ff., and apparently also those of the three Sêna copper-plate inscriptions, published with indifferent photolithographs (or lithographs) in the Journal Beng. As. Soc. Vol. VII. p. 43 ff., Vol. XLIV. P. I. p. 11 ff., and Vol. LXV. P. I. p. 6 ff. That this alphabet belongs to Eastern India, is shewn at once by signs like those for ê[4] (e.g. in êtat, l. 47), kha (in kha-dalê khalu, l. 2), ṅka and ṅga (in Niḥśaṅkasiṁhasya, l. 23, and maṅgalasya, l. 3), ṭa (in taṭi-prakaṭâ, l. 2), ta (in bhagavatê, l. 1), etc., as well as by the numeral figures[5] on the margins of the plates; and signs like those for ja, (in jagatâṁ, l. 3), pha (in sapholitaḥ, l. 15), la (in kha-dalê, l. 2), and especially those for jha (in jhâṭa, l. 41), and for the initial i (in iti, ll. 49 and 54), together with other peculiarities which the characters of this inscription have in common with those of the Deopara inscription, clearly distinguish the alphabet here used from another variety[6] of eastern writing. As a trustworthy photolithograph

[1] I take this information from Dr. Hultzsch's account of the inscription.

[2] When I suggested to Dr. Hultzsch the great desirability of having the plates photolithographed, he most readily gave his permission to do so, and himself requested me to re-edit this record. The photolithograph has been prepared under Dr. Fleet's supervision.

[3] I do not know whether there is a numeral figure on the second side of the fifth plate; there is none on the first side of it.

[4] See above, Vol. IV. p. 255.

[5] The figures for '1' and '3' are the same as those used in the Gayâ Buddhist inscription, Ind. Ant. Vol. X. p. 342, Plate; that for '2' occurs, in the same form, in the last line of the Tarpandighî plate of Lakshmaṇasêna, Jour. Beng. As. Soc. Vol. XLIV. P. I. p. 12 (where it has been mistaken for '3'); and that for '4' in line 53 of the Kamauli plates of Vaidyadêva, to be mentioned below. The same plates, in line 58, and the Gôvindpur inscription of Gaṅgâdhara (to be mentioned below), in line 35, have a different form of '1.'

[6] I allude to the alphabet used, e.g., in the Kamauli plates of Vaidyadêva of Prâgjyôtisha, published with a photolithograph in Ep. Ind. Vol. II. p. 347 ff. One special feature of that alphabet, which is essentially the same as that of the Gôvindpur inscription of the poet Gaṅgâdhara, published ibid. p. 330 ff., is, that many letters, at the top, have a kind of triangle. And another peculiarity is, that the letter r, before another consonant, is denoted by a short line which is sideways attached, on the proper right, to the middle of the akshara of which r forms part. In the Gôvindpur inscription r is so written in all conjuncts; in the Kamauli plates, this is published herewith, I need not attempt a minute description of all individual characters; but one or two more general points may be drawn attention to. In deciphering the text, as was stated already by Dr. Hultzsch, a difficulty is occasionally caused by the great similarity of two or even three different letters. Thus, it is not always easy to distinguish between p and y, between n and l (compare naliṇî-dalasya, l. 6), between ch and r (compare kâri chandra-, l. 9), ch and v (compare vachôbhir=, l. 32), v and dh (compare vadhû-vaidhavya-, l. 11), or between the subscript u and r (compare induḥ, l. 4, and °ragêndrau, l. 7); and where letters like these happen to occur in proper names such as we find in lines 36 and 43-49, it is impossible to vouch for the absolute correctness of the transcribed text. Another matter which may be mentioned is, that for some letters we have two or more different forms. This is particularly the case with the subscript u, but also, e.g., with l and dh; (for the forms of u compare Vâsudêvâya, l. 1, dyumaṇinâ, l. 4, °pûnadyugê, l. 8, induḥ, l. 4, and punâtu, l. 5; for those of l, khalu, l. 2, Lamvôdaraḥ, l. 3, and kêli-kula, l. 25; and for those of dh, dhṛita, l. 6, and khaḍg-âyudha, l. 34). I may also state that the letter r, where it immediately precedes another consonant, is written by the ordinary superscript sign, except in the conjuncts rgg, rṇṇ, and rth, the forms[1] of which may be seen from svargga, l. 38, Udayakarṇṇaḥ, l. 17, and °tyartham, l. 15. In the word varṇṇâvalî in line 2, the superscript r has been wrongly engraved on the top of an akshara which would be rṇṇâ, already without it.[2] The sign of avagraha is not used in the inscription; nor are there any special signs for final consonants. The sign of anusvâra is always written above the line and is nowhere employed in the interior of a simple word, instead of the nasal of one of the five classes; and the sign of visarga, differing from the sign which is used in the Deopara inscriptions, is much like an English 8, except that often, at the bottom, it has a short tail.[3]— The language sign for r is generally used when the sign of the consonant with which r is combined has a triangular top, as is the case in conjuncts like rkk, rchchh, rjj, rtt, rdd, rddh, rll, rvv, etc. Neither of these two peculiarities is found in the Deopara inscription or in the inscription here edited. It is true that in these inscriptions the signs of certain aksharas, such as ku, tu, tra, tri, trai, etc., more or less frequently, have an angular top, but we nowhere see the triangle; and r never is denoted in them by the side-line, described above. [In lines 1—46 of Vaidyadêva's inscription, according to Mr. Venis's edition, the letter r, as the first part of a conjunct, is omitted by the engraver 36 times,— twice (according to the impressions only once) before y, once before m, and no less than 33 times where the r would ordinarily be donoted by the side-line. According to my experience, this side-line generally is very thin and shallow in the original inscriptions, so that often it does not shew at all clearly in the impressions; and, in the case of Vaidyadêva's plates an examination of four impressions, of which I owe one to Mr. Venis himself and three to Dr. Führer, enables me to state with confidence that the engraver is not guilty of so many omissions as would seem to occur at first sight.]— As regards the letter jh, it will suffice to compare the sign for jh (which is almost exactly like the jh of the modern Bengali) in jhâṭa in line 41 of the present inscription, and that for jjh in the akshara jjhi (not jhi) of ujjhitâ in line 21 of the Deopara inscription, with the quite different signs for the same letters in the words jhaṭiti and ujjhita in lines 28 and 7 of Vaidyadêva's plates. The initial i, in the Gôvindpur inscription, is denoted by two circles, placed side by side, with a kind of circumflex above them; and in Vaidyadêva's plates we have two signs for i, one with two circles below (as in iti, l. 3), and the other with the two circles at the top (as in iva, l. 45, and imâm, l. 66), both quite different from the i of the inscription here edited. [I may mention that Vaidyadêva's plates furnish two corresponding forms of the rare initial î. One of them occurs at the end of line 40, in Pâi, where the photolithograph omits the vertical line between the two circles, by which î is distinguished from i, and which is perfectly clear in the impressions; and the other form we have in the word îśâna, in line 54, the î of which has been erroneously taken to be ai.]— If I had to suggest special names for the two varieties of the alphabet spoken of above, I, with my present knowledge, should call that of Vaidyadêva's plates the Pâla, and the other the Sêna variety.

[1] The same signs, which of course owe their origin to the fact that the sign for r was written on, not above, the top-line, are used in the Deopara inscription and elsewhere.

[2] The same mistake was made by the engraver of the Gauhaṭî plates of Indrapâlavarman (Jour. Beng. As. Soc. Vol. LXVI. P. I. p. 123 ff.) in the word arṇṇava, Plate ii*a*, l. 5; compare the proper sign for rṇṇa, without the superscript sign for r, in varṇṇa, ibid. Plate ii*b*, l. 2. The sign transcribed by ṇṇya (corrected to rṇṇya), ibid. Plate ii*a*, l. 3, is really rṇṇya in the original. Whether in the Gauhaṭî plates, in the conjunct rgg, r is written on or above the line, it is difficult to decide.

[3] The two circles were joined, so as to enable the writer to form the sign of visarga with one stroke of the pen. To a similar process we owe the form of the initial i, here used.

of the inscription is Sanskrit, and, with the exception of the introductory ôṁ ôṁ namô bhagavatê Vâsudêvâya, the whole is in verse. Of unusual words, or words used in an unusual sense, the text offers nârapatya, l. 20, 'rule, reign,' kâśa(sa)ra, l. 33, 'a buffalo,' chhurikâra l. 34, 'one who is skilled in the use of the dagger,' jhâṭa in the technical expression sa-jhâṭa-viṭapa, l. 41, 'with the woods and thickets,' and âkarshaka, l. 45, 'the extent (? of a piece of land).' In respect of orthography the following points may be noted: The letter b is written by the sign for v; the palatal and dental sibilants are confounded in saṁśira (for saṁsâra), l. 25, kâśara, l. 33, śimâ, l. 42, sriṅgâra, l. 24, subhê and sastê, l. 41; the guttural nasal is employed instead of the sign of anusvâra in the word vaṅśa, ll. 9, 16, and 52; before y, l is doubled in śallyasya, l. 31; and eight times the rules of saṁdhi have not been observed in regard to the final consonant of a word before a following consonant. Besides it may be noted that in line 21 samutsṛitâni is used instead of samuchchhritâni.

The inscription is one of a prince Vallabhadêva of whom, in verses 3-10, the following genealogy is given: In the race of the Moon there was a certain Bhâskara; his son was the king or chief Râyârideva-Trailôkyasiṁha (whose wife[1] was Vasumatî ?); his son, again, was Udayakarṇa-Niḥśaṅkasiṁha, whose wife was Ahiavadêvi[2]; and their son was Vallabhadêva-Śrîvallabha. Nothing of historical importance is recorded of any of these chiefs.

According to verses 18-22, Vallabhadêva, at the time of the sun's progress to the north in the Śaka year 1107 (given in numerical words), at the command of his father and for the spiritual welfare of his mother, founded an alms-house or place for the distribution of food (bhakta-śâlâ, anna-sattra), near a temple of the god Mahâdêva (Śiva) to the east of Kirtipur in the Hâpyachâ[3] district (maṇḍala); endowed it with (the revenues of) certain villages and hamlets the names and boundaries of which are given, and (so far as I understand the text) assigned the services of five men, whose names also are recorded, and of their families.

The localities mentioned in the inscription I am unable to identify. The date does not admit of verification; it would correspond to the 25th December of either A.D. 1184 or 1185, according as the Śaka year 1107 is taken as a current or an expired year.

[1] The term sa-jhâṭa-viṭapa also occurs in line 38 of the Tarpandighî plate of Lakshmaṇasêna (Jour. Beng. As. Soc. Vol. XLIV. P. I. p. 12), in line 45 of the Madanapâḍa plate of Viśvarûpasêna (ibid. Vol. LXV. P. I. p. 13), and in line 50 of the Bâkergañj plate of the same (ibid. Vol. VII. p. 46); in the first inscription the published text has samâṭaviṭapaḥ, in the second sasâṭaviṭapaḥ, and in the third sasâddâvividhavâ; but the published lithographs, inferior though they are, sufficiently shew that the second syllable of the word is neither mâ nor sâ. I have not found sa-jhâṭa-viṭapa elsewhere, and the occurrence of it in the present inscription, therefore, quite accords with the fact that this inscription is written in an alphabet which is peculiar to the Sêna inscriptions. I suspect jhâṭa to be a Dravidian word.

TRANSLATION.

Ôṁ ! Ôṁ ! Adoration to the holy Vâsudêva !

(Verse 1.) May Lambôdara[5] rejoice over the spreading of the glory of the worlds, as long as the moon continues with the sun,—he, the row of bees on whose round cheeks verily is like the line of letters of a blessing on the leaf of heaven !

(V. 2.) May the body of Vishṇu purify you,—the body of him who, in the body of a hog, rising, as from a pool, from the lower regions towards the sky, bore on his tusk the earth, like a lotus-leaf of which the tortoise and the lord of serpents[6] looked like the root and the stalk !

(V. 3.) In the race of the Moon there was that Bhâskara, who on his pair of sandals put a multitude of jewels from kings' diadems, as straps.

(V. 4.) From that sun of valour sprang, dear to the earth[7] for the confidence which he inspired, a leader in battle whose banner was (the performance of) the sacrifice— the widowhood of his enemies' wives,[8] a destroyer of lakhs of adversaries, king Râyâridêva, (residing) with whom Fortune, to the end of his life, divested herself of her most patent blemish, that of fickleness.

(V. 5.) He, king Râyâridêva, the frontal ornament of the kings in Bhâskara's race, it was, who, at the gorgeous festival of battle which was fearful on account of the presence of the lordly elephants of Vaṅga, made the enemy abandon the entire practice of arms on the battle-field ; and who, in his own person, rendered the creation of 'the Lion of the three worlds' exceedingly fruitful.[9]

(V. 6.) As the full moon, rising on the Sumêru which is dear to the gods, delights all the worlds with the collection of her rays, and takes her place on the mountain-peaks, so

1 To judge from the back of the impression, it is possible that the akshara hṛi has been altered to ka, or that an original ka has been altered to hṛi.

2 Metre of verses 28 and 29 : Ślôka (Anushṭubh).

3 Read -dattâṁ vâ.

4 Read bhûmis=.

5 I.e. the god Gaṇêśa, 'who has a large or protuberant belly.' It is hardly necessary to remind the reader that Gaṇêśa has the head of an elephant and that this is the reason why the bees settle on his cheeks. With the end of the verse compare Ep. Ind. Vol. I. p. 197, verse 2.

6 The earth is carried by Śêsha, the lord of serpents, who again rests on the back of a tortoise. Compare, e.g., Ind. Ant. Vol. XV. p. 18, verse 14.

7 I suspect that Vasumatî was the name of Râyâridêva's wife.

8 Compare expressions like ripuvadhû-vaidhavya-baddha-vrata in other inscriptions.

9 Râyâridêva had the surname Trailôkyasiṁha. The poet therefore says that he was created a Trailôkyasiṁha and that, by his valorous acts, he really was a lion of the three worlds.

Udayakarṇa, springing from king Râyâridêva who pleased the learned, delighted all people with heaps of wealth, and took his place over the heads of princes.

(V. 7.) In the reign of king Niḥśaṅkasiṁha (other) kings entirely ceased to uplift their valorous arms; but for this,[1] how would their wives and their wealth continue even in mountain-caves?

(V. 8.) King Niḥśaṅkasiṁha had a queen, dear to him as his life, who bore the name Ahiavadêvî.[2]

(V. 9.) A swan in that Mânasa lake which was the heart of king Niḥśaṅkasiṁha, for every kind of amorous dalliance what the moon in loveliness is to the water-lily, glorious as the lotus in that lake which is the quintessence of mundane existence, she stood manifested as the one dwelling-place of exquisite beauty.

(V. 10.) Having received on unprecedented favour from the Lord of Gaurî[3] who was pleased with the might of their great austerities, they obtained as a son the Favourite of Fortune Vallabhadêva, who by all the valiant sons of kings, as if they were Garuḍas, is sung of as Nârâyaṇa,[4] and who by his heroism sportively overcomes hostile princes, as if they were courtezans.

(V. 11.) The groups of the gods, having come to witness the might of his arrow which, able to pierce whatever is hard (to pierce) in a chase, entered up to the butt into a row of buffaloes, all followed him, joyfully shouting 'Be victorious, Vallabha!' Only one of them, Yama,[5] turned back, to preserve his own buffalo.

(V. 12.) Vallabhadêva alone knows[6] how to wield the sword, is the chief of those skilled in the use of the dagger, is sole and supreme[7] in the science of archery, and is a rider of teams of Kâmbôja horses as well as of lordly elephants.

(Vs. 13 and 14.) In the proximity of (the temple of) Mahâdêva, situated in the Hâpyachâ maṇḍala, to the east of Kîrtipur, Vallabhadêva, the son of Niḥśaṅkasiṁha, at the command of his father, gave an alms-house for the hungry, in order that his mother might obtain heaven everlasting.

(Vs. 15-17.) For the support of this widely famous alms-house, the long-armed illustrious Vallabhadêvaka, who has thrown off the quality of darkness, in the Śaka year counted by the mountains (7), the sky (0), and the Rudras (11),[8] at the sun's auspicious progress to the north, at an auspicious moment, and under a happy sign of the zodiac, granted —with their woods and thickets, with the people in them, with th ir water and land, and settled within their four boundaries— seven villages, the names of which are written here[9]:—

(Vs. 18-20.) Châḍî, and Dêvûnikôñchî, and Sajjâpigâ, (and) Vaṅgaka, and Saṁśrahikôñchikâ together with Ḍô[shr]ipâṭaka, and (the village) named Sôñchipâṭaka— these seven pleasant villages.

[1] If the kings had opposed Niḥśaṅkasiṁha, he would have entirely exterminated their families and appropriated all their wealth. The words yadi na vâ of the original text seem to me rather superfluous.

[2] The name may possibly be Âhiavadêvî.

[3] I.e. the god Śiva, Gaurî's (Pârvatî's) husband.

[4] The meaning is that other princes served Vallabha as readily as the Garuḍa, Vishṇu's vehicle, serves that deity. The passage, in my opinion, does not imply that Vallabha was named Nârâyaṇa.

[5] Yama has a buffalo for his vehicle.

[6] In the original the past tense is used in this verse.

[7] The original has pratham-aika-rêkhaḥ (for, in my opinion, °khâ), the meaning of which is given in the St. Petersburgh Dictionary, under the word rêkhâ. In the Madanapâḍa plate of Viśvarûpa (Jour. Beng. As. Soc. Vol. LXV. P. I. p. 9 ff.) we have saundarya-rêkhâ, in line 28, in the sense of 'exquisite beauty,' and in line 13 Lakshmaṇasêna is described as trailôkya-rêkh-âdbhuta, which I take to mean 'marvellous in being the most exquisite being of the three worlds.'

[8] I.e. in Śaka-Saṁvat 1107.

[9] In the original we have the compound nâma-lêkhita, instead of lêkhita-(or likhita-)nâman.

The boundary also is carefully written (here), settling the extent (?) of the land: On the east is Muṇṭakâśvastha, on the west Gôśarîdhara, on the north Râjakâni, and on the south Kardamâlikâ.

(Vs. 21 and 22.) Outside these boundaries, in Maitaḍâ and Dvâripâṭâ, six hamlets were given, and also Achaḍâhêḍikâ. Also five assistants[1] (were given), viz. Thaṭhi, Pâdharu, Vâthôla, Lôhataḍî, and Raṇâyaṇa, together with their wives and children.

(V. 23.) Whatever king there may be in this royal lineage[2] of mine, descending without limit from Bhâskara, to him Śrîvallabha, with words of good omen, frankly says: 'Guard my fame!'

(V. 24.) And if, when my own race is extinct, some other king come, what indeed will I not be[3] to him who does not curtail my fame!

(V. 25.) If any persons ever commit any wrong in regard to any part of this (grant) which has been thus fully described, and the localities of which with their boundaries have been stated, and the fact be ascertained by Brâhmaṇas conversant with the Vêdas,[4] then the primeval Boar[5] at once will mete out due punishment to them.

(V. 26.) Whoever, even for a moment or even in thought, does the slightest kind act to this alms-house, which is both a pilgrimage to the city of heaven and a victorious march against adversaries,[6] he in this world defeats his enemies and is the recipient of all good fortune, and in the life to come rejoices in the coveted world of the immortals.

(V. 27.) People who, religious by nature and with their minds solely directed to acts of religion, do anything whatever here in regard to this (alms-house), may they with their children and children's children enjoy prosperity in this world, and in the life to come obtain the manifold delights of everlasting glorious heaven!

(V. 28.) Whosoever taketh away land, whether given by himself or by others, he becometh a worm in ordure and is burnt together with his ancestors.

(V. 29.) Land has been granted by many kings, commencing with Sagara; whosoever at any time possesses the earth, to him, for the time being, belongs the reward (of a grant).

No. 20.— DEOLI PLATES OF KRISHNA III.;

SAKA-SAMVAT 862.

BY R. G. BHANDARKAR, M.A., PH.D., C.I.E.

The copper-plates, a transcript and translation of which are given below, were found in a well in Dêôlî, about 10 miles south-west of Wardhâ near Nâgpur. They were first published by me in Vol. XVIII. of the Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society. The [1] Viz. for the management of the alms-house, or as servants. I cannot be sure that I have given the proper names, which follow, correctly.

[2] The original has râjyê, literally 'in this kingdom' or 'reign'; but the context shews what is in the author's mind.

[3] I.e. I promise (or am ready) to be to him whatever he wishes me to be; I will be to him even — as the text implies — a nasy-âṅka, i.e. an animal (such as a beast of burden) 'which is marked with the nose-string (nasyâ).' In an Orissa copper-plate inscription (Jour. Beng. As. Soc. Vol. LXIV. P. I. p. 151, l. 3) the second half of a similar verse is: tasy=âhaṁ kara-lagnaḥ syâṁ yô mat-kîrttiṁ na lumpati.

[4] Compare above, Vol. III. p. 262, l. 22, and similar passages in cognate inscriptions.

[5] I.e. the god Vishṇu.

[6] I take the writer to have formed a Dvandva compound (which may always be used in the neuter singular) of surapurayâtrâ and amitrayâtrâ.

Editor of the Epigraphia Indica having procured the original plates from the Secretary of the Society and having got a new facsimile prepared, I now publish a revised edition of my paper on those plates.

The plates are three in number, each being about one foot in length and about eight inches in breadth. The inscription is engraved on one side of the first plate, on both sides of the second, and on one side of the third. The letters are carefully and well formed in the first part, but in the latter the work is negligently done, and in consequence several letters look alike. The seal bears a figure of Śiva.[1]

The inscription is a charter announcing the grant of a village, named Tâlapuruṁshaka (ll. 53 and 57) and situated in the district of Nâgapura-Nandivardhana,[2] to a Brâhmaṇ named Rishiappa or Rishiyapayya (ll. 53 and 57), of the Vêdic schools of Vâjin and Kâṇva and of the Bhâradvâja gôtra. The grant was made by Kṛishṇa III. or Akâlavarsha of the Râshṭrakûṭa family in the name of his brother Jagattuṅga (ll. 48 f. and 51), while staying at his capital Mânyakhêṭa (l. 46 f.), in the year 862, expired, of the Śaka era, corresponding to 940-41 A.D., on the 5th tithi of the dark half of Vaiśâkha, the cyclic year being Śârvarin (l. 47 f.). The genealogy of Kṛishṇa III. is thus given :—

[1] [Dr. Gerson da Cunha was good enough to send me the plates and seal for examination. The seal is soldered on the two ends of a copper ring, which is 4¼" in diameter and about ½" thick. The ring had been already cut when I received the plates. The seal is of square shape, like that of the Kardâ plates of Kakka II. (Ind. Ant. Vol. XII. p. 263). It measures 2⅝" both ways and bears, in relief, a seated figure of Śiva, which faces the front and holds a snake in each hand. On Śiva's proper right are, from top to bottom, an image of Gaṇapati, a chauri and a lamp ; and on his proper left the goddess Pârvatî riding on a lion, and below her a svastika. At the base of the figure is inscribed the legend Śrimatô Srthadasya, in which Arthada, 'the giver of wealth,' must be taken as a synonym of Akâlavarsha, which was a biruda of Kṛishṇa III. Along the margin of the seal passes a border of various indistinct emblems, among which a liṅga and an elephant-goad are recognisable.— E. H.]

[2] [It deserves to be noted that the names of the village granted and of its boundaries and district, as well as those of the donee and of his father, śâkhâ, gôtra and native village, are engraved on erasures. Hence the names of the four boundaries of Tâlapuruṁshaka are difficult to read and uncertain.— E. H.]

This grant clears up several doubts and difficulties as regards the genealogy of the Râshṭrakûṭas. In the first place, the Râshṭrakûṭa family is said to have sprung from the Sâtyaki branch of the Yâdava race and to be known by the name of Tuṅga (verse 6). The genealogy begins with Dantidurga (v. 8), as it was he who acquired for his family the supreme sovereignty of Mahârâshṭra or the Dekkan, the limits of which were the Narmadâ in the north and the Tuṅgabhadrâ in the south. He was succeeded by his paternal uncle Kṛishṇa I., who is represented to have decorated the earth with many temples of Śiva, which looked like the Kailâsa mountain (v. 9). I have shown in my Early Dekkan History that a temple of exceedingly great beauty was caused to be constructed at Ellora by this Kṛishṇarâja, and have said that it was perhaps the Kailâsa itself. I should have said that it could be no other than the Kailâsa. For, if the demigods saw it while moving in the sky in their aerial cars, and were struck with its beauty, as stated in the Baroda inscription, the temple must have had a carved exterior; i.e. it must have been a temple entirely cut out from the rock, and not a mere cave temple without an architectural exterior. There is one such only at Ellora, and that is the Kailâsa. The comparison, made in the present grant, of the temples constructed by Kṛishṇarâja with Kailâsa points, I believe, in the same direction.

The circumstances under which Dhruva Nirupama superseded his brother Gôvinda II. are distinctly given. Sensual pleasures made Gôvinda careless of the kingdom; and, entrusting the affairs of the state to his younger brother, he allowed the sovereign power to drop away from his hands (v. 10). Nothing particular is stated about Gôvinda III. or Jagattuṅga. His son, known as Amôghavarsha, the great patron of the Digambara Jainas, is here called Nṛipatuṅga (v. 12), which name is found in a Jaina work also. The city of Mânyakhêṭa, which, in one grant, is mentioned as simply flourishing in his time, is represented here to have been founded by him. His son, Kṛishṇa II., who is also known by the name of Akâlavarsha, is spoken of as a powerful prince, and several particulars are given about him. He frightened the Gûrjara, destroyed the pride of the Lâṭa, taught humility to the Gauḍas, and his command was obeyed by the Aṅga, the Kaliṅga, the Gâṅga and the Magadha (v. 13). As this Kṛishṇarâja was not the reigning prince, whom the writer of the charter might be suspected of flattering, and as the grant is not reticent about the faults also of some of the other princes, this account may be relied on as true. Akâlavarsha is represented as a powerful prince in the Praśasti at the end of the Uttara-Purâṇa of the Jainas also. The Lâṭa prince alluded to seems to have belonged to the Gujarât branch of the Râshṭrakûṭa family, which was founded in the time of Gôvinda III. or Jagattuṅga, who assigned the province of Lâṭa, that he had conquered, to his brother Indra. Akâlavarsha, the grandson of Jagattuṅga, seems thus to have humbled or uprooted his kinsmen of the Lâṭa country.

Jagattuṅga was the name of Akâlavarsha's son. From the mere fact of the mention of his name in the grants, he was supposed to have been a reigning prince; and, following others, I stated in the first English edition of my Early Dekkan History that he became king after his father. But from a number of circumstances it soon appeared to me that he could not have been an actual king, and in the Marâṭhî edition of the work I corrected that statement. This inference of mine has now been confirmed by the grant before us, in which he is represented to have been taken away by the creator to heaven without having succeeded to the throne, as if through the solicitations of the heavenly damsels who had heard of his beauty (v. 14). Akâlavarsha was thus succeeded by his grandson Indra III., the son of Jagattuṅga.

There has hitherto been some confusion as regards the next prince, named Amôghavarsha, who was the son of Indra III. He is not mentioned by name or as a king in the Sâṅgalî grant of his brother and successor, but is noticed in the Khârêpâṭaṇ grant; while, in the third and only other grant which gives us information about the two princes, there is a mistake which has led all writers on the subject to drop Gôvinda IV. altogether and regard Amôghavarsha as the only prince. But the grant before us clears the difficulty. Amôghavarsha is there spoken of as "having immediately gone to heaven, as if through affection for his father" (v. 17). He reigned therefore for a very short time (for a year, as stated in the Bhâdâna grant published after this), and hence is not noticed in the Sângalî grant. The next prince, Gôvinda IV., is of course highly praised in his Sângalî grant. But the grant before us represents him to be a prince addicted to sensual pleasures, and to have died an early death on account of his vicious courses (v. 18). The Khârêpâṭaṇ grant agrees with it in speaking of him as "the abode of the dramatic sentiment of love" and as "surrounded by women."

Our grant agrees also with that found at Khârêpâṭaṇ in representing his successor as a very virtuous prince. His name was Amôghavarsha, and he was the son of Jagattuṅga, and consequently the uncle of Gôvinda IV. He assumed the throne, being entreated to do so by the feudatory chiefs, who thought there was none else able to maintain the power of the Râshṭrakûṭas (v. 19). The Khârêpâṭaṇ grant gives his proper name, which was Baddiga. He was assisted in the government of the kingdom by his son Kṛishṇa III., who was engaged in wars with his neighbours and subjugated Dantiga and Vappuka (v. 22). He uprooted Rachhyâmalla and placed on the throne in the Gâṅga country (Gâṅgapâṭî, i.e. Gaṅgavâḍi) a prince of the name of Bhûtârya (v. 23). In an inscription at Âtakûr, noticed by Mr. Rice[1] and published by Dr. Fleet,[2] one Bûtuga is represented to have killed a prince of the name of Râchamalla and to have made himself master of the Gâṅga country. Bûtuga assisted Kannaradêva, i.e. Kṛishṇa III., who is mentioned at the beginning of the inscription, in destroying Râjâditya, the Chôḷa king, and received a reward from him. Bûtuga is elsewhere called Bûtayya,[3] and our Bhûtârya is a Sanskṛitised form of this, while our Rachhyâmalla is clearly the Râchamalla of the Âtakûr inscription. But in the latter, Kṛishṇa's connection with the destruction of Râchamalla and the rise of Bûtayya are not mentioned. The reason probably is that it was not necessary to state the fact in that manner. But there can be no question that Bûtayya was assisted by Kṛishṇa III. and owed his elevation to him, since, in the fight with Râjâditya, Bûtayya acted as if he was his feudatory and received a reward as from a master. The name of the Pallava whom Kṛishṇa III. is stated to have subdued was Aṇṇiga (v. 24). Who the Dantiga and Vappuka were, that he put down, it is difficult to say; but the former name was borne by some Pallava rulers of Kâñchî.

On the death of Amôghavarsha, which seems to have taken place a short time before the date of this grant, Kṛishṇa III. ascended the throne (v. 28). He was called Akâlavarsha also, as the other princes of this dynasty, bearing the name Kṛishṇa, were. Here too the present grant clears up a difficulty. Misunderstanding a passage in the Kardâ grant, Kṛishṇa III. is made by writers on this dynasty to be an elder brother of Amôghavarsha, and another Kṛishṇa is brought in, who is identified with one of his younger sons, who never reigned, but is represented to have reigned and is called Kṛishṇa IV. In my Early Dekkan History I have given the true sense of the passage and shewn the mistakes. The Khârêpâṭaṇ grant, which gives the true relationship and is perfectly clear on the points, was disregarded. But now the present grant confirms the account in the Khârêpâṭaṇ plates, so far as it goes, and, according to them both, Baddiga or Amôghavarsha had no brother of the name of Kṛishṇa who could have preceded or succeeded him; the king who preceded him was his nephew Gôvinda IV.; and the Kṛishṇa who succeeded him was his son. There was no other Kṛishṇa, who followed this last and could be called Kṛishṇa IV., according to any of our authorities. Jagattuṅga, the brother of Kṛishṇa III., in whose name the grant of the village is made, must have died before him; for the latter was succeeded by Khoṭṭiga, who appears to have been Kṛishṇarâja's step-brother according to the Kardâ grant, and he was followed by the son of his brother Nirupama.

[2] Ep. Ind. Vol. II. p. 173.

[3] Ind. Ant. Vol. XII. p. 270.

Jagattuṅga's name therefore does not appear in the subsequent history, but those of his brothers who were probably his step-brothers.

The name of the grantee ends in appa, or apayya, which shews that he was a Southern Brâhmaṇ. He belonged to the Kâṇva school of the White Yajurvêda, and even at the present day there are followers of that school near Nâgpur. The village Tâlapuruṁshaka, which was granted, was bounded on the east by another of the name of [Mâdâṭaḍhiṇḍhara], on the south by the river [Kanhanâ], on the west by the village of [Môhama] or [Môhama]grâma, and on the north by [Vadhrira] (l. 56 f.). Of these, Kanhanâ is the present river of the same name, which has a course from the north-west of Nâgpur to the south-east; Môhama or Môhamagrâma is the Mohgaon of the present day, situated in the Chhindwârâ district, about 50 miles to the north-west of Nâgpur; and Vadhrira is Berdi in the vicinity of that town. Nothing corresponding to the remaining two names appears on the map, and I am not able to identify them.

TRANSLATION.

[The first 28 verses are identical with verses 1-8, 10-13, 15-21, 24, and 26-33 of the Karhâḍ plates and have been already translated above, Vol. IV. p. 286 ff.]

(Line 43.) And he, the Paramabhaṭṭâraka Mahârâjâdhirâja Paramêśvara, the great devotee of Mahêśvara (Śiva), the prosperous Akâlavarshadêva Pṛithvîvallabha, the prosperous Vallabhanarêndradêva, who meditates on the feet of the Paramabhaṭṭâraka Mahârâjâdhirâja Paramêśvara, the prosperous Amôghavarshadêva,— being well, commands all the people of his country :—

(L. 46.) " Be it known to you that, while staying in the prosperous capital Mânyakhêṭa, when eight hundred and sixty-two years have elapsed from the time of the Śaka king, on the fifth tithi of the dark (half) of Vaiśâkha falling in the year Śârvarin, for the enhancement of the holy fame of (my) younger brother, the prosperous Jagattuṅgadêva, who is dearer to me even than (my) life,—

(Verse 29.) " Let this grant of land fulfill the wishes of that Jagattuṅga who has always surpassed Lakshmaṇa in serving (his) eldest brother with incomparable devotion, the god of love by (his) beauty, the well-known lovable son of Dharma (i.e. Yudhishṭhira) by (his) good deeds, the cool-rayed (moon) by (his) lustre, and the lion by (his) bravery ;—

(L. 51.) " With this intention I have given to Rishiyappa, who has come from Nandivardhana, belongs to the Bhâradvâja gôtra, is a student of the Vâji-Kâṇva śâkhâ, (is)

(L. 55.) To the east of it (is) the village named [Mâdâṭadhiṇḍhara]; to the south the river [Kanhanâ]; to the west the village of [Môhama]; (and) to the north the village of [Vadhrira].

(V. 30.) " He who takes away land that has been given by himself or others, becomes a worm in ordure and is cooked (in hell) together with (his) ancestors."

(V. 31.) " Râmabhadra again and again entreats all future kings that they should from time to time protect this bridge of virtue, (which is) common to (all) kings."

A.—RAJARAJA.

No. 27.— Inscription in the Vaikuṇṭha-Perumâḷ temple at Maṇimaṅgalam.[1]

1 [Ti *]ru-magaḷ pôl . . . .
2 k=iyâṇḍu 15vadu Isha[bha]-nâ[ya]ṟṟu pûrvva-ba(pa)kshattu [da]śamiyu[m*] Viyâḷa-kiḷam[ai]yu[m p]eṟṟa [A]ttattiṉ nâḷ.

"In the 15th year (of the reign) of . . . .,[2] on the day of Hasta, which corresponded to a Thursday and to the tenth tithi of the first fortnight of the month of Ṛishabha."

As Râjarâja's reign has been found to commence between the 24th December A.D. 984 and (approximately) the 29th August A.D. 985 (above, p. 48, No. 25), a date in the month of Ṛishabha (April-May) of the 15th year of his reign will be expected to fall either in A.D. 999 (in Śaka-Saṁvat 921 expired) or in A.D. 1000 (in Śaka-Saṁvat 922 expired).

In A.D. 999 the month of Ṛishabha lasted from the 23rd April to the 24th May. During that time the 10th tithi of the bright half (of the lunar month Vaiśâkha) commenced 0 h. 53 m. after mean sunrise of Thursday, the 27th April, and ended 1 h. 4 m. after mean sunrise of Friday, the 28th April; and the nakshatras on the two days were—on the Thursday, by the Brahma-siddhânta and according to Garga, Uttara-Phalgunî the whole day; and by the equal space system, Pûrva-Phalgunî up to 9 h. 12 m., and afterwards Uttara-Phalgunî;

[1] No. 289 of the Government Epigraphist's collection for 1897.

[2] The name of the king is lost, but the historical introduction, the whole of which is preserved, makes it certain that the inscription belongs to the time of Râjarâja I.

on the Friday, Uttara-Phalgunî, by the equal space system and according to Garga for 10 h. 30 m., and by the Brahma-siddhânta for 7 h. 13 m.; and afterwards Hasta.

In A.D. 1000 the month of Rishabha lasted from the 23rd April to the 23rd May; and during that time the 10th tithi of the bright half (of the lunar month Jyaishṭha) ended 20 h 53 m. after mean sunrise of Wednesday, the 15th May, when the nakshatra was Hasta, by the equal space system and according to Garga for 22 h. 20 m., and by the Brahma-siddhânta for 19 h. 3 m., after mean sunrise.

From this it follows that, if the year of the king's reign is correctly given, either the nakshatra (Hasta) has been quoted incorrectly, or the weekday (Thursday). In A.D. 999 the 10th tithi of the bright half of the month of Rishabha may undoubtedly be joined with Thursday, the 27th April, because the tithi commenced as early as 0 h. 53 m. after mean sunrise of that day;[1] but during no part of the Thursday was the moon in the nakshatra Hasta. On the other hand, for A.D. 1000 the day of the date would undoubtedly be the 15th May, when the nakshatra was Hasta up to nearly the end of the day; but the 15th May A.D. 1000 was a Wednesday, not a Thursday.

My own opinion is, that the day of the date probably is Thursday, the 27th April A.D. 999, and that the writer, confounding the solar and the lunar months Jyaishṭha, without verifying his statement, has coupled with that day the nakshatra Hasta, because in the great majority of years[2] Hasta really is the proper nakshatra for the 10th tithi of the bright half of the lunar Jyaishṭha.

I may add that I have calculated the date also for the surrounding years A.D. 998 and 1001, as well as for A.D. 1009 and 1010, without any satisfactory results.

Since, during the month of Kumbha, a twelfth tithi cannot possibly be joined with the nakshatra Śatabhishaj, I feel confident that the twelfth is wrongly quoted here instead of the second tithi of the bright half, and that the date, therefore, in every respect is the same as No. 20, above, Vol. IV. p. 262.

[1] I could quote very many similar dates from my lists.

[2] A comparison of twelve native calendars for different years has yielded the following result for the day on which the 10th tithi of the bright half of the lunar Jyaishṭha ended: In nine years the nakshatra was Hasta at the commencement of the day, and in two others towards the end of it; and in the remaining year the nakshatra at the commencement of the day was Chitrâ, which follows immediately upon Hasta.

[4] The identity of this king with Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa I. is proved by the fact that three persons mentioned in this inscription are also referred to in another inscription at Maṇimaṅgalam (above, Vol. IV. p. 262, No. 20), which opens with the usual historical introduction of the inscriptions of Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa I. (Pugaḷ-mâdu viḷaṅga).

2[9]vadu Mîṉa-nâyaṟṟu p[ûr]vva-pakshattu sattamiyum Buda[n]-kilamaiyum peṟṟa Mirugaśîrishattu nâḷ.

"In the 2[9]th year (of the reign) of the emperor of the three worlds, the glorious Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷadêva, who was pleased to take Madurai, Îḷam, and the crowned head of the Pâṇḍya,—on the day of Mṛigaśirsha, which corresponded to a Wednesday and to the seventh tithi of the first fortnight of the month of Mîna."

As the reign of Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa III. commenced between the 5th June and the 8th July A.D. 1178 (above, Vol. IV. p. 266), a date in the month of Mîna (February-March) of the 29th year of his reign will be expected to fall in A.D. 1207 (in Śaka-Saṁvat 1128 expired); and for that year this date is correct.

In A.D. 1207 the month of Mîna lasted from the 23rd February to the 24th March; and during that period the seventh tithi of the bright half (of the lunar month Chaitra) ended 20 h. 16 m. after mean sunrise of Wednesday, the 7th March A.D. 1207, when the nakshatra was Mṛigaśirsha, by the equal space system and according to Garga for 19 h. 42 m., and by the Brahma-siddhânta for 18 h. 23 m., after mean sunrise.

"In the 37th year (of the reign) of the emperor of the three worlds Tribhuvanavîradêva, who was pleased to take Madurai, Îḷam, Karuvûr, and the crowned head of the Pâṇḍya, and was pleased to perform the anointment of heroes and the anointment of victors,—on the day of Hasta, which corresponded to a Sunday and to the ninth tithi of the first fortnight of the month of Mithuna."

According to what has been stated above, a date in the month of Mithuna (May-June) of the 37th year of the king's reign will be expected to fall either in A.D. 1214 (in Śaka-Saṁvat 1136 expired) or in A.D. 1215 (in Śaka-Saṁvat 1137 expired). As a matter of fact, this date is correct for A.D. 1215.

In A.D. 1215 the month of Mithuna lasted from the 27th May to the 26th June; and during that time the 9th tithi of the bright half (of the lunar month Âshâḍha) ended 17 h. 17 m. after mean sunrise of Sunday, the 7th June A.D. 1215, when the nakshatra was Hasta, by the equal space system and according to Garga for 5 h. 55 m., and by the Brahma-siddhânta for 2 h. 38 m., after mean sunrise.

The date reduces the period during which the reign of Kulôttuṅga-Chôḷa III. must have commenced (by three days, viz.) to the time from (approximately) the 8th June to the 8th July A.D. 1178.

From what has been stated above, this date of the month of Ṛishabha (April-May) of the 20th year of the king's reign would be expected to fall in A.D. 1198 (in Śaka-Saṁvat 1120 expired); but for that year the date is quite incorrect.

In A.D. 1198 the month of Ṛishabha lasted from the 25th April to the 25th May, and during that time the 10th tithi of the bright half (of the lunar month Jyaishṭha, as a kshaya-tithi) commenced 0 h. 43 m. and ended 22 h. 43 m. after mean sunrise of Sunday, the 17th May, when the nakshatras by the equal space system and according to Garga were Uttara-Phalgunî and Hasta, and by the Brahma-siddhânta Hasta and Chitrâ.

Of the many years for which I have calculated the date, only the year A.D. 1200 (the month Ṛishabha of which would fall in the 22nd year of the king's reign) yields an approximately correct result. In that year the tithi of the date ended 7 h. 9 m. after mean sunrise of Thursday, the 25th May, which was the last day of the month of Ṛishabha, and on which the nakshatra was Svâti, by the equal space system and according to Garga from 19 h. 42 m., and by the Brahma-siddhânta from 16 h. 25 m., after mean sunrise.[1] Even this result I cannot regard as satisfactory, because, in my opinion, this Thursday, the 25th May A.D. 1200, would have been described as 'the day of Chitrâ.'

No. 22.—VAKKALERI PLATES OF KIRTIVARMAN II.; SAKA-SAMVAT 679.

BY F. KIELHORN, PH.D., LL.D., C.I.E.; GÖTTINGEN.

These plates were first brought to public notice, about twenty years ago, by Mr. L. Rice, C.I.E., who in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. VIII. p. 23 ff., gave the text and a translation of the inscription which they contain, with photolithographs prepared under Dr. Fleet's supervision. The plates were obtained, and are still, at Vakkalêri, the head-quarters of a hôbaḷi in the Kôlâr district of the Mysore state. My revised text[2] is based on excellent impressions, furnished to me by Dr. Hultzsch, for whom the original plates were kindly obtained on loan by Mr. Rice.

These are five copper-plates, the first and last of which are inscribed on one side only, and each of which measures about 9¼" broad by from 4⅝" (in the middle) to 5" (at the two ends) high. The plates have raised rims and are strung on a ring, which had been cut already before the impressions were taken. The ring is about 4¾" in diameter and ⅜" thick, and has its ends secured in the base of an elliptical seal, which measures about 1⅜" by 1¼" and bears, in relief on a countersunk surface, a standing boar which faces to the proper right.— The writing is well engraved and is in an excellent state of preservation, so that almost every single letter may be read with absolute certainty. The characters[1] belong to the same variety of the southern alphabet which is used, e.g., in the Togarchêḍu and Karṇûl district plates of the Western Chalukya Vinayâditya, Ind. Ant. Vol. VI. pp. 86 and 89, and Plates. As regards individual letters, the chief point to note is that, except in the akshara lû, in which we have the full form of l of the older inscriptions, the letter l is everywhere denoted by the sign which in the earlier Western Chalukya inscriptions, so far as I know, is employed for the subscript l only.[2] For other test-letters, such as kh, j and b, the ordinary earlier types are used throughout.[3] The inscription contains no sign of punctuation, nor any form of a final consonant. The size of the letters is about $\frac{3}{16}''$.—The language of the inscription is Sanskrit, and, with the exception of a well-known verse in praise of the god Vishṇu in lines 1 and 2 and three benedictive and imprecatory verses ascribed to Vyâsa, in lines 72-76, the whole is in prose. From the word śrîmatâṁ in line 2 to âjñâpayati in line 61 the text forms a single sentence, the construction of which is not always correct, and in which occur two forms[4] which are contrary to the strict rules of grammar. In respect of orthography, it will suffice to draw attention to the use of the Dravidian ḷ in pâḷidhvaja, ll. 20, 27 and 33, and in some proper names the most important of which are Kaḷabhra, Kêraḷa, Chôḷa, and Siṁhaḷa, and to the fact that visarga before surd guttural and labial letters has mostly been changed to the jihvâmûlîya and upâdhmânîya, and has nearly always been assimilated to a following ś and s. In general, the text is remarkably free from clerical mistakes.

[1] It is easy to prove that during the time, which is actually occupied by the tenth tithi of the bright half, the moon cannot possibly be in the nakshatra Svâti during the month of Ṛishabha.

[2] A revised text of part of the inscription was given by Dr. Hultzsch, from the published photolithographs, in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 146.— Dr. Hultzsch informs me that he cleaned the plates with diluted nitric acid before taking the fresh impressions, from which the accompanying photolithographs have been prepared under Dr. Fleet's supervision.

The inscription is one of the Western Chalukya Mahârâjâdhirâja Paramêśvara Bhaṭṭâraka Kîrtivarman [II.] Satyâśraya, styled Śrîpṛithivîvallabha, 'the favourite of fortune and the earth,' whose genealogy is given in lines 2-59. It records (in lines 61-69) that, when six-hundred and seventy-nine Śaka years had gone by, in the eleventh year of his reign, on the full-moon tithi of the month of Bhâdrapada, while encamped at the village of Bhaṇḍâragaviṭṭage on the northern bank of the river Bhîmarathî, the king, at the request of a certain Dôsirâja, granted the village of Suḷḷiyûr, together with Neṅgiyûr and Nandivaḷḷi, situated in the midst of the villages Tâmaramuge, Pânuṅgal, Kiṟuvaḷḷi and Bâḷavuru, on the southern bank of the river Aṟadoṟe, in the Pânuṅgal-vishaya, to Mâdhavaśarman, the son of Kṛishṇaśarman and son's son of the student of the Ṛig- and Yajurvêdas Vishṇuśarman, of the Kâmakâyana gôtra. The charter (according to lines 76 and 77) was written by the Mahâsâṁdhivigrahika Anivârita Dhanaṁjaya,[5] styled Puṇyavallabha, 'the favourite of religious merit.'

The date does not admit of verification; for Śaka-Saṁvat 679 expired it would correspond to the 2nd September A.D. 757. Of the localities mentioned, Bhaṇḍâragaviṭṭage, according to Dr. Fleet, must be 'Bhandâr-Kawte' in the Sholâpur district—the 'Kowteh' of the map—on a stream which flows into the Sîna, which again flows into the Bhîma (the Bhîmarathî of the inscription); Pânuṅgal is the modern Hâṅgal in the Dhârwâr district, and Bâḷavuru seems to be the modern Bâḷûr, three miles south by east of Hâṅgal; the other places have now disappeared.

[1] See Prof. Bühler's Indische Palæographie, Plate VII. col. xvi. The sign No. 12, given there as ṅka, is really ṭu; and the sign No. 19 is ṭga, not ḍga. Under No. 2, the sign for â is omitted (see l. 87 of the inscription); on the other hand, the form of pha, given under No. 28, does not occur in the inscription.

[2] Compare, e.g., the subscript l of the akshara lla of the word vallabhêna in the last line of the Togarchêḍu plates, Ind. Ant. Vol. VI. p. 87. This sign for l differs from the sign for l which is used throughout in the Nausârî plates of the Gujarât Chalukya Yuvarâja Śryâśraya-Śîlâditya, and very frequently in the Surat plates of the same; see Jour. Bo. As. Soc. Vol. XVI. p. 2, and Plates, and Vienna Or. Congress, Arian section, p. 225, and Plates.

[4] Âtmasâtkṛitya in line 14, and hastîkṛitya in line 43.

[5] This, perhaps, is the Anivârita-puṇyavallabha who wrote the Kâñchî inscription of Vikramâditya (probably II. the father of Kîrtivarman II.); see above, Vol. III. p. 360.

Of lines 1-59 of the inscription, which contain the genealogy of the donor, commencing with Polekêśi-vallabha (Pulikêśin I.), it would be superfluous to give a translation or even an abstract of the contents. Lines 1-35 have been translated by Dr. Fleet in Ind. Ant. Vol. IX. p. 128 f.,[1] and lines 36-52 by Dr. Hultzsch in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 146 f.;[2] and every historical fact, recorded in the inscription, has been fully discussed by Dr. Fleet and by Prof. Bhandarkar in their accounts of the Western Chalukya dynasty.

[1] For the proper explanation of the word trairâjya in line 18, see now Dr. Fleet in the second edition of his Dynasties, Bombay Gazetteer, Vol. I. Part II. p. 362, note 6.

[2] Owing to my different reading, I do not take the compound ghûrṇamân-ârṇas in line 49 as a proper name.

[3] From impressions supplied by Dr. Hultzsch.

[4] From here down to the word bhaṭṭârakasya in line 35 the text is essentially the same as the text of the three Nerûr copper-plate inscriptions of Vijayâditya, published in Ind. Ant. Vol. IX. p. 126 ff. Some slight verbal differences will be pointed out below.

[5] Metre: Ślôka (Anushṭubh). [6] Read vapuḥ ||.

[7] Two of the Nerûr plates, mentioned above, have Chalikyânâṁ.

[8] The two plates, mentioned in the preceding note, have Pulakêśi-.

[9] This is the reading also of the cognate inscriptions, with the exception of the Haidarâbâd plates of Pulikêsin II., which have pratibaddha; see Ind. Ant. Vol. VI. p. 73, text l. 7.

[10] This tasya is out of place here and should have been omitted. The three Nerûr plates have °śabdasya.

[11] Here one would have expected °śvaras=tasya.

[12] At first sight °gamêṇê° seems to be engraved, but the last akshara in the original really is ṇai.

[13] The three Nerûr plates, mentioned above, have tadrit-.

[14] Originally śriyaṁ seems to have been engraved. [15] Read sât=kṛitvâ.

[16] The four copper-plate inscriptions of Vinayâditya, instead of this, have an epithet which, in my opinion, is prabhâva-kuliśa-dalita-Chôḷa-Pâṇḍya-Kêraḷa-dharaṇîdhara-nâyamâna-mânaśṛiṁgasya; see Ind. Ant. Vol. VI. p. 86, l. 16, and p. 89, l. 16, Vol. XIX. p. 150, l. 11, and Vol. VII. p. 301, l. 15. The epithet of our text occurs first in the plates of Vijayâditya, ibid. Vol. IX. p. 127, l. 12.

[1] The three Nerûr plates have -sûnôḥ pitur=âjñayâ Bâ°.

[2] The same plates have Kamêra-; see Dr. Fleet in Ind. Ant. Vol. IX. p. 127, note 24.

[3] Pâramaiśvarya is formed from paramêśvara as râjapaurushya is from râjapurusha.

[5] The three Nerûr plates have sat-sâhasa-.

[6] Read parâṅmukhî°.

[7] The akshara in brackets, which is not quite clear in the impressions, may possibly be ḍa (but is not ṭa). There is the same uncertainty about the actual reading in the three Nerûr plates. Above, Vol. IV. p. 343, l. 50, the reading appears to be paḍa (not pada). In the Lakshmêśvar inscription noticed by Dr. Fleet in Ind. Ant. Vol. VII. p. 112, the reading distinctly is, in the first part, paṭaḍhakkâ, and in the second, paḍaḍhakkâ. Mr. Kittel's Kannaḍa-English Dictionary gives paḍaḍakke and paḍadakke in the sense of 'a kettle-drum.' Above, Vol. IV. p. 305, l. 26, and elsewhere, we have pâlikêtana-pratiḍhakkâ.

[8] Read vallabha-.

[9] Here one would have expected -bhaṭṭârakas=tasya.

[10] From here down to the word bhaṭṭârakasya in line 52 the text is given and translated by Dr. Hultzsch in South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. I. p. 146.

[12] In reading this word, I follow Dr. Hultzsch, according to whom the Tuṇḍâka-vishaya is the Toṇḍai-maṇḍalam; but the reading of our text might possibly be Tuṁḍâka-.

[1] Read -viśêshau.

[2] According to the strict rules of grammar this should have been hastê kṛitvâ; see Pâṇini, I. 4, 77.

[4] Read -puṇyô=nisdrita-.

[5] The reading, in my opinion, is distinctly nidhânê, not bhidhânê.

[6] There can be no doubt that the actual reading is jayamambha-.

[7] Instead of the passage from śarad- to atishṭhipad=, one would have expected a compound, commencing with sthâpita-śarad- and ending with °maya-jayastambhô.

No. 23.—MINDIGAL INSCRIPTION OF RAJADHIRAJA; SAKA-SAMVAT 970.

BY H. KRISHNA SASTRI, B.A.

Miṇḍigal is a village about eleven miles north-west of Chintâmaṇi, the head-quarters of the Chintâmaṇi tâluka of the Kôlâr district in the Mysore State. The older form of the name, Miṇḍumgallu, occurs in line 9 of the inscription, which also states that the village belonged to the district of Koyyakoṛe-nâḍu.

The subjoined record was first brought to my notice by a goldsmith of Miṇḍigal, who sent me for examination a pencil-sketch of the writing on the stone, expecting some hidden treasure to be referred to therein. It was, however, found out to be an important inscription of the Chôḷa king Râjâdhirâja, dated both in the Śaka era and in a year of his reign, and I was at once deputed by Dr. Hultzsch to prepare inked estampages of the stone, from which I now edit the inscription. The slab on which the inscription is written measures 5′ by 4′ 9″ and is fixed into the platform of the Sômêśvara temple in the fields to the north-east of Miṇḍigal. At the top, to the proper right of lines 1 and 2, are engraved the figures of a cow and a calf. The characters are of the old Kanarese type and are neatly engraved between horizontal lines. The language of the inscription is throughout Kanarese, with the exception of the Tamiḻ words kôv=Irâjakêsaripadmar=âna uḍeyâr in l. 3, and yâṇḍu in l. 4.

As regards the orthography of the inscription, I have to make the following remarks:—(1) Except in the case of â, the secondary forms of long vowels do not differ from those for the corresponding short ones. (2) The anusvâra is represented by a small dot, which is placed at the right upper corner of the letter to which it belongs. The same symbol is used in l. 1 for the cypher, as in other Kanarese and Telugu inscriptions. (3) The superscribed form of r does not occur in the inscription; and where such a form is required, it is indicated by the doubling of the consonant to which it was meant to be prefixed. (4) The anusvâra takes the place of other nasals before ga (ll. 9 and 13), gha (l. 5), da (l. 5) and pa (l. 8). (5) The virâma is

[1] Read °nîyam ||.

[2] Metre of this and the following verses: Ślôka (Anushṭubh).

[3] Instead of pha, la or laṁ seems to have been originally engraved.

[4] Read °llabhêna.

represented, as in modern Kanarese and Telugu, by a zigzag line attached to the talekaṭṭu. (6) The consonants ra and ṟa, ḷa and ḻa are used in their proper places, except in the cases of aḷivaṁ for aḻivaṁ (l. 11) and goḷaṁgaṁ for goḷagaṁ (l. 14).

In gaḷdeyuvaṁ (l. 15 f.) and Bâṇarâsiyuvan (l. 17) the accusative termination is, in strict accordance with the rules of grammar, affixed only to the last of the nouns which are the objects of the same verb, while the others remain in the nominative case combined with the copulative conjunction uṁ; but in Sâleyu[ṁ]* (l. 3) the accusative termination is omitted. The word saṁvatsaradal (l. 1 f.), which ought to stand after muvattaneya (l. 4), has been misplaced.

The inscription records the gift of some land and of an oil-mill to the temple of Sômêśvara at Miṇḍuṁgallu by the Daṇḍanâyaka Appimayya, surnamed Râjêndra-Chôḷa-Brahmamârâya (ll. 4 ff. and 11 f.), who governed the Mârâjavâḍi Seven-thousand country from his camp at Vallûru. This grant was made when a certain Bairayya, surnamed Râjêndra-Chôḷa-Pôṁpalamârâya,[1] the son of Muddarasa of Muṟuganamale (l. 7 ff.), had repaired the temple of Sômêśvara. The land granted was irrigated by two tanks,— Pallavakaṭṭu (ll. 9 and 12) and Baḍagaṇa-Pôṁpalakaṭṭu (l. 13 f.), the first of which had been built by Bairayya and the second by Appimayya.

The record is dated in the Śaka year 970, which corresponded to the current Sarvajit-saṁvatsara and to the thirtieth year of the reign of (the Chôḷa king) Râjakêsarivarman, alias Râjâdhirâjadêva, 'who took the head of the glorious Vîrapâṇḍya and the Sâle of the Chêra king.' This date corresponds to A.D. 1047-48[2] and has enabled Professor Kielhorn to calculate the dates of four other inscriptions of the same king and to show that his reign commenced between the 15th March and the 3rd December A.D. 1018,[3] i.e. during the reign of his predecessor Râjêndra-Chôḷa I. whose reign extended from A.D. 1011-12 to at least A.D. 1033.[4] Consequently Râjâdhirâja must have been the co-regent of Râjêndra-Chôḷa I. and did not rule independently before the death of the other.[5] The birudas of the chiefs Appimayya and Bairayya, viz. Râjêndra-Chôḷa-Brahmamârâya and Râjêndra-Chôḷa-Pôṁpalamârâya, were evidently acquired by them during the reign of Râjâdhirâja's predecessor Râjêndra-Chôḷa I. The conquests of Râjâdhirâja are described in detail in an inscription of his 29th year at Maṇimaṅgalam. One of his achievements is stated to have been that he routed the Chêra king and followed the example of his ancestor Râjarâja I. in destroying the ships at Kâṇḍaḷûr-Śâlai.[5] This is the incident alluded to by the biruda 'Sêramana Sâleyu[ṁ] koṇḍa*,' which is given to Râjâdhirâja in l. 2 f. of the subjoined inscription.[6] The 'taking of the head of Vîrapâṇḍya' is not mentioned in the historical introduction of the Maṇimaṅgalam inscription, which refers to three other Pâṇḍya enemies of Râjâdhirâja.[5]

Of the proper names contained in this inscription the following admit of identification. The Mârâjavâḍi Seven-thousand province (l. 6), over which Appimayya ruled, is mentioned in other inscriptions as Mahârâjapâḍi, Mârâyapâḍi and Mârjavâḍa-râjya, and Vallûru (l. 6 f.), the residence of Appimayya, has been identified with a village of the same name, about 8 miles north-west of Cuddapah.[7] Muṟuganamale (l. 7) is identical with Murugamale, a village near Chintâmaṇi. The first of the two tanks mentioned in the inscription, viz. Pallavakaṭṭu, appears to have been situated near the Sômêśvara temple (ll. 9-12). The ruins of it still exist a few yards to the east of the same temple.

5 South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. III. p. 52.

6 Sâle is the Kanarese equivalent of Śâlai, i.e. Kâṇḍaḷûr-Śâlai.

7 South-Ind. Inscr. Vol. III. p. 106. In his Epigraphia Carnatica, Vol. IV. Introduction, p. 20, Mr. Rice mentions Vallûr as being situated "to the north-east of Mysore and described as the capital of the Râmarâjavâḍi Seven-thousand." This name is perhaps a mistake for Mahârâjavâḍi.

No. 24.—DAULATPURA PLATE OF BHOJADEVA I. OF MAHODAYA; [HARSHA-]SAMVAT 100.

BY F. KIELHORN, PH. D., LL.D., C.I.E.; GÖTTINGEN.

This plate is said to have been found, some thirty years ago, among the ruins of an ancient temple near the village of Sivâ, the 'Sewa' of the map, about 7 miles E.N.E. of the town of Didwâna in Jôdhpur (Mârwâḍ), Râjputâna, Indian Atlas, quarter-sheet No. 33 N.E., long. 74° 44′ E., lat. 27° 27′ N. It was taken at the time to the small fortress of Daulatpurâ, about 4 miles E.S.E. of Didwâna, but since September 1897 has been deposited in the Historical Records Office at Jôdhpur. I edit the inscription which it contains from impressions, which were kindly furnished to Dr. Hultzsch by Munsiff Debiprasad of Jôdhpur and by Dr. Führer.

This is a single plate, inscribed on one side only. It is very similar to the Dighwâ-Dubaulî plate of Mahêndrapâla and the Bengal As. Soc.'s plate of Vinâyakapâla, published by Dr. Fleet, with photolithographs, in Ind. Ant. Vol. XV. p. 105 ff. and p. 138 ff. The plate is about 1′ 9½″ broad by 1′ 4½″ high, and on to its proper right side is soldered a heavy brass seal, about 6½″ broad by 9¾″ high, the top of which is raised into an arched peak. The letters of the legend on the seal are in relief, and the arch contains a standing figure which is only faintly visible in the impressions. The writing on both the plate and the seal is well executed, and in an excellent state of preservation. The size of the letters on the plate is between ⅛″ and ¼″, and on the seal, between ⅜″ and ½″. The characters belong to the northern class of alphabets, and are similar to, but in some particulars[3] more antique than, those of the two plates mentioned above. They include, in line 16 of the plate, numerical symbols for 100 and 10, and the numeral figure for 3.[4] The language of the inscription is Sanskṛit, and, with the exception of one verse in lines 15 and 16, the text is in prose. In respect of orthography, I may note the use of the sign for v, to denote b; the constant doubling of t before r; the employment of n instead of anusvâra in the word anśa, in lines 10 and 14 of the plate; the use of parambhagavatîbhaktô in lines 4 and 6[5] of the plate, and of paraṁbhagavatîbhaktô in lines 5 and 10 of the seal, for paramabhagavatîbhaktô; and the occurrence of the term samvatsrô,[6] for saṁvatsaraḥ or the ordinary saṁvat, in the date, in line 16.

The inscription is one of a Mahârâja Bhôjadêva, who, from his residence or camp of Mahôdaya, on the representation of one of the people concerned, renews here a grant which had been made by his great-grandfather, the Mahârâja Vatsarâjadêva, and continued by his grandfather, the Mahârâja Nâgabhaṭadêva, but, in his own reign, had fallen into abeyance. The object of the grant is the village of Sivâ, in the Ḍêṇḍvânaka-vishaya of the Gurjaratrâ-

The genealogy of Bhôjadêva, which is given on both the plate and the seal, was known already from the Dighwâ-Dubaulî and Bengal As. Soc.'s plates mentioned above. The Dighwâ-Dubaulî plate, which is dated 55 years later, records a grant of his son Mahêndrapâla; and from the Bengal As. Soc.'s plate we know that Mahêndrapâla's son and successor was another Bhôjadêva (or Bhôjadêva II.), who in turn was succeeded by Vinâyakapâla, his brother from a different mother. All the three grants were issued from the skandhâvâra (i.e. either a camp or royal residence[1]) at Mahôdaya. As was first pointed out by Dr. F. E. Hall, Mahôdaya or Mahôdayâ, according to the lexicographers,[2] is another name of Kanyakubjâ (Kânyakubja, or Kanauj), and there is no reason now why that identification should not be accepted here. So long as only the two other grants were available, which refer to localities about 250 miles south-east and 150 miles east by north of Kanauj, it could well be doubted[3] whether the government of these Mahârâjas had extended so far west as to include Kanauj; but we now see from the present inscription that these princes held sway even over a part of the country which is more than 300 miles west of Kanauj, and for the three grants together it would be difficult to find a place of issue more favourably situated than that well-known city.

Our inscription indicates the solution of another difficulty presented by the other grants. The plate of Mahêndrapâla, in line 14, contains the half-verse Śrîmad-Bhâka-prayuktasya śâsanasya sthir-âyatêḥ, and Vinâyakapâla's plate, in line 16, has the similar half-verse Śrî-Harshêṇa prayuktasya śâsanasya sthir-âyatêḥ. To make some sense of these incomplete sentences Dr. Fleet had to supply the words 'this is the writing of;' but now a different explanation is furnished to us. Instead of the half-verse we here, in lines 15 and 16, have the full verse Prabhâsêna prayuktasya śâsanasya sthir-âyatêḥ śrîmân=Nâgabhaṭô nâmnâ yuvarâjô=tra dûtakaḥ. This verse makes it clear, that the half-verse of the other grants also is part of a customary verse, the object of which was to record, in the second half, the name of the dûtaka; and that, through the force of habit (and perhaps for a reason which will appear below), the half-verse was inserted even when no dûtaka was to be mentioned. The exact interpretation of the details of the verse solely depends on the sense of the word prayuktasya. In my opinion, the meaning which at once suggests itself for śâsanaṁ prayuj, is, 'to employ a command for a certain purpose, to address an order to somebody, to proclaim an edict, to issue a charter,' and Prabhâsêna prayuktaṁ śâsanam, therefore, could hardly be anything else than Prabhâsasya śâsanam, 'an order or charter of Prabhâsa,' which, in the case of the present inscription, of course would mean 'of Bhôjadêva.' In accordance with this interpretation I take the three names, Prabhâsa, Bhâka and Harsha, to be second names of the three Mahârâjas who issued the respective grants; and I suspect that in the grants of

[3] See Ind. Ant. Vol. XV. p. 111.

Mahêndrapâla and Vinâyakapâla the by themselves meaningless half-verses, to some extent, were inserted for the very purpose of recording those second names of the donors. With the full verse of the present inscription I would compare the concluding verse of the Achyutapuram and Parlâ-Kimedi plates of the Gâṅga Mahârâja Indravarman,[1] in which also the second name of that prince, Râjasiṁha, is mentioned, as it were incidentally, only in connection with the writing of the grants.

The localities mentioned in this inscription admit of easy identification. The village of Sivâ of course is the very place near which the plate was found, and the name of the Ḍêṇḍvânaka-vishaya survives in that of the town of Didwâna which is about 7 miles W. S. W. of Sivâ. The Ḍêṇḍvânaka-vishaya is stated to have been in the Gurjaratrâ-bhûmi. I have not been able to trace the name Gurjaratrâ in any of the published records;[2] but I find the term Gurjaratrâ-maṇḍala, denoting the same part of the country (and no doubt synonymous with Gurjaratrâ-bhûmi), in an unpublished inscription of about the 8th century at Kâlañjar.[3] That inscription speaks of a man who had gone forth from Maṅgalânakâ, situated in the Gurjaratrâ-maṇḍala, and Maṅgalânaka[4] clearly is the 'Maglona' of the map, which is only about 28 miles N. N. E. of Didwâna.

The date of the inscription, like the dates of the two cognate grants, must be referred to the Harsha era. It does not admit of verification, but, judging by the date of Mahêndrapâla's plate, it would probably correspond to the 2nd March A.D. 706.

The Mahârâja Bhôjadêva I. of our inscription was preceded by his father, the Mahârâja Râmabhadradêva, and succeeded by his son, the Mahârâja Mahêndrapâladêva. The same names we find again, in the same order, in the list of the later Mahârâjâdhirâjas of Kanauj. According to the Peheva (Pehoa) inscription of [Harsha-]Saṁvat 276, No. 546 of my List, the Mahârâjâdhirâja Bhôjadêva was the successor of the Mahârâjâdhirâja Râmabhadradêva; and according to the Sîyaḍôṇî inscription, ibid. Nos. 18 and 20, Bhôjadêva was succeeded by the Mahârâjâdhirâja Mahêndrapâladêva. This alone would go far to prove that the later Mahârâjâdhirâjas were descendants of the earlier Mahârâjas. But in addition to this, like the Mahârâjas the Mahârâjâdhirâjas also, in the Sîyaḍôṇî inscription,[5] apparently are referred to as ruling at Mahôdayâ as their capital; and so far as we can judge from the known inscriptions, the extent and situation of their respective dominions, at least from the west to the east, were about the same. On the west, we have seen above, the plate of the Mahârâja Bhôjadêva I. takes us to Didwâna in Mârwâḍ; and on the east, the plate of his grandson, the Mahârâja Vinâyakapâla, records the grant of a village near Benares. The direct distance from Didwâna to Benares is about 540 miles; and from between the two places, and not far from a straight line connecting them, we have, from west to east, the Râjôrgaḍh (in Alwar) inscription of the reign of the Mahârâjâdhirâja Vijayapâladêva, No. 39 of my List, the Gwâlior inscriptions of the reign of the Mahârâjâdhirâja Bhôjadêva, ibid. Nos. 15 and 16, the Asnî inscription of the reign of the Mahârâjâdhirâja Mahîpâladêva, ibid. No. 25, and[1] the Jhûsî plate of the Mahârâjâdhirâja Trilôchanapâladêva, ibid. No. 60. Since of the reign of the Mahârâjâdhirâja Bhôjadêva we besides have an inscription at Pehevâ (Pehoa) in the north, ibid. No. 546, and another at Dêôgaḍh in the south, ibid. No. 14, the kingdom, in his time, in either direction may have been far more extensive than under the Mahârâjas; but that they also ruled over part of the more northern country, is shewn by the Dighwâ-Dubaulî plate of Mahêndrapâla which, like the Madhuban plate of Harsha, records a grant in the Śrâvastî-bhukti, and future discoveries may shew that their rule extended farther to the north and south than we know at present.

Regarding the connection of the Mahârâjas of Mahôdaya with any of the earlier rulers of Kanauj, and particularly concerning their relation to the great king Harsha, I am unable to give any information. I can only draw attention to the fact that the manner in which their genealogy is given in their plates, and especially the way in which each of them is described as the devotee of a particular deity, remind one of, and apparently are adopted from,[2] the corresponding portions of Harsha's own grants.

[7] This sign of punctuation is superfluous.

[8] This clearly is the reading of the plate, but the forms of the consonants of the four aksharas Sivâgrâma appear to be more modern than the forms of the same letters, elsewhere employed in this inscription. The difference is particularly striking in the case of the s and m; but the gr of grâ also does not agree with the gr of the following grahârê, and the v of vâ differs somewhat from the v in e.g. the word bhagavatî of the preceding line. At the same time, I see nothing in the impression which could lead me to think that another name had been previously engraved.

TRANSLATION.

(Line 1.) Ôm. Hail !

From the royal residence,[8] furnished with many boats, elephants, horses, chariots and foot-soldiers, which is fixed at the glorious Mahôdaya:—[9] village of Sivâ, which belongs to the Ḍêṇḍvânaka vishaya in the Gurjaratrâ country (bhûmi) :—

(L. 8.) The Bhaṭṭa Harshuka has apprised (us) that the above-written agrahâra, with every income from it excepting previous gifts to gods and Brâhmaṇs, by means of a charter was granted by our great-grandfather, the Mahârâja Vatsarâjadêva, for as long as the moon, the sun and the earth endure, to his grandfather, the Bhaṭṭa Vâsudêva, and was possessed (by the latter), and that by him (the Bhaṭṭa Vâsudêva) the sixth part of it was given by a deed of donation to the Bhaṭṭa Vishṇu ; that our grandfather, the Mahârâja Nâgabhaṭadêva, signified his consent ; but that, in our own reign, that charter and consent have fallen into abeyance.

(L. 12.) Having heard, then, of that charter thus brought to our notice, of the consent, the deed of donation and the (fact of) possession, we, for the increase of the religious merit of our parents, have given permission that (the agrahâra), shared in exact accordance with previous possession, shall belong to the Brâhmaṇs born in the lineage of the Bhaṭṭa Vâsudêva, who are of the Kâśyapa gôtra and are students of the Âśvalâyana (śâkhâ) of the Ṛigvêda, and to the Brâhmaṇs born in the lineage of the Bhaṭṭa Vishṇu, who are of the Kâtyâyana gôtra and are students of the Âśvalâyana (śâkhâ) of the Ṛigvêda. Knowing this, you should assent to it, and the inhabitants, being ready to obey our commands, should make over to these people all income (due to them).

(L. 15.) Of the firmly enduring charter, issued by Prabhâsa, the dûtaka is here the Yuvarâja, the illustrious Nâgabhaṭa.

No. 25.—INSCRIPTIONS AT ABLUR.

BY J. F. FLEET, PH.D., C.I.E.

Ablûr is a village about two miles to the west of Kôḍ, the chief town of the Kôḍ tâluka of the Dhârwâr district. Its name occurs in the ancient records in the fuller form of Abbalûr or Abbalûru; and the record E. places it in the Nâgarakhaṇḍa seventy, which was a subdivision of the Banavâsi twelve-thousand province (see below). Ink-impressions of seven inscriptions were obtained for me at this village. The most important of the inscriptions is E., the record which gives the history of the revival of Śaivism in the twelfth century A.D. This will be edited in full; so also F., a short record connected with it, and G., which is interesting as being a vîrgal or monumental tablet, belonging to a class of records of which not many specimens have as yet been made fully available. The other records all present points of interest: but they are not important enough to repay the time and trouble that would be required to edit them in full; and it will be sufficient to give abstracts of the contents of them.

A. and B.—Of the time of Vikramâditya VI.— A.D. 1104.

These are duplicate copies, almost word for word the same, but not absolutely so, of a record at a temple of Śiva which is now known as the temple of Basavêśvara, though, as the records themselves shew, it was originally called the temple of Brahmêśvara[2] because it was founded by a Gâvuṇḍa or village-headman named Bamma or Barma, i.e. Brahma. A. is on a stone tablet outside the temple; and B. is on a stone tablet inside it.

[2] Brahmêśvara-dêvara dêgula, e.g., A. line 62; and Brahmêśvara-dêvatâ-sthâna, e.g., C. line 27.—The founding of it is mentioned in A. lines 27, 28.

In A., the writing, consisting of eighty-five lines of about seventy letters each, covers an area about 4' 1" broad by 6' 5" high: it is in a state of very good preservation as far as line 70: from there it has suffered a good deal of damage; but the illegible portions can almost all be supplied from B. In B., the writing, consisting of ninety-one lines of about sixty-five letters each, covers an area about 4' 1" broad by 6' 10" high: at about one-third from the proper right side, the tablet is broken into two pieces from top to bottom; but no entire letters are destroyed along the line of fissure: in other respects, it is in a state of very good preservation, except for a few places in lines 79 to 91, where, however, the illegible passages can almost all be supplied from A.— In both cases, the sculptures at the top of the stone are, in the centre, a liṅga, with an officiating priest, inside a shrine; on the proper right side, towards the top, the sun, and, in the lower part, a standing figure inside a shrine, with the bull Nandi near the edge of the stone; and on the proper left side, towards the top, the moon, and, in the lower part, another standing figure inside a shrine, with a cow and calf near the edge of the stone.— The characters are Kanarese, of the regular type of the period to which the record refers itself; and they are well formed and well executed throughout. The size of the letters ranges, in A. from about ½" to ¾", and in B. from about ⅜" to ⅞". The second part of the record, commencing in A. line 72 and B. line 77, was engraved by the Rûvâri[1] Honnôja or Hoṇṇôja; and the first part was engraved by the same person in conjunction with the Rûvâri Sôvôja: the writers or composers of the two parts were different people: but, on each stone, the execution is so uniform throughout that, in each case, the whole record must have been put on the stone at one and the same time, at or soon after the second date, in A.D. 1104, which must, therefore, be considered the proper date of the record.— Except for the opening invocation of Śiva, repeated in A. line 72 f. and B. line 77 f., and for the verse which follows it in the first instance, and for one imprecatory verse in A. line 71 f. and B. line 76, the language is Kanarese; partly in verse, and partly in prose. In addition to rûvâri, 'an engraver,' the record gives us another word, khaṇḍarisu (A. line 85, B. lines 77, 90), evidently meaning 'to engrave,'[2] which is not found in Mr. Kittel's Kannaḍa-English Dictionary, and dhâḷi (A. line 6, B. line 7) as a variant of dâḷi, 'attack, incursion, invasion,' gâvuṇḍa (e.g., A. line 19) as a variant of gauḍa, gavuḍa, 'a village-headman (the Marâṭhî pâṭîl), and bhâṇasu (A. line 75, B. line 80) as a variant of bâṇasa, bâṇasu, 'kitchen:' it also gives, in A. line 6, B. line 7, kutkîḷa, 'a mountain;' Kittel's Dictionary includes this word; but Monier-Williams' Sanskṛit Dictionary seems to give only the form kukîla.

The whole inscription is a record of the time of the Western Châlukya king Vikramâditya VI. It is a Śaiva record. And it registers grants that were made in his twenty-sixth year, in A.D. 1101, and in his twenty-ninth year, in A.D. 1104. On the first occasion, when the Daṇḍanâyaka Gôvindarasa was ruling the districts known as the Hânuṁgal five-hundred, the Bâsavura hundred-and-forty, and the Nâgarakhaṇḍa seventy, he came in state to Abbalûr, and saw the temple of the god Brahmêśvara which Bammagâvuṇḍa had caused to be built there, and was pleased; and, at the request of Bammagâvuṇḍa's son Êchagâvuṇḍa, he granted to the temple a village named Muriganahaḷḷi[3] in the Nâgarakhaṇḍa seventy. On the second occasion, grants were made by some of the villagers to provide for the aṅgabhôga and the perpetual lamp of the same temple.

[1] Rûvâri is doubtless a tadbhava corruption of the Sanskṛit rûpakârin, 'a maker of images, a sculptor,' as suggested by Dr. Hultzsch, who compares pûjâri and pûjâkârin (above, Vol. III. p. 207, note 8). Though Kittel's Dictionary does not include rûvâri, it gives rûvu, as well as rûpu, as a tadbhava corruption of rûpa.

[3] This name is not found now in maps, etc.— The place is mentioned again in a record of later date,— an addition at the end of an inscription of A.D. 1162 at Baḷagâmi (P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. No. 184; and see Mys. Inscrs. p. 96),— which registers a grant of the villages of Karinele and Maruvasi and Muriganahaḷḷi and Kundarage (?) in the Nâgarakhaṇḍa kampaṇa, and Chikka-Kaṇṇuge in the Hânuṁgal kampaṇa, for the aṅgabhôga of the gods Dakshiṇa-Kêdârêśvara (of Baḷagâmi), Sômanâtha, and Brahmêśvara of Abbalûr.— Chikka-Kaṇṇuge is evidently the modern 'Chikkangi' in the Hângal tâluka.

The record contains two dates. The details of the first date,— when the grant was made by the Daṇḍanâyaka Gôvindarasa,— are Sunday, the new-moon day, when there was an eclipse of the sun, of the month Vaiśâkha of the Vishṇu (properly called Vṛisha) saṁvatsara, which was the twenty-sixth year of the reign of Vikramâditya VI. This date was not recorded correctly. The given saṁvatsara was Śaka-Saṁvat 1024 current. There was, indeed, an annular eclipse of the sun, which was probably visible in Southern India, on the specified new-moon day.[1] But the tithi ended, by Sewell and Dikshit's Tables, at about 2 hrs. 12 min. after mean sunrise (for Ujjain) on Tuesday, 30th April, A.D. 1101; and it cannot be connected with the Sunday at all, as it began at about 30 min. after mean sunrise on the Monday. The details of the second date,— when the grants were made by the villagers; shortly after which time, presumably, the whole record was put on the stone,— are, Sunday, coupled with the sixth tithi of the bright fortnight of the month Bhâdrapada of the Târaṇa saṁvatsara, which was the twenty-ninth year of the same reign. The given saṁvatsara was Śaka-Saṁvat 1027 current. And the corresponding English date is Sunday, 28th August, A.D. 1104; on which day the given tithi ended at about 18 hrs. 42 min.

Lines 8 to 17 of this record mention a Daṇḍanâyaka Gôvindarâja, who is described as "ruling," but without any hint as to the sphere or nature of his powers. Lines 59 to 62 mention a Mahâsâmantâdhipati and Daṇḍanâyaka Gôvindarasa, who in A. D. 1101 was "ruling" the Hânuṁgal, Bâsavura, and Nâgarakhaṇḍa districts. And a third passage,— A. lines 75, 76, B. line 80,— mentions a Daṇḍanayaka Gôvindarasa, who in A. D. 1104 was administering the Banavâsi province and the vaḍḍarâvuḷa-duty at the command of Anantapâla, a high minister of the Western Châlukya king Vikramâditya VI., who is mentioned in many of the records of this period.

The Gôvindarâja of the first passage was the son of a certain Kṛishṇarâja, whose pedigree is not disclosed, and of Padmaladêvî, an elder sister of Anantapâla. And he seems to be identical with the Gôvindarasa of the second passage. This is inferred, partly from the fact that it would have been unnecessary to mention him with such prominence in the first passage, and especially as "ruling," unless more details were to be given about him further on, and partly from the description of the Gôvindarasa of the second passage as mâvanagandhavâraṇa, which is taken to mean "the choice elephant of his maternal uncle,"— with reference to Anantapâla, who stood in that relationship towards the Gôvindarâja of the first passage.[2] It may be remarked, in passing, that the allotment to the Gôvindarasa of the second passage of so high a rank as that of Mahâsâmantâdhipati, is undoubtedly incorrect, whoever he may have been; just as much as in line 4 the record makes a mistake in describing Anantapâla as merely a Mahâsâmanta, instead of a Mahâsâmantâdhipati.

[1] See Von Oppolzer's Canon der Finsternisse, p. 220, No. 5484, and Plate 110.

[2] Mâva means 'a mother's brother,' and also 'a wife's father.' This record does not mention anyone, with reference to whom it could be taken in the latter sense in the case of the Gôvindarâja of the first passage. And on the other hand, it does not seem at all probable that Raṇaraṅgabhairava-Gôvindarasa (regarding whom, see further on) was either a nephew or a son-in-law of Anantapâla; no such hint is given in any of the passages mentioning him, though they describe him very fully.— Moreover, the full description of the Gôvindarasa of the second passage in this record (line 59 ff.) runs— Samadhigatapaṁchamahâśabdamahâsâmaṁtâdhipati-mahâprachaṁḍadaṁḍanâyakan=âsthâna-vastu-nâyakaṁ nija-kuḷa-kuvaḷaya-sudhâkaraṁ guṇa-ratnâkaraṁ sukara-sukavi-pika-nikara-mâkaṁdaṁ kîrtti-latâ-kaṁdaṁ samara-samaya-Shaṇmukhaṁ chatura-Chaturmmukhaṁ dushṭa-darppishṭh-ôdhdha(ddha)t-ârâti-mada-nirâraṇaṁ mâvana-gaṁdhavâraṇaṁ nâm-âdi-samasta-praśasti-sahitaṁ śrîmad-daṁḍanâyaka-Gôvindarasaru. The biruda Raṇaraṅgabhairava does not occur here. And I do not find any of these epithets applied to Raṇaraṅgabhairava-Gôvindarasa, or anything bearing on them in the various descriptions of him, with the exception that in line 39 of the record of A.D. 1114 he is described as samara-mukha-Shaṇmukha, which may be compared with the samara-samaya-Shaṇmukha of the present passage; but this is not conclusive, and the âsthâna-vastu-nâyaka of the present passage occurs elsewhere (see page 217 below, note 8) in the case of Anantapâla, and not of Raṇaraṅgabhairava-Gôvindarasa.

The Gôvindarasa of the third passage, however,—though the special biruda does not occur in it,[1]— being described as having a much more extensive authority, is most probably another person, to be distinguished by the full name of Raṇaraṅgabhairava-Gôvindarasa, who was apparently a paternal uncle of the Gôvindarâja of the first passage, and regarding whom we learn the following facts from records at Baḷagâmi and Tâḷgund.[2] He belonged to the Parâśara gôtra, and was the son of Dâsirâja, son of Kêśirâja and Nîlabbe, and of Sôvaladêvi or Sômâmbike (e.g., the records of A. D. 1102, line 24 f., and A.D. 1114, line 37 f.). The record of A.D. 1102 styles him (line 44) Kṛishṇarâj-ânuja, "the younger brother of Kṛishṇarâja,"— with reference, doubtless, to the Kṛishṇarâja of the Ablûr inscription; and the record of A.D. 1112 styles him (line 37) aṇṇan=aṅkakâṛa, "the champion of his elder brother," and Kṛishṇarâjan=anugina-tamma, "the affectionate (or beloved) younger brother of Kṛishṇarâja." The record of A.D. 1114 further describes him as Lâṭ-ânvaya-lalâṭa-maṇḍala-tilaka, which expression, taking lalâṭamaṇḍala as meaning much the same thing as lalâṭapaṭṭa, we may render by "a forehead-mark of the broad forehead that was the lineage of the Lâṭas:" so, also, the record of A.D. 1102 describes Anantapâla (in line 8) as Lâṭa-kula-kumudavana-vidhu-kara, "a very ray of the moon to (open) the cluster of water-lilies (flowering at night) that was the family of the Lâṭas:" evidently, both the persons traced their origin to ancestors who were natives of the Lâṭa country; and this, no doubt, accounts in part for the intermarriage and the special favour shewn by Anantapâla to Raṇaraṅgabhairava-Gôvindarasa. His biruda of Raṇaraṅgabhairava, "a very Bhairava (Śiva) in the field of battle," figures more or less prominently in all the records. And the record of A.D. 1114 styles him (line 40) Tribhuvanamalladêva-vijaya-dakshiṇa-bhuja-daṇḍa, "the staff of the victorious right arm of Tribhuvanamalladêva-(Vikramâditya VI.)." In A.D. 1102, the Daṇḍanâyaka Anantapâla, the Mahâsâmantâdhipati who had attained the pañchamahâśabda,[3] was "protecting, with the delight

[1] No string of titles and epithets is connected with the name of Gôvindarasa in this passage. After giving the titles of Anantapâla, the record simply says [Anantapâ]ḷarasara besadiṁ śrîmad-daṇḍanâyakaṁ Gôviṁd-arasaru Banavâse-(etc., as in a note further below).

[3] The term pañchamahâśabda, meaning literally "five great sounds," denotes the sounds of five musical instruments, the use of which was allowed, as a special mark of distinction, to persons of high rank and authority. The epithet samadhigatapañchamahâśabda is found most commonly in connection with the names of great feudatories and high officials; the instances in which it occurs among the epithets of paramount sovereigns, are but few. I have given a general note on the term in my Gupta Inscriptions, p. 296; in the course of which I have quoted a paper in Ind. Ant. Vol. XII. p. 95 f. which tells us that the Liṅgâyat Vivêkachintâmaṇi enumerates the five instruments as being the śṛiṅga or horn, the tammaṭa or tambour, the śaṅkha or conch-shell, the bhêrî or kettle-drum, and the jayaghaṇṭâ or gong. And an inscription of A.D. 1032 at Suttûru in Mysore (Ep. Carn. Vol. III., Nj. 164; I quote, however, from an ink-impression) enumerates them as the tiva[ḷi], daḍḍa, khaṇḍike, jayagaṇṭe, and kâḷe, and provides an allotment to the god Îśâna-Îśvaram-uḍeyar for playing these musical instruments, and performing the worship of the god, three times a day.— For the kâḷe, which is the same as the śṛiṅga, see a note further below. The word daḍḍa may perhaps stand for daḍḍasa, which is explained in Kittel's Dictionary as 'the drum of a Ḍomba.' The tivaḷi and khaṇḍike remain to be identified. The former of them was the special musical instrument of the Râshṭrakûṭa kings of Mâlkhêḍ and of the Raṭṭa chieftains of Saundatti.— For the special instruments of some other great families, reference may be made to my Dyn. Kan. Distrs. p. 327, and note 7.— The custom of kings being heralded in public by musical instruments is mentioned by the Chinese pilgrim Hiuen Tsiang, in connection with Śilâditya-Harshavardhana of Kanauj; he tells us (Life, Beal's translation, of an agreeable or friendly interchange of communications (with his paramount sovereign),"[1] the two-six-hundred (i.e. the Beḷvola three-hundred and the Purigeṛe three-hundred), the Banavase twelve-thousand, and the vaḍḍarâvuḷa and perjuṅka duties; and his subordinate,[2] the Daṇḍanâyaka Raṇaraṅgabhairava-Gôvindarasa, holding office by the favour of Anantapâla,[3] was "protecting, with the delight of an agreeable or friendly interchange of communications (with Anantapâla)," the vaḍḍarâvuḷa of the melvaṭṭe,[4] the eraḍuṁ-bilkoḍe, and the perjuṅka. In A.D. 1103, Anantapâla, with the same two titles and also those of Mahâpradhâna and Bhâṇasavergaḍe, was "protecting, etc.," the Beḷvola three-hundred, the Purigeṛe three-hundred, the Banavase twelve-thousand, and the pannâya-duty of the saptârdhalakshe or seven-and-a-half-lâkh country;[5] and the Daṇḍanâyaka Raṇaraṅgabhairava-Gôvindarâja, who had obtained the administration of the Vanavâsî twelve-thousand through his favour,[6] was "protecting, etc.," the Banavase twelve-thousand, the vaḍḍarâvuḷa, and the achchupannâya of . . . .,[7] and had, under himself, a Saṁdhivigrahâdhikṛita or minister for peace and war named Îśvarayyanâyaka. In A.D. 1107, the Mahâpradhâna, Bhâṇasumanevergaḍe, and Daṇḍanâyaka Anantapâla[8] was "happily governing"[9] the two-six-hundred (i.e. the Beḷvola and Purigeṛe districts) and the Banavâsi twelve-thousand; and his subordinate, the Daṇḍanâyaka Raṇaraṅgabhairava-Gôvindarâja, who had attained good fortune by his favour,[10] was "protecting, etc.," the Banavâsi twelve-thousand, the vaḍḍarâvuḷa, the perjuṅka, and the eraḍuṁ-bilkoḍe;[11] and this record mentions, as a subordinate of him,

p. 173) that, "as Śîlâdityarâja marched, he was always accompanied by several hundred persons with golden drums, who beat one stroke for every step taken; they called these the 'music-pace-drums:' Śîlâditya alone used this method,— other kings were not permitted to adopt it."

[4] The meaning seems to be that he was administering the collection and expenditure of that portion of the vaḍḍarâvuḷa which was levied on, or was allotted to, an object called the melvaṭṭe or mêlvaṭṭe. The genitive melvaṭṭeya may qualify also the eraḍuṁ-bilkoḍe and the perjuṅka. Kittel's Dictionary gives mêlvaṭṭa, 'an awning' (in which vaṭṭa is for paṭṭa; and paṭṭe occurs as another form of paṭṭa), and mêlu-boṭṭe (which might easily occur in the form of also mêlvaṭṭe), 'superior, fine cloth.' But the vaṭṭe may equally well stand for baṭṭe, 'a road;' and mêlvaṭṭe may indicate the levy of the duty, or the three duties, on the principal high-roads: compare mêlu-durga, 'a high, superior fort,' and mêlu-paṅkti, 'the best or principal row.'

[7] The rendering in Mys. Inscrs. p. 140, and note, would read chhatra-chchhâyeya chappannad=achchu-pannâyamaṁ, and would translate "the pannâya-dues of the fifty-six (i.e. merchants) within the shadow of his umbrella (i.e. within his jurisdiction)." The word chhatra-chchhâyeya is quite distinct, and seems to qualify the achchupannâya here in the way in which melvaṭṭeya qualifies the vaḍḍarâvuḷa in another passage (see note 4 above). The next akshara is not legible with any certainty in the photograph; and there may be an akshara between the ppa and the nna. If the reading really is chappanad, or more likely chhappanad, it does not at any rate mean "fifty-six merchants:" there might, in that case, be possibly a reference to the chappanna- or chhappanna-dêśa, "the fifty-six countries,"— in the sense of "all the world," or rather "all the territory entrusted to him;" this also, however, does not seem satisfactory. I cannot at present find any other passage, helping to elucidate this one.— The achchupannâya variety of the pannâya is mentioned again in a record of A.D 1108, at Dâvaṇgere (P. S. and O.-C. Inscrs. No. 137; Mys. Inscrs. p. 17), in line 15, where the rendering in Mys. Inscrs. wrongly finds the title "lord over Achchupa Nâyaka." That record tells us that the Achchupannâyadadhishṭhâyaka or "superintendent of the achchupannâya" Barmarasa,— who had been appointed to the office of Mahâmâtya, entrusted with all the duties of government, by the command of the Mahâsâmantâdhipati, Mahâpradhâna, Bhâṇasavergaḍe, and Daṇḍanâyaka Anantapâla,— was then "governing, with punishment of the wicked and protection of the good," the pannâya of the Noḷambavâḍi thirty-two-thousand.

[11] The original seems to have here bilkâḍe, with the vowel a in the second syllable. But, from the other records, the vowel o appears to give the correct form of the word.

a certain Trivaḷibhaṭṭa, of the Vatsa gôtra,—described as the mayduna, i.e. sister's husband, or wife's brother, of the Daṇḍanâyaka Gôvindarasa,—who was holding office as Pergaḍe[1] of the mahâvaḍḍa-village of Tâṇagundûr (Tâḷgund). The record of A.D. 1112 introduces a new official superior of Raṇaraṅgabhairava-Gôvindarâja: it tells us that, under Vikramâditya VI., the Pâṇḍya Mahâmaṇḍalêśvara Tribhuvanamalla-Kâmarasa, "the lord of Gôkarṇa the best of towns,"— who belonged to the line of the Pâṇḍya rulers of Sisugali, the capital of the Haive division of the Koṅkaṇ,— was "ruling with the delight of an agreeable or friendly interchange of communications (with his paramount sovereign);" that Anantapâla gave him the Vanavâsi country;[2] that, on receipt of it, he made appointments; and that, by appointment from him, Raṇaraṅgabhairava-Gôvinda, mentioned further on in the record as the Daṇḍâdhîśvara Gôvinda, was "protecting" the Banavase country.[3] The record of A.D. 1114 does not make any reference to the Pâṇḍya prince: it speaks of Anantapâla a~ a feudatory of Vikramâditya VI., but, evidently with reference to past events only, as, . :e the record of A.D. 1112, it does not couple any titles with his name; it speaks of the Daṇḍâdhipa Gôvinda as a râjahaṁsa or flamingo dwelling on the water-lilies that were his feet; and it describes him more fully as the Mahâsâmantâdhipati who had attained the pañchamahâśabda,[4] he who was a very Raṇaraṅgabhairava, the Mahâpradhâna, the Manevergaḍe, the DaṇḍanâyakaGôvindamayya, who was "governing" the Banavase twelve-thousand, the Sântaḷige thousand, the two-six-hundred (i.e. the Beḷvola and Purigeṟe districts), and the vaḍḍarâvuḷa and pannâya duties. By this time, then, Raṇaraṅgabhairava-Gôvindarasa had been promoted to most of the high offices that had been held by his patron Anantapâla.[5]

* * * * * *

When the Daṇḍanâyaka Gôvindarasa made his grant in A.D. 1101, as mentioned in line 59 ff. of the record, he laved the feet of a Śaiva teacher or priest named Sômêśvara, who is introduced to us in a passage, commencing in line 51, which runs thus:—

Śrîmad-Abbalûr=Êcha-gâvuṁḍana gurugaḷ śrî-Sômêśvara-paṁḍita-dêvar=ajja-gurugaḷa tapaḥ-prabhâvam=eṁt-eṁdoḍe || Dhareg[6]=eseva Sa(śa)kti-parshege karam=agraṇiy=enipa Parvvat-âvaḷiyoḷu Mûvara-kôṇeya-saṁtatig=âbharaṇaṁ Kêdâraśakti-yatipati negaḷdaṁ || A Kêdâra-yatîṁdrana[7] lôka-prastuna[8] śishyan=atyamaḷa-guṇ-ânîkaṁ nirmmaḷa[9]-charitaṁ

[1] The original has perggaṭana, which must be a mistake (unless it is found to be an authorised abbreviation) for perggaḍetana.

[3] The original runs—Raṇaraṁgabhairavaṁ * * * * * * pâḷisuttam-ire Banavaseyaṁ Malapara jûju sudhâ-nirmmala-parama-yaśaḥ-prabhâva-nidhi Gôvindaṁ. The rendering in Mys. Inscrs. p. 85, and note, would find,— instead of sudhâ, 'nectar, ambrosia,' with which the fame of Gôvinda is compared,—the Marâṭhî word suddhâṁ, 'together with, along with, besides,' in its modern Kanarese corrupt form sudâ, and would translate "was protecting Banavase and the Malapara jûju (?) also." The word jûju, 'gambling,' seems to be used here, to suit the convenience of the composer of the verse, instead of jûjugâṛa, 'a gambler.' The idea evidently is, that Gôvinda cut off the heads of the Malapas and used them as dice. And a Kanarese ballad somewhat similarly describes a Governor of Bombay as proposing to cut off the heads of Holkar and Scindia and play the game of juggling balls with them before the Pêshwa Bâjîrao.

[4] It is in this passage that Raṇaraṅgabhairava-Gôvindarâja is described as samara-mukha-Shaṇmukha (see page 215 above, note 2).

[5] We have a later date for Raṇaraṅgabhairava-Gôvindarasa in A.D. 1117-18, quoted by me (Dyn. Kan. Distrs. p. 451) from a record which is not accessible to me at present.

[6] Metre, Kanda; and in the next two verses.—The first verse occurs in line 19 f. of an earlier record, of A.D. 1094, at Baḷagâmi (see page 220 below, note 3), with, in essential points, only the difference of munipati for yatipati. The whole passage from the words Dhareg=eseva to Naiyâyik-âgrêsaraṁ, occurs in lines 31 to 38 of the Baḷagâmi inscription of A.D. 1102 (see the same note); and it is from that record that I take the various readings given in the footnotes.

[12] In the Ablûr record there follows one more verse about Sômêśvara: but it does not present anything of interest; and it is not included in the Baḷagâmi record of A.D. 1102.

[13] I have not found anything yet to explain the meaning of this name. Mûvara must be the genitive of mûvaru, 'three persons,' unless it can be connected with mû, = muḍu, 'advanced age.' For kôṇe, of which kôṇeya is the genitive, the dictionary only gives the meanings of 'a pitcher; an inner apartment or chamber, a room.'

[14] It seems impossible to avoid taking the word akalaṅka as a proper name; to render it by simply "stainless people," seems to give a very inadequate meaning to the text. At the same time, we do not yet know of any Śaiva writer named Akalaṅka; and Sômêśvara can hardly have given encouragement to the writings of the Jain Akalaṅka, even in the department of tarka or logic with which the name of that Akalaṅka is sometimes specially connected (e.g. in line 45 of a Jain record of A.D. 1077 at Baḷagâmi, P. S. O.-C Inscrs. No. 163, Mys. Inscrs. p. 129).— The next three epithets, also, are puzzling. From line 65 of the Ablûr inscription, we learn that Sômêśvara was a follower of Lakuḷîśa; and (see page 227 below) Lakuḷîśa was an opponent of the Lôkâyatas, Mîmâṁsakas, and Sâṁkhyas.— There are, perhaps, some hidden second meanings, which I have failed to see. Kujâta, for instance, may mean 'base-born,' as well as 'tree;' but the alternative reading mahîja is opposed to that.

to (bring to full tide) the ocean that is the Lôkâyatas,— a very guardian elephant of that quarter of the regions which is the Sâṁkhya-doctrine,— a very pearl-ornament glittering on the white throat of the woman who is the Mîmâṁsâ,— a very hot-rayed sun to (close) the water-lilies (blooming at night) that are the Buddhists,— the logician, the learned Sômêśvara, the leader of the Naiyâyikas, attained greatness." And a further passage, in lines 63 to 66, describes him, in rhyming epithets, as— Yama-niyama-svâdhyâya-dhyâna-dhâraṇa-maunânushṭhâna-japa-samâdhi-śîla-sampaṁna vibudha-jana-prasaṁna nyâya-śâstra-vistri(stṛi)ta-sarôjavana-divâkara Vaiśêshika-vârddhi-varddhana-sa(śa)rat-sudhâkara sâṁkhy-âgama-pravîṇa-mâṇiky-âbharaṇa guru-charaṇa-sarasîruha-shaṭcharaṇa śabda-śâstra-sahakâra-vana-vasaṁta prajñ-ôday-ôdbuddha-Lâkuḷa-siddhâṁta nirupam-ôpanyâsa-dêvanadî-pravâha nija-datta-maṁtra-prasâda-saṁvarddhita-śishya-saṁdôha sâhitya-vidyâ-mahâ-nadî-pravâha-nimnagâdhîśvara bhakti-pravâha-paritushṭa-Paramêśvara niravadya-nirmmaḷa-tapô-guṇ-aika-niḷaya kîrtti-kaumudî-mudita-mêdinî-vaḷaya nâm-âdi-samasta-praśasti-sahita,— namely, "he who is possessed of the glory of such names as he who is endowed with self-control, the observance of restraint, the repetition of the scriptures to himself, meditation, immovable abstraction of the mind, the observance of silence, the muttering of prayers, deep contemplation, and good character, and who is gracious to learned men; he who is a very sun to (open) the great cluster of water-lilies (blooming in the daytime) that is the Nyâyaśâstra, and who is a very autumn-moon to bring to full tide the ocean of the Vaiśêshikas; he who is a very ruby-ornament of those who are versed in the Sâṁkhyâgama, and who is a very bee on the water-lilies that are the feet of his teacher; he who is a very spring to the grove of mango-trees that is the Śabdaśâstra, and who has given new life to[1] the Lâkuḷasiddhânta[2] by the development of his wisdom; he who is a very stream of the river of the gods in unequalled reasoning, and who has made the assembly of his disciples to prosper by the favour of the counsel given by him; he who is a very ocean to (receive) the stream of the great river that is the Sâhityavidyâ, and who has quite satisfied the god Paramêśvara (Śiva) with the unbroken flow of his devotion; he who is the sole abode of the virtue of blameless and spotless penance, and who has delighted the whole circuit of the earth with the moonlight that is his fame."

We gather a good deal of information about the Mûvarakôṇeyasaṁtati from various records at Baḷagâmi.[3] And, in the first place, we find that it was connected with the sect of the Kâlâmukhas, which is already fairly well known. We learn this from the record of A.D. 1112, which says (line 49)— Parvvat-âmnâyada Mûvara-kôṇeya-santânada Śakti-parisheyoḷ=negaḷte-vadedu śishya-châtaka-varshâkâḷa-mukhar=enisida Kâlamukharoḷ,— "among the Kâḷamukhas,[1] who, having attained fame in the Śaktiparishe of the Mûvarakôṇeyasaṁtâna of the Parvatâmnâya, had caused themselves to be spoken of as the very burst of the rainy season for the châtaka-birds that are disciples,"— and then goes on to place among these "Kâḷamukhas" Kêdâraśakti, his son Śrîkaṇṭha, and Śrîkaṇṭha's son Sômêśvara. This passage would, indeed, seem to identify the Kâlâmukhas with the Mûvarakôṇeyasaṁtati. But this appears not quite consistent with the fact that the college (sthâna) of the Kâlâmukhas of the ancient Baḷḷigâve was the temple of Pañchaliṅga,[2] whereas the college of the Mûvarakôṇeyasaṁtati was a different building. And it seems probable that what the passage really means, is, that the founder of the Mûvarakôṇeyasaṁtati was a member of the Kâlâmukha sect who established some particular school, the tenets of which differed in some respects from the general doctrine of the Kâlâmukhas. The verse Dhareg=eseva, etc., seems to name, as the order of development, first the Śaktiparshe,[3] then the Parvatâvali, and then the Mûvarakôṇeyasaṁtati. On the other hand, the prose passage, just quoted, indicates first the Parvatâvali, then the Mûvarakôṇeyasaṁtati, and then the Śaktiparshe. The verse used in the record of A.D. 1129 (see page 223 below), and in some subsequent records, does not mention the Śaktiparshe, and indicates first the Parvatâvali and then the Mûvarakôṇeyasaṁtati. And the record of A.D. 1192 mentions only the Parvatâvali.

The members of the Mûvarakôṇeyasaṁtati were the hereditary priests of the temple of the god Śiva in the form of Dakshiṇa-Kêdârêśvara, "the Kêdârêśvara of the South,"[4] which, as we learn from line 57 of the record of A.D. 1112, was on the ŝri or raised bank of a tank called Tâvaregere and Tâvareyakere, "the tank of water-lilies," which was in the southern part of the lands of Baḷḷigâve. They had also the temple of Śiva in the form of Nagarêśvara or Nakharêśvara,[5] which, again,— as we are told in line 26 of the record of A.D. 1094,— was at the Tâvaregere tank. And, from A.D. 1139 onwards (see page 224 f. below), they had also a temple of Śiva in the form of Kusuvêśvara, which was then built in connection with the temple of Dakshiṇa-Kêdârêśvara. Their maṭha or college is sometimes spoken of as the Kêdâramaṭha and the Kêdârasthâna. But its actual name was, in Kanarese, Kôḍiyamaṭha, which appears in a Sanskṛit passage as Kôṭimaṭha.[6] From line 60 f. of a record of

[1] In every other passage known to me, this name is spelt with the long â in the second syllable. The short a is used here probably only in connection with the play on the meaning of the components, or supposed components, of the name. The word kâlamukha appears to denote 'a kind of monkey,' and also to be another name of the kâlâguru or black aguru-tree.

[4] Dakshiṇa-Kêdârêśvara was an image established at Baḷḷigâve as the southern representative of Śiva as worshipped at Kêdârnâth in the north, a famous temple and place of pilgrimage in the Garhwâl district, North-West Provinces, situated, according to Thornton's Gazetteer, in lat. 30° 44′, long. 79° 5′, in the Himâlayas, and standing 11,755 feet above the level of the sea.— From the titlings of the transcriptions, in Sir Walter Elliot's Carnâtaka-Dêsa Inscriptions, of some of the records mentioned in note 3 on page 220 above, it appears that the temple of Dakshiṇa-Kêdârêśvara is now known as the temple of Basavaṇṇa.

[5] The name appears as Nakharêśvara in the record of A.D. 1094. Elsewhere, it is usually written Nagarêśvara, which, no doubt, was the real correct form. Its name is explained in a passage in line 46 ff. of the record of A.D. 1129, which runs,— Baḷḷigâveyoḷ=dakshiṇa-dik-taṭa-nikaṭavartti maṇḍita-puṇḍarîka-shaṇḍ-ôpâvanam=uḷḷ=alli nagara-janaṅgaḷ=ârjjisid=agaṇya-puṇya-puñjame Śiva-bhavanav=âd-ante Nagarêśvaram=esisi pesar-vaḍedu sogayisuttam-irppudu,— "at Baḷḷigâve, close to the southern boundary, there is an ornamental garden [upâvana seems to be used here for upavana] full of water-lilies; and there there stands, in all its beauty, the temple named Nagarêśvara, the veritable abode of Śiva, (an embodiment) indeed (of) all the incalculable religious merit amassed by the people of the town."

[6] This, which seems to be only a Sanskṛitised form, is taken from line 19 of the record of A.D. 1215. In the photographs of some of the records, the vowel of the first syllable might be taken to be â, instead of ô. But in line 61 of the record of A.D. 1158 (see page 222 below, note 1), the name appears very distinctly,— Kôḍiyamaṭha.

A D. 1158,[1] which speaks of "Vâmaśaktipaṇḍitadêva, the Âchârya of the Kôḍiyamaṭha of the Hergaḍe Veṇṇamarasa of that place (Baḷḷigâve)," it seems to have been built for the members of the line by the said Veṇṇamarasa. And it would appear that it was named the Kôḍiyamaṭha because, probably, it stood somewhere near the kôḍi or outlet of the Tâvaregere tank. That the Kôḍiyamaṭha was the maṭha of the Mûvarakôṇeyasaṁtati, we learn explicitly from the record of A.D. 1162, which mentions, as belonging to "the succession of the family of the Gurus of the Kôḍiyamaṭha," two persons, Gautama and the Vâmaśakti mentioned above, who, as will be seen, were disciple-descendants of Kêdâraśakti. And the same record further gives (line 27 ff.) the following rather singular description of the maṭha,— Dakshiṇa-Kêdâra-sthânamuṁ Śiva-liṁga-pûjâ-puḷaka-sasya-sarasa-kêdârasthânamuṁ naishṭhika-brahmacharyya-Śiva-munijan-ânushṭhâna nishṭhita-sthânamuṁ sâṁga Ṛig-Yajus-Sâm-Âtharvva-chaturvvêda-svâdhyâya-sthânamuṁ Kaumâra-Pâṇinîya-Śâkaṭâyana-Śabdânuśâsan-âdi-byâ(vyâ)karaṇa-byâ(vyâ)khyâna-sthânamuṁ nyâya-vaiśêshika-mîmâṁsâ-sâṁkhya-baudhdh(ddh)-âdi-shaḍu-darśana-byâ(vyâ)khyâna-sthânamuṁ Lâkuḷasidhdhâ(ddhâ)ṁta-Pâtaṁjaḷ-âdi-yôgaśâstra-byâ(vyâ)khâna-sthânamuṁ ashṭâdaśapurâṇa-dharmmaśâstra-sakaḷa-kâbya(vya)-nâṭaka-nâṭik-âdi-vividha-vidyâ-sthânamuṁ dîn-ânâtha-paṁgv-aṁdha-badhira-kathaka-gâyaka-vâdaka-vâṁśika-narttaka-vaitâḷika-nagna-bhagna-kshapaṇak-aikadaṁḍi-tridaṁḍi-haṁsa-paramahaṁs-âdi-nânâ-dêśa-bhikshukajan-ânivâryy-[â*]nnadâna-sthânamuṁ nân-ânâtha-rôgijana-rôdha-bhaishajya-sthânamuṁ sakala-bhût-âbhaya-pradâna-sthânamum=âgi Kôḍiyamaṭhav=irppudu,— namely, "there is the Kôḍiyamaṭha, which has become the abode of the god Kêdâra of the South,— a very field charming with a crop which is the standing erect of the hairs of the body that is induced by doing worship to the liṅga of Śiva,— a place devoted to the observances of Śaiva saints[2] leading perpetually the life of celibate religious students,— a place for the quiet study of the four Vêdas, the Ṛich, Yajus, Sâman, and Atharvan, together with their auxiliary works,— a place where commentaries are composed on the Kaumâra, Pâṇinîya, Śâkaṭâyana, Śabdânuśâsana, and other grammatical works,— a place where commentaries are composed on the six systems of philosophy, namely the Nyâya, Vaiśêshika, Mîmâṁsâ, Sâṁkhya, Bauddha, etc.,[3]— a place where commentaries are composed on the Lâkuḷasiddhânta, and the Pâtañjala and other Yôgaśâstras,— a place for (studying) the eighteen Purâṇas, the law-books, and all the poetical compositions, the dramas, the light comedies, and the other various kinds of learning,— a place where food is always given to the poor, the helpless, the lame, the blind, and the deaf, and to professional story-tellers, singers, musicians, bards, players, and minstrels whose duty it is to awaken their masters with music and songs, and to the naked and the crippled, and to (Jain and Buddhist) mendicants, to (Brâhmaṇ) mendicants who carry a single staff and also those who carry a triple staff, to haṁsa and paramahaṁsa ascetics, and to all other beggars from many countries,— a place where many helpless sick people are harboured and treated,— a place of assurance of safety for all living creatures."

The founder of the Mûvarakôṇeyasaṁtati appears to have been Kêdâraśakti; at any rate, we have obtained no earlier name at present. For him, we have as yet no date.

The son and chief disciple of Kêdâraśakti, and evidently his successor as head of the maṭha, was Śrîkaṇṭha. The record of A.D. 1094 names him as his chief disciple (line 21); and the record of A.D. 1112 names him as his son (line 50). In the record of A.D. 1094, after the verse Dhareg=eseva, etc., there is used (line 21 f.), to describe Śrîkaṇṭha, a verse which we can now render more correctly, as follows,— Â[4] munipan=agra-śishyar śrîmat Śrîkaṇṭha-

[2] The Śiva-munijana of the text seems to stand for Śaiva-munijana.

[3] The usual enumeration of the six systems seems to be Nyâya, Vaiśêshika, Pûrva-Mîmâṁsâ, Uttara-Mîmâṁsâ, Sâṁkhya, and Yôga. This passage speaks of six systems, but names only five. The inclusion of the Bauddha or Buddhist system is rather peculiar.

pamḍitar=vvasudhevoḷ=imn=ê mâ[t]o Lâkuḷîśar=ttâm=ene Sarvvajña-kaḷpar=esedar=aḷumba[m],— "the chief disciple of that great saint was the holy Śrîkaṇṭhapaṇḍita, who, being but little inferior (in knowledge) to the Omniscient one, shone out excessively in the world just as if,— what more could be said?,— he was Lâkuḷîśa[1] himself." For Śrîkaṇṭha, again, we have as yet no date.[2]

The son and disciple, and evidently the successor, of Śrîkaṇṭha was Sômêśvara. The record of A.D. 1094 names him as his disciple (line 22); and the record of A.D. 1112 names him as his son (line 52). In A.D. 1094,[3] he was the Âchârya of the god Nakharêśvara; and his feet were then laved by the assembly of the Paṭṭaṇasvâmin and other representatives of the people of the town, on the occasion of making a grant to that god. In A.D. 1101, as we learn from the Ablûr inscription A., he was at Ablûr, and his feet were laved by the Daṇḍanâyaka Gôvindarasa, on the occasion of making a grant to the god Brahmêśvara of that village. The record of A.D. 1102 describes him (line 49) as the Âchârya of the sthâna of the god Dakshiṇa-Kêdârêśvara, and tells us that his feet were then laved by the Daṇḍanâyaka Raṇaraṅgabhairava-Gôvindarasa, in making a grant to that god. And in A.D. 1112 his feet were laved by the Pâṇḍya Mahâmaṇḍalêśvara Tribhuvanamalla-Kâmadêvarasa, when another grant was made to the same god.[4] This last record describes Sômêśvara, in line 34, as the Ârâdhya or family-priest of Kâmadêvarasa.

The record of A.D. 1129 opens the account of these teachers with a new verse, which runs (line 58 f.)— Mûvara[5]-kôṇeya-samtati-dêvabra(vra)tan=eseva Parvvat-âvaḷ iy oḷ=tân=âvirbhbha(bbha)visidan=amaḷa-yaśô-vibhu Kêdâraśakti-paṇḍita-dêva[m*],— "in the famous Parvatâvaḷi there was born Kêdâraśaktipaṇḍitadêva himself, the lord of pure fame, a devotee of the gods in the Mûvarakôṇeyasamtati." It mentions Śrîkaṇṭha as the disciple of Kêdâraśakti, and Sômêśvarâryya as the disciple of Śrîkaṇṭha. After Sômêśvara there came, it tells us, his younger brother Vidyâbharaṇa. But he, it says, did not care for any occupation except the steady pursuit of knowledge; and so he transferred all the business affairs of the maṭha to his own chief disciple Vâmaśakti. In A.D. 1129, however, when the grant registered in this record was made,— namely, the allotment of a village for the repairs and other purposes of the maṭha,— it was Vidyâbharaṇa who was summoned (line 69), and whose feet were laved, by the Western Châlukya king Sômêśvara III., who had then come south to make a state progress through his dominions and was encamped at Hulluṇiyatîrtha.[6] Vidyâbharaṇa's name was afterwards expanded into Vâdividyâbharaṇa, by which appellation he is mentioned in the Ablûr inscription C., and line 44 of the Baḷagâmi record of A.D. 1149.

As far as dates go, the next name is that of Jñânaśakti, who is mentioned as a disciple of Vâdividyâbharaṇa in the Ablûr inscription C. This record gives dates for him in A.D. 1130 and 1144. In A.D. 1130 his feet were laved by the Nâḷprabhu Barmagâvuṇḍa, when the latter made his grant to the god Brahmêśvara of Abbalûr. In this record there is used a

[1] The vowel in the first syllable of this name is properly the short a. It was lengthened here to suit the metre.

[2] A record of A.D. 1098 (P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. No. 167, Mys. Inscrs. p. 107) mentions (line 31 f.) "Śrîkaṇṭhapaṇḍitadêva, the Âchârya of the temple of Pañchaliṅga." But he must have been a different person, if only because the date there given for him is later than the date of Sômêśvara, the son and disciple of the Śrîkaṇṭha who was the son and disciple of Kêdâraśakti.

[3] Mr. Rice (Mys. Inscrs. Introd. p. 90, note) would allot to him an earlier date, in A.D. 1071, from another record at Baḷagâmi (P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. No. 160, Mys. Inscrs. p. 164). But the person there mentioned (lines 26, 29 f.) was a different person, namely Sômêśvarapaṇḍita, Sthânapati of the god Mallikâmôdêśvara, and a disciple of Chandrabhûshaṇapaṇḍita.

[4] This record was composed by Mallikârjunârya or Mallikârjunabhaṭṭa, who describes himself as a servant (kiṁkara) of Sômêśvara. In it, he three times (lines 34, 60, 64) speaks of Somêśvara as sâśvata-mahôdaya, which may or may not mean anything more than simply "a master, a leader, of learned people."

variation of the verse given in the record of A.D. 1129 ; and the whole passage (line 36 ff.) runs — Mûvara-kôṇeya-santati-dêvabra(vra)tar=eseva Parvvat-âvaḷiyoḷ=tâm=âvirbhb h a(r b b h a)-visidar=amaḷa-yaśô-vibhava-vinûtar=arebar=âchâryyarkkaḷ || Va || Avar=oḷage || Svasti Yama-niyama-svâdhyâya-dhyâna-dhâraṇâ-mô (mau)nânushṭhâna-japa-samâdhi-śîla-sampa n n a r u ṁ | vibudha-jana-prasamnnaruṁ | śrîmad-Vâdividyâbharaṇa-paṁḍita-dêvara śishyarum=appa śrîmad*u*-Jñânasakti-paṁḍita-dêvara kâlaṁ karchchi, etc. There does not appear to be any mention of this Jñânaśakti in the records at Baḷagâmi.

We take up the line again from the record of A.D. 1129. The arrangement of this document is rather unusual. The ordinary part of it,— ending with the date and the details of the grant,— comes to a close in line 72. But the benedictive and imprecatory passages, which would usually stand next, do not commence till line 76. And there intervenes a parenthetical passage, which is now to be considered. As already stated, this record says, in lines 62 to 64, that Vidyâbharaṇa transferred all the business affairs of the maṭha to " his own chief disciple Vâmaśakti;" the words in the original are,— Enisid=â Vidyâbharaṇaṁ vidyâ-bharaṇa-vyâsaṁgav=allad=itara-vyâsaṁgaman=ollade maṭha-vyâsaṁgamaṁ nij-âgra-śishyanuṁ guru-kula-samuddharaṇa-vâma-śaktiyum=enisida Vâmaśakti-munîśvaranoḷ=niyôjisid-âgaḷe : and this prose passage introduces a verse which says that he directed Vâmaśakti to "protect" the maṭha, i.e. to manage it. But the opening verse of the record invokes the protection of the god Kêdârêśvara for Gautama, who is described in it as having received the âdhipatya of the Kêdâramaṭha by the favour of the command of Vidyâbharaṇa. And the parenthetical passage, which intervenes between the donative portion and the benedictive and imprecatory passages, commences by telling us that Vidyâbharaṇa transferred the office of head of the maṭha to " his own chief disciple Gautama;" here, the text runs (lines 72, 73), in verse, with a prose connection,—Â[1] Vidyâbharaṇaṁ vidyâ-vividha-vinôda-yôga-saukhya[ṁ] sthiti-[bha]ṁg-âvahav=end=adan=êḷisi bhûvinuta-nij-âgra [śish]y[a]-Gau[tama-muniyoḷ || Maṭh]-âdhipatyamaṁ niyôjisid-âgaḷe. There is nothing in the record that explains why Gautama, as well as Vâmaśakti, is called the chief disciple of Vidyâbharaṇa, and why Vidyâbharaṇa " censured " or came to regret the happiness of having devoted himself to the various delights of learning because it had proved " destructive of stability," and on that account, appointed Gautama to the office of Maṭhapati. And it is not at all intelligible why,— after a verse in lines 73, 74, which runs on in construction with the words niyôjisid-âgaḷe, and says that, just as saints before him, like brilliant lamps, had lit up the maṭha, so Gautama lit it up, like a very pure gem that serves as a lamp,—the parenthetical passage ends with a verse (lines 74 to 76) which makes no mention at all of Vidyâbharaṇa, and says that the fortunes of the maṭha were nourished by Sômêśvara, and then by Vâmaśakti, and then by Gautama.[2] But, evidently, when he entrusted the management of the affairs of the maṭha to Vâmaśakti in order that he himself might devote his whole time to study, Vidyâbharaṇa retained the actual office of Maṭhapati in his own hands. And it seems clear that the record, though registering a grant made in A.D. 1129, was not really drawn up till some time after that date. In the interval, something or other must have occurred,— not disclosed in the record,— which prevented the eventual succession, that was doubtless intended, of Vâmaśakti as Maṭhapati, and led to the substitution of Gautama as being the next senior disciple.

The Vâmaśakti who is mentioned in the record of A.D. 1129, does not figure in any other of the records. But, for Gautama we have subsequent dates in A.D. 1139 and 1149; and he is mentioned in also some of the later records. The record of A.D. 1139 speaks of him as

[1] Metre, Kanda. The aksharas in square brackets are illegible in the photograph, and are supplied from the transcription in Sir Walter Elliot's Carnátaka-Dêsa Inscriptions. There can be no doubt, however, about the correctness of them.

[2] This verse, however, prevents our assuming that Vidyâbharaṇa's chief disciple had two names,— Vâmaśakti and Gautama.

Gautamârya and Gautamadêva, the Âchârya of the Kôḍiyamaṭha, and tells us that two sculptors named Bâvaṇa and Râvaṇa, in order to do away with, i.e. to make amends for, some fault committed by their guild, founded a temple of the god Kusuvêśvara in connection with the temple of Kêdârêśvara, and gave it to Gautama, and that, along with some other grants, Gautama himself allotted, for the purposes of this temple of Kusuvêśvara, sixty kammas of rice-fields in the hakkaḷêśaya-land belonging to himself in the open plain on the east of the culturable land of the god Nârasiṁha. The record of A.D. 1149 speaks of him as Gautamârya and Gautamapaṇḍitadêva, the Âchârya of the Kêdârasthâna, and the disciple of Vâdi-vidyâbharaṇapaṇḍitadêva, and tells us that his feet were then laved by the Śântara Mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Tribhuvanamalla-Jagaddêvarasa and his son Bammarasa, who had come to Baḷḷigâve, on the occasion of granting to the god Dakshiṇa-Kêdârêśvara a village in the Sântaḷige thousand.

The successor of Gautama was his son and disciple Vâmaśakti,— the second of that name. He is mentioned first in a record which belongs to the end of A.D. 1155 or the beginning of A.D. 1156, according to the way in which we interpret the date, which is not recorded correctly. This record does not mention any members of the line previous to Gautama. It introduces him with another adaptation of the verse that is elsewhere found first in the record of A.D. 1129; here (line 35 f.) it runs,— Mûvara-kôṇeya-santati-dêvavratan=esava Parvvat-âvaḷiyoḷ tân=âvirbbhavisidan=amaḷa-yaśô-vibhava-vinûtan=enipa Gautama-munipa[ṁ*]. The next verse tells us that Gautama's son was Vâmaśaktipaṇḍitadêva. And the donative passage describes Vâmaśakti as the Âchârya of the sthâna of the god Dakshiṇa-Kêdârêśvara, and tells us that his feet were laved by the Mahâpradhâna and Daṇḍanâyaka Mâyidêvarasa, the Hergaḍe of the vaḍḍarâvuḷa and hejjuṅka duties of the Banavase twelve-thousand, on the occasion of making a grant to that god. A record of A.D. 1158[1] mentions him in lines 60, 61 as the Âchârya of "the Kôḍiyamaṭha of the Hergaḍe Veṇṇamarasa,"— in line 72, as the Ârâdhya or family-priest of the Mahâpradhâna and Daṇḍanâyaka Kêsimayya, Kêśirâja or Kêśavadêva,— in line 74, as the son of Gautamamuni,— and in line 75, as the Râjaguru or royal preceptor; and it tells us that his feet were then laved by Kêsimayya. The record of A.D. 1162 describes him in line 40 as the disciple of Gautamâ-chârya, and tells us that then, on the occasion of making a grant to the god Dakshiṇa-Kêdârêśvara, his feet were laved by the Kaḷachurya Mahâmaṇḍalêśvara Bijjala, who was encamped at Baḷḷigâve in the course of a state progress undertaken with a view to secure the possession of the southern provinces.[2] The record of A.D. 1168 mentions him again as the Âchârya of the sthâna of Dakshiṇa-Kêdârêśvara, as the Râjaguru, and as "the beloved disciple of Gautamadêva," and describes him (line 33 ff.) as "a very Pâṇini in grammar, a very Bhûshaṇâchârya in political science or moral philosophy, a very Bharata in knowledge of dramatic representation and the other Bharataśâstras, a very Subandhu in poetical composition, a very Lakuḷîśvara in establishing conclusive arguments, and a very Skanda on the earth at the feet of Śiva,[3] and tells us that his feet were then laved by the Mahâsâmanta, Sênâdibâhattaraniyôgâdhishṭhâyaka, Mahâpradhâna, Sarvâdhikârin and Mahâpasâyita, the Daṇḍanâyaka Boḷikeya-Kêsimayya, in making a grant to the god Dakshiṇa-Kêdâradêva. A record of A.D. 1171[4] mentions him again as the Râjaguru Vâmaśaktidêva. A record of A.D. 1179[5] speaks of him as "the beloved son of Gautama," and as the Râjaguru and Âchârya of the sthâna of the god Kêdârêśvara, and tells us that his feet were then laved by the Kaḷachurya king Saṅkama, who had come to the south, the best of all countries, with all his ministers, on a pleasure-trip,[1] and also by the Mahâmaṇḍalêśvaras Tailahadêva and Eṟaharasa, who added to the grant made by Saṅkama a grant by themselves because the Gurus of the sthâna were their own family-preceptors; and an addition to this record registers the fact that in A.D. 1186 Vâmaśakti himself granted some land to the masons Bisandôja, Bâvôja, and Siṅgôja, being pleased with them for building a maṇṭapa of the god Kêdâra. And finally, we have a later date for him from the record of A.D. 1192, which mentions him again as the Râjaguru, the son of Gautama of the Parvatâvali, and tells us that his feet were then laved by the Mahâpradhâna, Sarvâdhikârin, and Mahâpasâyita, the Daṇḍanâyaka Eṟeyaṇṇa, in making a grant, on behalf of his sovereign lord the Hoysaḷa king Vîra-Ballâḷa II., to the god Dakshiṇa-Kêdarêśvara.

[3] The same verse, with certain variations, occurs in line 24 ff. of a record of A.D. 1179 (see note 5 below); but there we have the name of the poet Mâgha instead of that of Subandhu, and the name of Lakuḷîśvara appears in the form of Nakulîśvara (regarding which, see note 2 on page 225 below).

After this, there were another Śrîkaṇṭha and a third Vâmaśakti; and with them our knowledge of the line comes to an end for the present. We take their names from the record of A.D. 1215. This record contains, in line 19 f., the following verse, in connection with the temple of Dakshiṇa-Kêdârêśvara which is mentioned just before it,— Upâsatê Virûpâkshaṁ tatra Kôṭi-maṭha-sthitaḥ Vâmaśaktir=yyathâ pûrvvam=upamanyur=mmahâ-tapâḥ,—" there they worship the god Virûpâksha; as formerly did the zealous Vâmaśakti, abiding in the Kôṭimaṭha, and practising severe penances." The reference here may be to either the first or the second Vâmaśakti. The record goes on to mention, in lines 20, 21, " Vâmaśaktidêva, the disciple of the Âchârya Śrîkaṇṭhadêva." It speaks of him in line 24 as the Sthânâchârya. And it tells us that then, in A.D. 1215, his feet were laved, at the suṅkâdhikâra or office for the collection of customs of the Banavâse nâḍ, by a certain Hemmayyanâyaka, an official of the Mahâpradhâna, Sarvâdhikârin and Mahâparamaviśvâsin Mâyidêvapaṇḍita.

In the mention of the Lâkuḷasiddhânta in line 65 of this record at Ablûr, and in certain allusions in some of the Baḷagâmi records quoted above, reference is made to the doctrine of a Śaiva teacher named Lakuḷa, Lakuḷîśa, Lakuḷîśvara, and Nakulîśa,[2] the founder of the school of the Lakuḷîśa-Pâśupatas, regarding whom some information may conveniently be put together here. The Cintra praśasti, which was composed in the period A.D. 1274 to 1296,— (edited by Dr. Bühler, Ep. Ind. Vol. I. p. 271),— claims that he was an incarnation of the god Śiva. It mentions, in connection with him, a place named Kârôhaṇa, in the Lâṭa country,— which Dr. Bühler has identified with the modern Kârvâṇ, about seven miles towards the west from Ḍabhôî in the Baroda State,[3]— where four branches of his school were established by four of his pupils named Kuśika, Gârgya, Kaurusha, and Maitrêya. And Dr. Bühler understood it to imply that Kârôhaṇa-Kârvâṇ was his birthplace. Now, however, in the light of the facts that I shall adduce further on, it seems clear that the words used in the original, samêtya Kârôhaṇam=adhyuvâsa,— meaning, literally, as translated by Dr. Bühler, "he came to and dwelt at Kârôhaṇa," — are not to be interpreted as implying that it was at Kârôhaṇa that the god became incarnate, but mean that Lakuḷîśa came from some other part of the country and settled there. Dr. Bühler has told us that the doctrines of the Lakuḷîśa-Pâśupatas are explained in Sâyaṇa's Sarvadarśanasaṁgraha. But, he added, "nothing is known regarding their history." And it is interesting, therefore, to be able to fix, from the southern records, the period when the founder of the school lived.

[2] For this form of the name, see Dr. Bühler's remarks (in his paper referred to in the next sentence), p. 274 and note 10. He has there told us that Nakulîśa is the form that is commonly used in Sanskṛit literature; and he has expressed the opinion that the older form is Lakulîśa, which he explained as "a compound of lakulin, i.e. lakuṭin, and îśa, 'the lord wearing the staff,' i.e. the khaṭvâṅga." We find the form Nakulîśvara in the Baḷagâmi inscription of A.D. 1179 (see page 225 above, note 3).

[3] Kârvâṇ, being on the north of the Narmadâ, is outside the original Lâṭa country, but within the limits to which, on the north, that country was extended about the middle of the eighth century A.D. (see Dyn. Kan. Distrs. p. 309 ff.)

The most important record is an inscription at Baḷagâmi of A.D. 1035, of the time of the Western Châlukya king Jayasiṁha II. (P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. No. 155; and see Mys. Inscrs. p. 146). It registers grants that were made in that year for the purposes of "the temple of the god Pañchaliṅga, founded by the Pâṇḍavas, which was the college of the Kâḷâmukha Brâhmaṇ students of Baḷḷigâve, the capital of the Banavase twelve-thousand."[1] And it states (line 11 ff.) that the grants were made,— samasta-tarkk-âdi-śâstra-pârâvâra-pâragaṁ vâdi-Rudraṁ vâdîbha-mastaka-nakh-âsphâḷa(ṭa)na-kiśôra-kêsari vâdi-mah-âraṇya-davadahanaṁ dushṭavâdi-nishṭhura-paṭishṭha-śârddûḷaṁ Bauddh-âbdhi-baḍavâmukhaṁ Mîmâṁsaka-dhâtrîdhara-vajraṁ Lôkâyata-mahâ-taru-vidâraṇa-krakachaṁ sâṁkhy-âhîṁd ra-ru ṁ dra - Vainatêyaṁn[2]=advaitavâdi-bhûja-kuṭhâran=Akalaṁka-tripura-dahana-Triṇêtraṁ Vâdigharaṭṭa-diśâpaṭṭaṁ Mâdhavabhaṭṭa-gharaṭṭaṁ Jñânânaṁda-mada-bhaṁjana[ṁ] Viśvâna[ṁ]da-praḷay-ôgr-ânaḷan=Abhayachaṁdra-kâḷânaḷaṁ Vâdibhasi[ṁ]ha-sarabh a ṁ Vâdirâja-mukhamudra[ṁ] Nayaṇaṁdi-diśâpaṭṭaṁ Naiyâyika-sa[ṁ]rakshaṇ-aika-dakshaṁ sva-paksha-pôshaṇa-para-paksha-dûshaṇa-paṭutara-Viriṁchaṁ vâgvadhû-maṇḍanan=âsthâna-Padmâsanaṁ vivêka-Nârâyaṇaṁ gamaka-Mahêśvaran=upanyâs-âmarâpagâ-pravâhaṁ vyâkhy â n a - k ê ḷ i - la[ṁ]paṭa-manôhara-sarasîruha-bhṛiṁgan=avadâta-kîrtti-dhvajan=amaḷina-charitraṁ dvishṭa-darppishṭha-paṇḍita-gaḷa-K[û]ḷa-pâśaṁ vâdi-Digaṁbara-dhûmakêtuv=âdi ru[ṁ]dra-guṇa-nâm-âṁkitar=appa śrîmal-Lakuḷîśvara-paṇḍitargge,—namely "to the holy Lakuḷîśvarapaṇḍita, who was distinguished by names, of great virtue, such as[3] he who has penetrated to the very end of both the further and the nearer shores of (the ocean that is) the tarka and other śâstras; he who is a very Rudra (Śiva) among disputants; he who is a young lion in tearing open with his claws the heads of the elephants that are (hostile) disputants; he who is a jungle-fire to the great forest of (hostile) disputants; he who is a cruel and very crafty tiger to those who dispute unfairly; he who is a submarine fire in the ocean of the Buddhists; he who is a thunderbolt to the mountains that are the Mîmâṁsakas; he who is a saw to cleave asunder the great trees that are the Lôkâyatas; he who is a great Vainatêya (Garuḍa) to the large serpent that is the Sâṁkhya-doctrine; he who is an axe to the trees that are those who propound the Advaita-philosophy; he who is a very Triṇêtra (Śiva) to burn the three cities in the shape of Akalaṅka;[4] he who has utterly confuted[5] Vâdigharaṭṭa;[6] he who is the grindstone of Mâdhavabhaṭṭa; he who has broken the pride of Jñânânanda; he who is a fierce fire of

[1] The text here (line 18 ff.) runs— (śrîmal-Lakuḷîśvara-paṇḍitargge) Banavase-pannirchchhâsirada râjadhâni Baḷḷigâveya Kâḷâmukha-brahmachâri-sthânaṁ Pâṇḍava-pratishṭheya Paṁchaliṁga-dêvara dêgulada khaṇḍa-sphuṭitada mâṭakkaṁ, etc.— It is this same record which gives the tradition about the Pâṇḍavas establishing the five liṅgas at Baḷagâmi, in a verse (line 2 ff.) which says that, in order to acquire the means for (a celebration of) the râjasûya-sacrifice that should astound the world, the five Pâṇḍavas went (somewhere or other), and, having there collected wealth and tribute, turned back, and came to Baḷḷigâve, and set up these five liṅgas. The complete reading of the verse cannot be made out from the photograph; and no help is to be derived from the transcription in Carn.-Dêśa Inscrs. Vol. I. p. 59: but the end of it runs— Ppâṇḍavar=Bbaḷḷigâveoe vand=ayvarum=aydu liṁgaman=ivaṁ saṁsthâpanaṁ-mâḍidar.

[2] Read Vainatêyan.

[3] The word that is used here, rundra, occurs twice in this passage. For a note on the origin of it, from rudda, see Ind. Ant. Vol. XI. p. 273. Some other passages in which it has been met with, are, Ind. Ant. Vol. IV. p. 204, text line 7; Vol. VI p. 24, text line 1; Vol. X. p. 252, text line 27; and Vol. XVIII. p. 38, text line 8. Kittel's Dictionary includes it, with the meaning of 'large, great,' and says that it is the word which, instead of vadra, appears in the Mysore Amarakôśa.

[4] It is not necessary that the persons mentioned in this passage should have been actual contemporaries of Lakulîśa. And Akalaṅka is, doubtless, the well known Digambara Jain teacher and author who flourished about the beginning of the eighth century A.D. (see Dyn. Kan. Distrs. p. 407, and Ep. Ind. Vol. III. p. 186 f.).

[5] Diśâpaṭṭa. The word has been met with before, e.g., Jour. Bo. Br. R. As. Soc. Vol. XII. p. 35, text line 16, [and above, Vol. IV. p. 270 and note 2]. Kittel's Dictionary gives it,—with the single ṭ, diśâpaṭa,—as a Sanskṛit word meaning 'causing (his enemies) to be scattered in all directions;' and, as such, we may derive it from diśâ, 'region, direction,' and paṭa, which is to be traced to the root paṭ, 'to split, cleave, tear, etc.' destruction to Viśvânanda;[1] he who is a world-destroying fire to Abhayachandra;[2] he who is a sarabha to (the lion that is) Vâdîbhasimha;[3] he who has silenced Vâdirâja;[4] he who has utterly confuted Nayaṇandi; he who is supremely clever in protecting the Naiyâyikas; he who is a very Viriñcha (Brahman) in being most expert in supporting his own adherents and refuting the adherents of his adversaries; he who is the ornament of the goddess of eloquence; he who is a very Padmâsana (Brahman) in darbâr; he who is a very Nârâyaṇa (Vishṇu) in discrimination; he who is a very Mahêśvara (Śiva) in making things clear; he who is a very stream of the river of the gods in reasoning; he who is a very bee on the charming water-lilies which are those who are lustfully addicted to the sport of commentating; he who has the banner of pure fame; he who is of spotless behaviour; he who is a very noose of Death to the throats of hostile paṇḍits puffed up with pride; he who is a fiery portent in (the sky that is the array of) the disputant Digambaras." These grandiloquent terms plainly describe, no ordinary priest of a temple, but someone of great note, who was a recognised leader among the Śaivas. And we need not hesitate about identifying the Lakuḷîśvarapaṇḍita of this record with the Lakulîśa of the Cintra praśasti, who, therefore, was alive in A.D. 1035 and was then at Baḷagâmi.

[6] This is evidently the biruda, used instead of the proper name, of some well-known leader of some other sect or religion. So, also, Vâdîbhasiṁha, which occurs further on.

An earlier date for him is furnished by an inscription at Mêlpâḍi near Tiruvallam in the North Arcot district.[5] This record is dated in the ninth year of the Chôḷa king Parakêsarivarma-Râjêndrachôḷadêva I., i.e. in A.D. 1019 or 1020.[6] It registers the fact that certain shepherds of that village pledged themselves to supply ghee for a lamp in the Ariñjîśvara Śaiva temple. And the declaration was made before the Pûjâri Lakuḷîśvarapaṇḍita, of the maṭha of the god Mahâdêva connected with the temple. Here, we need not assume that mention is made of simply some namesake of the great Śaiva teacher, or that the maṭha at Mêlpâḍi was a branch of an establishment previously founded in Gujarât; we may safely identify the Lakuḷîśvarapaṇḍita of this record of A.D. 1019-20 with the person of the same name of the Baḷagâmi inscription of A.D. 1035. And it would seem, therefore, that Lakuḷîśa commenced his career at Mêlpâḍi in North Arcot, and laid there the foundations of the reputation and influence that he subsequently acquired,— that from there he went to Baḷagâmi in Mysore, and attached himself to one of the great Śaiva establishments at that place,— and that it was towards the end of his career that he proceeded to Gujarât and then, settling at Kârvâṇ, founded the school of Pâśupatas which carried on the memory of him for so long a time.

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.[7]

The record opens with the usual verse Namas=tuṁga-śiraś-chuṁbi, etc., in praise of the god Śi , under the name of Śambhu, followed by another which runs— Girijâ-śriṁgâr-êṁduḥ

[1] If the name here were Vidyânanda, we could identify the person. The second akshara, however, is distinctly śvâ.

[2] This name occurs in a record of A.D. 1398 (Inscrs. at Śrav.-Beḷ. No. 105), but apparently cannot be referred to a period early enough for the person there mentioned to be the one who is spoken of in this passage.

[3] This biruda occurs in the case of a Jain teacher named Ajitasêna (above, Vol. III. p. 188), who, however, may have been of later date. It also occurs in the spurious Tanjore grant, purporting to be dated A.D. 248, (Ind. Ant. Vol. VIII. p. 212), which says that the fictitious Western Gaṅga Harivarman conferred it on Mâdhavabhaṭṭa, son of Gôvindabhaṭṭa of the Bhṛigu gôtra, for defeating in disputation a Buddhist called Vâdimadagajêndra.— A sarabha is a fabulous animal, supposed to have eight legs and to inhabit the snowy mountains, which is represented as stronger than a lion.

[4] This is probably the Jain Vâdirâja who is mentioned in the Śravaṇa-Beḷgoḷa epitaph of Mallishêṇa (above, Vol. III. p. 187). For another mention of apparently the same person, see Mr. Rice's Karṇâṭaka-śabdânuśâsanam, Introd. p. 21.— For the word mukhamudram, Prof. Kielhorn tells me that mukhamudrâ occurs in the Naishadhîyacharita, V. 120, where the commentator has rendered it by mauna, 'silence.'

[7] From the ink-impressions. A transcription of B. is given in Sir Walter Elliot's Carn.-Dêsa Inscrs. Vol. I. p. 389; A. is not included in that collection.— In my abstract, the lines mentioned in brackets are those of A.

pravarttayaty=aṁtaraṁ manô-vârddhiṁ sura-danuj-ârâdhyasya cha yasya stavaḥ=pâtu mâṁ.[1] It then refers itself to the reign of the asylum of the universe, the favourite of fortune and of the earth, the Mahârâjâdhirâja, Paramêśvara, and Paramabhaṭṭâraka, the glory of the family of Satyâśraya, the ornament of the Châḷukyas, the glorious Tribhuvanamalladêva-(Vikramâditya VI.) (line 3). And it then mentions his feudatory,[2] the Mahâsâmanta who had attained the pañchamahâśabda, the Daṇḍanâyaka Anantapâḷa (l. 4),[3] who in the north subdued the seven Mâḷava countries[4] up to the Himâlaya mountains, and in the south drove all the kings of the dakshiṇâśâ or Dekkan into the ocean (l. 5), and thus became famous among the leaders of the forces of the emperor; at the command of the Châḷukya emperor,[5] he led an invasion, and gave the seven Mâḷavas to the flames, up to the Himâlaya mountains (l. 6).

The elder sister of the thus famous Daṇḍanâyaka Anantapâḷa was Padmaladêvî (l. 7) She became the wife of Kṛishṇarâja or Kṛishṇa (l. 8). And to them there were born Lakshmaṇa and Gôvindarâja (l. 8). They had two younger brothers, named Mallidêva and Gaṇapati (l. 9). And all four of them attained the rank and office of Daṇḍanâyaka There follow here two verses in praise of the Daṇḍanâyaka Lakshmîdhara (l. 9) or Lakshma (l. 11), and six in praise of Gôvindarâja (l. 11), otherwise called the Daṇḍâdhipa Gôvinda (l. 13). And then we are told that, while the famous Gôvindarâja was ruling (l. 17):[6]—

There was a certain person named Mudda (l. 17), a resident of Abbalûr, who was possessed of such unequalled virtues that he was looked upon as the very father and mother and friend of the Banavase twelve-thousand.[7] He belonged to the Madaṇḍa or Maḍanda family (l. 18).[8] To him and his wife Bhâgaṇabbe, there were born Bamma (l. 19) and Eṛahagâvuṇḍa: the former of them is also mentioned as Bammagâvuṇḍa (l. 22) and Bammadêva (l. 23); and he is described as having the management of the hejjuṅka, vaḍḍarâvuḷa, and bilkoḍe duties of the nâḍ or district (in which Abbalûr was situated) (l. 24). Four verses follow in praise of his virtues and liberality; one of which tells us that he, a very Dilîpa in generosity, a very Champâpati (Karṇa) in truthfulness, a very tree of paradise for the benefit of other people, caused to be made, in such a fashion that Abbalûr (l. 28) became famous, a temple,[9] in respect of which people said that it was the mountain Kaiḷâsa, the home of Îśvara (Śiva),— that it had all the grandeur of except where otherwise specified, towards the end of the record, where passages illegible in A. have to be supplied from B. In many respects, B. is more easy to read than A.; but I have quoted the lines of A., because this copy is outside the temple and would probably be more easy of access to anyone who might wish to examine the original.

[1] The last pâda is imperfect; and B., which reads yasya stavaḥ=pâtmâṁ, does not help to supply the deficiency. This verse is omitted in the transcription in Carn.-Dêśa Inscrs.

[2] Tat-pâdapadm-ôpajîvi.

[3] The original, in both copies, has mahâsâmaṁtan=âdi-prachaṁda-daṁdanâyakan. This is unquestionably a mistake for mahâsâmantâdhipati-mahâprachaṇḍadaṇḍanâyakan; see the description of Anantapâla in all the records quoted on page 216 f. above.

[4] Sapta-Mâḷava; and êḷuṁ-Mâḷava in line 6. The seven Mâlavas (Mâḷavam-êḷum) are mentioned again in line 16 of an inscription of A.D. 1019 at Baḷagâmi (P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. No. 154, Mys. Inscrs. p. 148; in my published version of it, Ind. Ant. Vol. V. p. 15, we have to read Mâḷavam-êḷumaṁ, not Mâḷava-mêḷumaṁ), and in line 12 of a record of A.D. 1054 at the same place (P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. No. 158, Mys. Inscrs. p. 121); this latter passage mentions also the seven Koṅkaṇs (see Dyn. Kan. Distrs. p. 282, note 5), and the seven Male countries.

[6] Aṁt=âtaṁ negaḷte-vaḍed=arasu-geyye. No hint is given as to the sphere or nature of his powers.

[7] Here, in metre, and in prose in line 61, the name is spelt with the short a in the third syllable. It occurs with the long â, Banavâse, in prose, in A. line 76; but the corresponding passage in B., line 80, gives the short a,— Banavase.

[8] A., line 18, has here, clearly, Madaṁḍa; but Maḍaṁda equally clearly in lines 41, 49, 77. B., line 22, seems to have Madaṁda here (with the dental d in both syllables); but it has Maḍaṁda clearly in lines 48, 56, 81. In A. line 80 and B. line 85, it cannot be said whether the d in either syllable is dental or lingual.

the golden mountain (Mêru), the abode of Achyuta (Vishṇu),[1] — and that it looked like the mountain of dawn, for the rising of the sun. Then there comes a string of epithets in prose, in the course of which he is mentioned as having acquired the excellent favour of the god Brahmêśvara (l. 30). And then we are introduced to his wife, Suganabbe (l. 31). To them there were born two sons,— Êchi (l. 33), Êcha (l. 34), Êchama (l. 41), or Êchagâvuṇḍa (l. 51), and Muṭṭiga (l. 33) or Muṭṭa (l. 45). Seventeen verses follow in praise of the virtues and prowess of the two brothers. Then the record reverts (l. 48) to the elder brother, Êchagâvuṇḍa, whom it mentions as a bee on the succulent water-lilies that are the feet of the god Hara (Śiva) (l. 49),[2] — as the moon of the water-lily that was the Maḍanda family, — as a very Vatsarâja with restive horses,[3]— and as being also called "the lion of his father" (l. 50).[4] His Guru or religious preceptor was Sômêśvarapaṇḍitadêva (l. 51), the disciple of Śrîkaṇṭha (l. 52), who was the disciple of Kêdâraśakti, who was the ajja-guru, lit. 'grandfather-preceptor,' of Sômêśvarapaṇḍitadêva (l. 51), and was an ornament of the succession of teachers called the Mûvarakôṇeyasaṁtati (l. 52).

While the Mahâsâmantâdhipati[5] who had attained the pañchamahâśabda (l. 59),— the choice elephant of his uncle (l. 60),[6] — the Daṇḍanâyaka Gôvindarasa (l. 61), was ruling the Hânuṁgal five-hundred, and the Bâsavura hundred-and-forty which was a kampaṇa included in the Banavase twelve-thousand, and the Nâgarakhaṇḍa seventy,[7] punishing the wicked and protecting the good, with the delight of an agreeable or friendly interchange of communications (with his official superiors) (l. 62),[8] he came in state to Abbalûr,[9] and saw the temple of the god Brahmêśvara which Bammagâvuṇḍa had caused to be made, and was pleased. And, Êchagâvuṇḍa (l. 63) preferred a request, on the strength of which he (Gôvindarasa) laved the feet of Sômêśvarapaṇḍitadêva (l. 67), and made libations of water, and, at the time of the vyatipâta and an eclipse of the sun on Sunday the new-moon day of the month Vaiśâkha of the Vishu saṁvatsara, which was the twenty-sixth of the years of the glorious Châḷukya Vikrama (l. 69),[10] he gave, as a gift to the god Paramêśvara,[11] the village of Muriganahaḷḷi, a town that was included in the Nâgarakhaṇḍa seventy (l. 67),[12] for the aṅgabhôga of the god Brahmêśvara of Abbalûr (ll. 67, 68), and for the frankincense and the oblation, and for the repairs of whatever might become broken, torn, or worn-out, and for the provision of food for ascetics and for boys who were desirous of being taught,[13] as a sarvanamasya-grant, free from all imposts.

After two verses (one in Kanarese, and one in Sanskṛit) about the merit of preserving and the sin of confiscating religious grants, we are told that the record was written (i.e., apparently,

[1] The original has, in both versions, hirmmy-âdri, which can only be a mistake for haim-âdri. As haima means, according to its derivation, either 'wintry' or 'golden,' we might take haim-âdri as equivalent to either himâdri, 'the snowy mountain, Himâlaya,' or hêmâdri, 'the golden mountain, Mêru.' But Achyuta is a distinctive name of Vishṇu. And the explanation seems to be that his paradise, Vaikuṇṭha, is placed, according to some authorities, on the eastern peak of mount Mêru.

The record then repeats the verse Namas=tuṁga-śiraś-chumbi, etc. It then proceeds to refer itself again to the reign of Tribhuvanamalladêva-(Vikramâditya VI.) (l. 74.). C.— Of the time of Perma-Jagadêkamalla II.— A.D. 1144.

This inscription, also, is at the temple which is now known as the temple of Basavêśvara, but was originally called the temple of Brahmêśvara.— The writing, consisting of fifty-two lines of about fifty letters each, covers an area about 2' 11" broad by 4' 8½" high, and is in a state of perfect preservation almost throughout.— The sculptures at the top of the stone are, in the centre, a liṅga, with an officiating priest, inside a shrine; on the proper right side, the bull Nandi, with the sun above it; and on the proper left, a cow and calf, with the moon above them.— The characters are Kanarese, of the period to which the record refers itself; and they are almost exceptionally well formed and engraved. The size of the letters ranges from ½" to 1".— Except for the opening invocation of Śiva and one imprecatory verse in line 45, the language is Kanarese, partly in verse, and partly in prose. The record gives us a word, khaṇḍaraṇe (line 52), evidently meaning 'engraving,' which is not to be found in dictionaries.[1] And, as variants, it gives gauṇḍa (e.g. line 7) and gavuṇḍa (e.g. line 10), as further forms of gauḍa, gavuḍa;[2] nâḷ (in nâḷprabhu, lines 21, 51), as another form of nâḻ, = nâḍ, 'district';[3] and hâḷ (line 33), as another form of hâḻ, 'ruin, desolation, a waste' (i.e. land left uncultivated). In respect of metrical license, we may note that in line 8 Jakkave is written for Jakkavve, and in line 29 eppat-okkaluṁ is written for eppatt-okkaluṁ, simply to suit the metre.

The inscription is a record of the time of the Western Châlukya king Perma-Jagadêkamalla II. It is a Śaiva record. And it registers grants that were made, both in the reign of that king and on a previous occasion, to the temple of the god Brahmêśvara. The later grant was made by a Daṇḍanâyaka named Mallibhâvarasa, who was administering the vaḍḍarâvuḷa and hejjuṅka taxes under the Daṇḍanâyaka Yôgêśvaradêvarasa who was in charge of the Banavâse twelve-thousand province; and it consisted of an oil-mill and a tax, for the maintenance of the perpetual lamp of the god. The earlier grant was made by a certain Bammagauṇḍa or Barmagauṇḍa,[4] the Nâḷprabhu or official in charge of the local district; and the chief item of it was an area of land, as much as his horse was able to go round, ridden at full speed.

The record contains two dates. The details of the first date,— when the grant was made by Bammagauṇḍa,— are Monday, the new-moon day, when there was an eclipse of the sun, of the month Mâgha of the Saumya saṁvatsara, which was the fourth year of the Western Châlukya king Bhûlôkamalla-Sômêśvara III. The given saṁvatsara was Śaka-Saṁvat 1052 current. And the corresponding English date is Monday, 10th February, A.D. 1130: on this day, the tithi ended at about 2 hrs. 29 min. after mean sunrise (for Ujjain); but there was no eclipse. The full details of the second date,— when the grant was made by the Daṇḍanâyaka Mallibhâvarasa; shortly after which time, presumably, the whole record was put on the stone,— are Sunday, coupled with the fifth tithi of the bright fortnight of the month Kârttika of the Raktâkshin saṁvatsara, which was the seventh year of (Perma)-Jagadêkamalla II. (the son and successor of Sômêśvara III.). This date was not recorded correctly. The given saṁvatsara was Ś.-S. 1067 current. And the given tithi ended at about 10 hrs. 50 min. after mean sunrise (for Ujjain) on Tuesday, 3rd October, A.D. 1144, and cannot be connected with the Sunday at all.

[1] So, also, A. and B. have given us the verb khaṇḍarisu, 'to engrave.'

[2] The further variant gâvuṇḍa (e.g. line 21) has already been noted under A. and B.

[3] Kittel's Dictionary includes nâḻ as a form of nâḍ; but not nâḷ. It does not include the word nâḷprabhu (which occurs in other ancient records also); but it does give the equivalent nâḍodeya, which it explains as 'the chief of a country, or of a district.'

[4] This Bammagauṇḍa was a son of Êchagauṇḍa (lines 8, 9); and consequently he was a grandson of the first Bammagâvuṇḍa, the founder of the temple of Brahmêśvara,— Êchagauṇḍa being mentioned in A. line 33, as a son of the first Bammagâvuṇḍa.

The record opens with the usual verse Namas-tuṁga-śiraś-chuṁbi, etc., in praise of the god Śiva under the name of Śaṁbhu. It then refers itself to the reign of the asylum of the universe, the favourite of fortune and of the earth, the Mahârâjâdhirâja, Paramêśvara, and Paramabhaṭṭâraka, the glory of the family of Satyâśraya, the ornament of the Châḷukyas, the glorious Bhûlôkamalladêva-(Sômêśvara III.) (line 3). And it then says that, while he was reigning, there was a certain Bammagauṇḍa (l. 7), Bammagavuṇḍa (l. 8), or Barmagavuṇḍa (l. 10),— son of Êchagauṇḍa and Jakkavve (ll. 8, 9),— who was an angry bee on the water-lilies that are the feet of the god Hara (Śiva),[2] and whose wife was Bhâgale (l. 20).

One day, while the Nâḷprabhu Baṁmagâvuṇḍa (l. 21) was enjoying the pleasure of a talk about religion, the Sênabôva or accountant Boppa (l. 22), Boppaṇa (l. 24), or Boppimayya (l. 25),— himself, also, a bee on the water-lilies that are the feet of the god Hara,[3]— faced him, and reminded him that religion is one's aid, one's ornament, and one's treasure, and that therefore it is a man's duty to accumulate good works; that so it was that the shrine of the god Brahmêśvara at Abbalûr (ll. 26, 27) had come along under the protection of Barmagâvuṇḍa's grandfather and father; that his ancestors and himself owed all their success to granting allotments to the shrine; and that the seventy husbandmen (l. 29),[4]— born in the lineage of the Seṭṭiguttas of the place, and themselves always playing the part of angry bees on the water-lilies that are the feet of the god Ahîndrabhûshaṇa (Śiva),[5]— had lifted high the religion of Śiva, by concurring in all the religious proposals that he had made.

On this representation (l. 30), Bammagâvuṇḍa, inflamed more than ever with a desire for union with the passionate woman that is devotion to the god Śiva, immediately mounted a very tall horse, and promised that, as far as his horse should run at the top of its speed, so far he would give land to the god Brahmêśvara.[6] And so, having made his horse run (l. 33), and having laved the feet of Jñânaśaktipaṇḍitadêva (l. 38), the disciple of Vâdividyâbharaṇapaṇḍitadêva of the Mûvarakôṇeyasaṁtati, with libations of water, at the time of the vyatipâta on Monday, when there was an eclipse of the sun, the new-moon day of the month Mâgha of the Saumya saṁvatsara, which was the fourth of the years of the glorious Bhûlôka[malla*] (l. 39),[7] for the oblation and the perpetual lamp of the god, and to provide food for ascetics, and for the repairs of whatever might become broken, torn, or worn-out (l. 40), he gave, free from all imposts, eight mattars of rice-land in the open field[8] called Hanneya-hal (l. 33), and six mattars . . . .,[9] and fifteen mattars . . . .,[10] and a betel-nut plantation of one thousand trees below the large tank, and sites for twenty houses in that part of the town which belonged to the gods.[11]

After a mandate, in prose, to preserve the grant thus made, and two verses (one in Kanarese and one in Sanskṛit) about the merit of preserving and the sin of confiscating religious grants, the record proceeds (l. 45) :—

On Sunday, (coupled with) the fifth tithi of the bright fortnight of the month Kârttika of the Raktâkshin saṁvatsara, which was the seventh of the years of the asylum of the universe, the favourite of fortune and of the earth, the Mahârâjâdhirâja, Paramêśvara, and Paramabhaṭṭâraka, the glory of the family of Satyâśraya, the ornament of the Châḷukyas, the glorious Pratâpachakravartin Jagadêkamalla (II.) (l. 47),[1] while the Daṇḍanâyaka Yôgêśvaradêvarasa was ruling the Banavâse twelve-thousand, punishing the wicked and protecting the good, with the pleasure of an agreeable or friendly interchange of communications (with his paramount sovereign),[2] Mallibhâvarasa (l. 49), the Daṇḍanâyaka of the vaḍḍarâvuḷa and hejjuṅka taxes, came in state to Abbalûr,[3] and saw the grants that had been made to the temple of the god Brahmêśvara, and was pleased, and allotted, for the oil of the perpetual lamp of the god, one oil-mill and the okkalu-dere tax on one shop, free from all imposts.

The Nâlprabhu Bammagâvuṇḍa (l. 51) and the great saint Jñânaśaktidêva[4] shall preserve (these grants). The writing (i.e., apparently, the composition)[5] is that of the born poet,[6] the Upâdhyâya Mahadêvabhaṭṭa, and of Malliyaṇa, the nephew of the Sênabôva Boppimayya; the engraving[7] is that of Sâtôja, the son of Lâḷara-Chaṇḍôja.

D.—Of the time of Taila III.—About A.D. 1153.

This inscription is on a stone tablet in a field, Survey No. 137.— The writing, consisting of forty lines of about forty letters each,[8] covers an area about 2′ 1″ broad by 2′ 11″ high. It is in a state of very good preservation as far as the end of line 13. From that point onwards, it has suffered more or less damage. But all the historical information that I quote from it, can be made out without any doubt. And it is only from line 28 that the record becomes undecipherable.— The sculptures at the top of the stone are, in the centre, a liṅga; on the proper right side, a squatting figure, facing full-front, with the sun above it, and perhaps a water-pot beyond it; and on the proper left, a cow and calf, with the moon above them.— The characters are well-formed Kanarese characters, of the period to which the record refers itself. The size of the letters ranges from ⅜″ to ¾″.— Except for the opening Sanskṛit verse in praise of Śiva, the language is Kanarese, throughout all the legible portion, partly in verse, and partly in prose. Lines 10 and 12, 13, give the word turaya, as a corruption of turaga, 'a horse,' which is not yet shewn in dictionaries.

The inscription is a record of the time of the Western Châlukya king Taila III. It mentions also his feudatory, the Mahâsâmantâdhipati, Kariturayapaṭṭasâhaṇi or groom of the head-trappings of elephants and horses,[9] and Manevergaḍe, the Daṇḍanâyaka Mahadêvarasa

[8] With perhaps originally some more, now broken away and lost, below the extant portion.

[9] Kari is, of course, the Sanskṛit karin, 'elephant.' Turaya is evidently a corruption of the Sanskṛit turaga, 'horse;' and is, in fact, explained as such by the occurrence, in line 30 of the Śilâhâra grant of A.D. 1058 (Cave-Temple Inscriptions, No. 10 of the brochures of the Archæological Survey of Western India, p. 102), of its Sanskṛit form in the epithet turaga-Rêvanta, which appears as turaya-Rêvanta in line 10 of the present record Paṭṭa is given in Kittel's Dictionary as meaning, among other things, 'the frontlet, or fillet with a golden tablet, who was ruling the Banavâse twelve-thousand province and the Huligeṛe three-hundred district; and a subordinate of the latter, the Daṇḍanâyaka Mâyidêva.[1] And it further mentions a Mahâmaṇḍalêśvara named Sôvidêvarasa, belonging to some branch of the Kâdamba family, who had the hereditary title of "supreme lord of Bândhavapura, the best of towns,"[2] and the epithet of "he who has attained the excellent favour of the god Praṇamêśvaṛa."[3]

That part of the record which contained the donative passages and the date, is either illegible or broken away and lost. But, from the fact that Mahadêvarasa is here described as a feudatory of Taila III. himself, as also in the record of A.D. 1152,[4] whereas in the Baḷagâmi inscription of A.D. 1155[5] he is described as a Daṇḍanâyaka of Bijjala, we may refer the present record to about A.D. 1153.

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.[6]

The record opens with the usual verse Namas=tuṁga-śiraś-chuṁbi, etc., in praise of the god Śiva under the name of Śaṁbhu. It then refers itself to the reign of the asylum of the universe, the favourite of fortune and of the earth, the Mahârâjâdhirâja, Paramêśvara, and Paramabhaṭṭâraka, the glory of the family of Satyâśraya, the ornament of the Châḷukyas, the glorious Traiḷôkyamalladêva-(Taila III.) (line 3). And it then proceeds to say that the Chôḷika (l. 4) came against him in war, but had to unwillingly pay tribute to him; that, in the other direction, the king of Mâḷava (l. 5) was frightened and fled away to refuge, and the Gûrjara saved himself only by giving even more than the Chôḷa had given (l. 6); and that all other kings had to acknowledge the sway of the emperor Nûrmaḍi-Tailapa (III.) (ll. 6, 7).

While he, the Pratâpachakravartin (l. 8), bearing the burden of the whole earth, was reigning with the delight of an agreeable or friendly interchange of communications (with his feudatories),[7] —and while his feudatory,[8] the Mahâsâmantâdhipati who had attained the which is tied to the head of a king's favourite horse or elephant.' And the same dictionary gives sahaṇi, sâhaṇi, and sâhaṇiga, in the sense of 'groom,' and sâhaṇa, in the sense of 'the act of tending and training horses,' and, under sahaṇi, quotes the Malayâḷam châṇi. [Compare p. 103 above, and note 6].— The same official title, with the same use of turaya for turaga, occurs again in a record of A.D. 1152 (see the next note).

[1] These two persons are mentioned together in other records also :— (1) An inscription of A.D. 1155-56 at Baḷagâmi in Mysore (P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. No. 181; and see Mys. Inscrs. p. 100). The construction of this record is — Traiḷôkyamalladêvara vijaya-râjyam (lines 3, 4) * * * * * * mahâmaṁḍalêśvaraṁ Bijjaṇa-dêvarasaru (ll. 10, 11) * * * * * * tan-mahâprachaṁḍa-daṁḍanâyakaṁ (ll. 11, 12) * * * * * * Mahadêvarasaṁ (l. 13) * * * * * * tan-mahâpradhânaṁ (l. 16) * * * * * * Mâyidêvarasan (l. 20). This describes Mâyidêvarasa as a Mahâpradhâna of Mahadêvarasa, and the latter as a Daṇḍanâyaka of Bijjala, during the reign of Taila III. (2) An inscription of A.D. 1152 which is said to be at a temple of Siddhappa at Pura in the Kôḍ tâluka, Dhârwâr district (Carn.-Dêsa Inscrs. Vol. II. p. 1: but there does not seem to be a village named Pur or Pura anywhere in the Dhârwâr district; perhaps Puradakeri, in the Kôḍ tâluka, is intended). This describes Mahadêvarasa as a feudatory of Taila III. himself, and as a Mahâsâmantâdhipati, Kariturayapaṭṭasâhaṇi, Sênâdhipati, and Daṇḍanâyaka, enjoying the Huligeṛe three-hundred and the Banavase twelve-thousand, with the pleasure of an agreeable or friendly interchange of communications; and it describes Mâyidêvarasa as a Mahâsâmantâdhipati and Daṇḍanâyaka subordinate to Mahadêvarasa, and as enjoying the hejjuṁka and vaḍḍarâvuḷa taxes.

[2] Bândhava-puravar-âdhîśvara. The reading is very distinct.— The place is not otherwise known. Can it be the modern 'Bandhole,' in the Kṛishṇarâjpêṭ tâluka, Mysore district?

[3] It might be expected, I think, that the name would be Praṇavêśvara. But the consonant in the third syllable is distinctly m, not v.

pañchamahâśabda (ll. 9, 10), a very Rêvanta with horses,[1] the choice elephant of his father (l. 12),[2] the Kariturayapaṭṭasâhaṇi, Manevergaḍe, and Daṇḍanâyaka Mahadêvarasa (l. 13),[3] was ruling the Banavâse twelve-thousand and the Huligeṛe three-hundred, punishing the wicked and protecting the good, with the delight of an agreeable or friendly interchange of communications (with his paramount sovereign) (l. 14),[4] — the feudatory of the latter[5] was the Daṇḍâdhîśa Mâyidêva (l. 16).

While Mâyidêva (l. 21), having acquired [(the charge of) the vaḍḍarâvuḷa and hejjuṅka taxes][6] of the Banavâse twelve-thousand, was protecting the people and was happily ruling or administering (those taxes) :[7]—

The record then (l. 22) introduces the Mahâmaṇḍalêśvara Sôvidêvarasa (l. 26), who is described as the supreme lord of Bândhavapura, the best of towns (l. 23),— the sun of the [1] Turaya-Rêvantaṁ, line 10. For turaya, = turaga, 'horse,' see page 234 above, note 9.— The same epithet turaya-Rêvanta occurs in line 11 f. of an inscription at Baḷagâmi (P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. No. 171; and see Mys. Inscrs. p. 139, where Mr. Rice's translation, confusing turaya with turîya, gives "a fourth Rêvanta"); and the Sanskṛit form turaga-Rêvanta has already been quoted from a Śilâhâra grant of A.D. 1058 (see page 234 above, note 9). And it is explained by such expressions as hayârûḍha-prauḍha-rêkhâ-Rêvanta, "a very Rêvanta, a perfect rêkhâ among those who are mounted on horses" (P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. No. 31, line 7; and see Mys. Inscrs. p. 232, "a Rêvanta among skilled horsemen;" see also id. p. 325, "a Rêkhâ-Rêvanta in riding the most unmanageable horses"), and by a long compound in line 47 f. of an inscription at Harihar (P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. No. 125) which runs grahaṇa-nirgata-prêraṇa-lagna-sthâ(sthâ)pan-ôllaḷita-sâdi-sû[chana ?]-sû(śû)kaḷa-sapti-saṁkuḷa-grâhita-paṁchadhârâ-prapaṁcha-saṁcharaṇa-chaturatara-surêkhâ-Rêvantanuṁ, and is not altogether intelligible at present.— I am indebted to Prof. Kielhorn for the information that Rêvanta was a son of Sûrya, begotten by Sûrya, who had taken the form of a horse, on Gandhyâ in the shape of a mare; and for a verse in the Mârkaṇḍêyapurâṇa, LXXVIII. verse 24, which, after telling how Sûrya and Gandhyâ produced the two Aśvins, says, in seeking to explain the name of Rêvanta,— Rêtasô=ntê cha Rêvantaḥ khaḍgî charmî tanutra-dhṛik aśv-ârûḍhaḥ samudbhûtô bâṇa-tûṇa-samanvitaḥ; "and, when the seed came to an end, there was produced Rêvanta, armed with a sword, clad in leather, wearing armour, mounted on a horse, and equipped with arrows and a quiver." And in explanation of the terms rêkhâ and surêkhâ, for which it is rather difficult to find a suitable English expression in such combinations,— (rêkhâ means literally 'a line, streak, row, series, the first or prime meridian'),— he has given me a passage which speaks of tâṁ kshiti-talê vara-kâminînâṁ sarvâṅga-sundaratayâ pratham-aika-rêkhâm, "her, who by the beauty of her body is the first and sole rêkhâ of the handsome women on the face of the earth," i.e. "the most beautiful woman of all." For some other instances of the same use of the word rêkhâ, see page 187 above, note 7.— Another name mentioned with horses in the same way, to form a similar epithet, is that of Vatsarâja; e.g., haya-Vatsarâjaṁ, "a very Vatsarâja with horses (Jour. Bo. Br. R. As. Soc. Vol. X. p. 204, text line 8), and vishama-haya-Vatsarâja[nuṁ], "a very Vatsarâja with troublesome or vicious horses," in line 12 of an inscription at Tâḷgund (P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. No. 218; Mys. Inscrs, p. 200, gives "like Vatsa to poison"), and sû(śû)kaḷa-haya-Vatsarâjaṁ, "a very Vatsarâja with restive horses (A. above, line 49). And the two names occur together in line 23 f. of the Śilâhâra grant of A.D. 1058, already quoted above, which describes Mârasiṁha as Rêvantô Vatsarâjô vara-turaga-chay-ârûḍha-rêkhâ-viśuddhau, "a very Rêvanta, and a very Vatsarâja, in the exact determination of who might be the most eminent among those who are mounted on troops of excellent horses." Rêvanta was the chief of the Guhyakas, and, therefore, is apparently not to be identified with Vatsarâja.

[3] The original has daṇḍanâyakaṁ magaṁ Mahadêvarasaru Banavâse, etc.,— perhaps implying that he had a father of the same name; compare the description of Brahma, the general who re-established the Western Châlukya sovereignty for Sômêśvara IV., as the kumâra Bammayya (e.g., E. below, lines 69, 70; and in other records also), in order to distinguish him from his grandfather of the same name.

[6] These words, though quite illegible here, may be safely supplied from lines 26 ff. of the Baḷagâmi inscription of A.D. 1155-56 (see page 235 above, note 1), which run — Enisida mahâpradhânam Banavase-pannirchchhâsirada vaḍḍarâvuḷa-hejjuṁkada herggaḍe daṇḍanâyakaṁ Mâyidêvarasar râjadhâni-Baḷḷigrâmeya nelevîḍinoḷ sukhadin=irdd=ondu dirasaṁ.— So also the inscription of A.D. 1152, which is said to be at Pura in the Kôḍ tâluka, Dhârwâr district (see the same note), describes him as the Mahâsâmantâdhipati and Daṇḍanâyaka Mâyidêvarasa, who was enjoying (anubhavisuttaṁ) the hejjuṅka and vaḍḍarâvuḷa taxes.

water-lily that is the Kâdamba family,[1]— the champion of his father (l. 25),[2] — he who had attained the excellent favour of the god Praṇamêśvara,[3]— who was ruling the Nâgarakhaṇḍa seventy (l. 26) and . . . . , punishing the wicked and protecting the good, with the pleasure of an agreeable or friendly interchange of communications (with his official superiors) (l. 27).[4] But after this, from near the end of line 27, the remainder is hopelessly illegible.

E.— Of about A.D. 1200.

This inscription is on a stone tablet standing against the wall, or perhaps built into the wall, on the right of the god inside a temple of Śiva under the name of Sômanâtha, which appears to be the temple the foundation of which is recorded in the inscription.— The writing covers an area about 3′ 7½″ broad by 6′ 1″ high. It is in a state of good preservation almost throughout.— The sculptures at the top of the stone are, in the centre, a liṅga, with a standing priest; on the proper right, the bull Nandi, with the sun above it; and on the proper left, a cow and calf, with the moon above them.— The characters are Kanarese, of the period to which, from the internal evidence, the record is to be referred. The size of the letters is somewhat irregular, ranging from about $\frac{5}{16}$″ in the n of janâ, line 15, to nearly 1″ in the sh of manushya, line 24. The characters are mostly well formed and well engraved. But in many places they are difficult to read, because the execution is indifferent and imperfect, owing to sometimes the tops of the letters, and sometimes other parts of them, not being completed in the engraving, though marks in the ink-impression shew that they were sketched on the stone and were partially cut by the engraver. Some pointed instances of this are as follows:— In line 8, nishada-himavanta reads at first sight gishada-bâvavana, the hi, which may always be easily confused with bâ, being badly formed, and the side-strokes which would turn gi into ni and va into ma, and the whole of the subscript t, having not been filled in by the engraver, though the ink-impression shews that they were more or less outlined on the stone; in line 9, the tops of the second, third, fifth, and seventh aksharas are similarly imperfect in śuma-mahimâkaṁdaraṁ, and the rtti at the end of the line was left almost altogether unformed; in line 12, there are two instances in prakaṭitak, in which the k reads at first sight as r, and another, in sukêśiyu, in which the superscript vowel, as well as the top of the k, was left unformed; and in line 48, if the name of the Jain temple were not known from other sources, it would probably have been read âṇegejjya, instead of ânesejjeya. Many other similar instances might be pointed out; but the preceding ones seem sufficient. Whether these faults are due to pure carelessness on the part of the engraver, or to his coming unexpectedly on very hard places in the stone, it is difficult to say from simply the ink-impression. The characters include the upadhmânîya in puḥpâḷi, for pushpâḷi, line 2. The lingual ḍ is usually expressed by its distinct sign, which appears very clearly in maṇḍana, line 7; but in a few places we have the ordinary d. The dental dh is formed properly enough in svardhunî, line 9; but in some other places it is hardly to be distinguished from v, e.g. in dhâmaṁ, line 2, and dhârâ, line 61. There is a somewhat rare mediæval form of y in anvayadoḷu, line 62: we have clear instances of the corresponding forms of m and v in maṟigi, line 44, and nilipevu, line 39; and the m is carried back to A.D. 804 by the Kanarese grant of Gôvinda III. (Ind. Ant. Vol. XI. p. 125; see para-dattam=bâ, line 14). The virâma is represented by its own proper sign in puradoḷ, line 13, and in śrîman, line 84, and by the same mark, but imperfectly formed, in dûṟal, line 50: elsewhere, however, it is represented by the vowel u; and there are pointed instances of this in bhavanu, line 26, uruḷug, line 41, aḷuki, line 41-42, śrîmadu, line 60, and êtânu, line 98. The anusvâra is written sometimes, in the usual fashion, above the top line of writing, and frequently so faintly that it does not show in the lithograph, and sometimes, in a larger form, between the lines of writing; the word kaṁdaraṁ, line 9, illustrates both methods of forming it.—The opening invocatory verse is in Sanskṛit; a Sanskṛit proverb is quoted in line 19; three Sanskṛit ślôkas are introduced in lines 25 f., 32 f.; and there are seven of the usual benedictive and imprecatory Sanskṛit verses in lines 94 to 98. With these exceptions, the language is Kanarese, in prose and verse mixed. Now that we have a proper vocabulary, the interpretation of this record presents no real difficulties, though I am indebted to Mr. H. Krishna Sastri for assistance in respect of the verses in lines 22, 35, and 40, and to Prof. Kielhorn for advice in respect of some dubious points in Sanskṛit passages: but it would have been impossible to deal with this exceptionally interesting and racy document verbatim, all through, without the Rev. Mr. Kittel's Kannaḍa-English Dictionary; and I take this opportunity of recording prominently my appreciation of the great value of that scholarly and admirable work, which has now, for the first time, placed it in the power of Western students to understand fully, and do justice to, the beauties of the Kanarese language, especially in its classical and mediæval dialects, and also of expressing my thanks to Mr. Kittel himself for kindly perusing the proofs of my text and translation of this record and suggesting a few refinements in my rendering.[1] The language of this record may be described as intermediate between the classical and mediæval dialects of Mr. Kittel's classification. The forms are mostly archaic. But the more modern forms appear here and there, even in the metrical portions: in the prose passages, we may note iddalli, line 71, kshêtradalli, line 91, the termination gaḷige, lines 51, 77 (in the copulative form), and the ordinary neuter accusative with v, instead of m, in kâlavan, line 19, and the copulative accusative with v, instead of m, in kavilegaḷuvaṁ brâhmaṇaruvaṁ, line 93; in the verses we may note the neuter nominative in v, instead of m, in dêśav, line 11, utkâṭav, line 23, and various other places, and the neuter accusative with v, in ânaṁdavaṁ, line 42-43, and such words as pratyakshav-âgi, line 31, and baḷikkav, line 43, where, again, we have the v instead of the m. In respect of vocabulary, we may note that lines 43, 48 give us baḷikkaṁ, baḷikaṁ, as variants of baḻikkaṁ, baḻikaṁ; lines 73, 93 give, as also do various other records, aḷi, as a variant of aḻi, 'to destroy, to be destroyed;' and line 78 gives bêḷkum as a variant of bêḻkum, =bêḻku, bêku, 'it is wished, it is due, it must, etc.'—In respect of orthography, there is a constant use of b for v in Sanskṛit words, and of ri for ṛi,[2] which requires to be corrected in the verses so as to preserve the metre which is usually satisfied only by restoring the vowel; but the only points to which special attention need be directed, are, the occasional use of ai and aiy for ay, in Râmaiyanaṁ, line 47, Râmaiyyaṁgaḷa, line 61, Ramaiyaṁnuṁ, line 70, ainûṟuvaṁ, line 85, and ainûṟar, line 88, and a frequent omission to double consonants after the letter ṟ.

The inscription does not refer itself to the reign of any particular king, and is not dated. But it is assigned to about A.D. 1200, or a few years earlier, by the mention, in lines 81 to 90 and 99, of the Kâdamba Mahâmaṇḍalêśvara Kâmadêva, and by the statement, in line 101, that the record, though put into shape by another person, was composed by the Daṇḍanâyaka Kêśavarâja. For Kâmadêva, who belonged to the Hângal branch of the Kâdamba family, we have dates ranging from A.D. 1181-82 to 1203;[3] and Kêśavarâja must be the Mahâpradhâna and Daṇḍanâyaka Boḷikeya-Kêśimayya or Kêśirâjayya, for whom we have dates ranging from

[1] The epigraphic records contain many technical expressions,—particularly in the way of titles, territorial terms, names of gods, guilds, professions, taxes, tenures, measures, and so on; but also some more ordinary words,—which Mr. Kittel's dictionary does not explain, because, no doubt, they do not occur in ordinary literature or in the Native vocabularies of the language. It may be hoped that, if he should ever issue a supplement to it, he will examine the edited records, and see what can be done to collate, examine, and explain such expressions: while doing what I can in this direction, I can really do little more than call attention to points which come prominently to my notice in searching for the meanings of words which are not intelligible at first sight; and I cannot undertake to collect all the different variants of Kanarese words which are found in the inscriptions. We still require a grammar of the classical and mediæval dialects, written in English and on European lines.

[2] Rather curiously, we have nisprihâ, with the vowel, in line 28, though line 33 gives nispṛihâ.

A.D. 1168 to 1181 in records which connect him with the government of the Banavâsi twelve-thousand and other districts.[1] Before them, mention is made of the Western Châlukya king Sômêśvara IV. (A.D. 1183 and 1189); and before him, of the Kaḷachurya prince Bijjala (A.D. 1145, and 1156 to 1167). A short passage at the end, evidently added at a somewhat later date, mentions a Kâdamba prince Mallidêva,[2] and recorded some grant which he, also, made to the same temple.

The interest and importance of the record centre in the fact that it discloses the name of the person, Êkântada-Râmayya, who towards the close of the twelfth century A.D. brought about a revival of the worship of Śiva, or a fresh impetus to the Śaiva faith with elaborated and improved rites and practices, which eventually culminated in the establishment of a new sect of Śivabhaktas or worshippers of Śiva, called technically Vîra-Śaivas, i.e. "brave, fierce, or strict Śaivas, Śaiva champions," and popularly Liṅgâyats or Liṅgawants, i.e. "those who have the liṅga or phallic emblem." The Liṅgâyats—(using the appellation by which all average members of the sect would describe themselves)—are outwardly distinguished from the ordinary Śaivas by the practice of carrying about with them a miniature liṅga, usually in a silver box suspended from the neck and hanging about the waist. And the chief characteristics of their faith and practices are, adoration of the liṅga and of Śiva's bull Nandi, hostility to Brâhmaṇs, disbelief in the transmigration of the soul, contempt for child-marriage, and approval and habitual practice of the remarriage of widows. They are found chiefly in the Kanarese country; their vernacular is Kanarese; and it is due almost entirely to them that this beautiful, highly polished, and powerful language has been preserved, in later times, amidst the constant inroads of Marâṭhâs from the north. They now constitute about thirty-five per cent. of the total Hindû population in the Belgaum, Bijâpur, and Dhârwâr districts.[3] In Mysore and the Kôlhâpur State, they number about ten per cent. of the Hindû population. And they are also found, but in smaller proportions, in the districts of Poona, Shôlâpur, Sâtârâ, and North Kanara. Elsewhere, they are constantly met with; but as the result of the migration of isolated families, mostly in connection with trade and manufactures. In the Bijâpur and Dhârwâr districts, and possibly in the neighbouring parts of the Nizâm's Dominions and Mysore, the sect appears to be still steadily gaining ground. And an interesting internal movement was observable in 1891, when large numbers of the members of it claimed to have themselves entered in the census returns under the designation of Vîra-Śaivas, in preference to that of Liṅgâyats, with which they had been content on previous similar occasions.

According to the tradition of the Liṅgâyats themselves, as embodied in their principal sacred writings, the Basavapurâṇa and Channabasavapurâṇa,[4] the events which led up to the establishment of the new sect were as follows:—

To a certain Mâdirâja and his wife Madalâmbikâ, pious Śaivas of the Brâhmaṇ caste, and residents of a place named Bâgewâḍi which is usually supposed to be the subdivisional town of Soc.* Vol. VIII. pp. 65 to 97 and 98 to 221, from which I quote.— In a verse quoted by Mr. Kittel in his Śabdamaṇidarpaṇa, Introd. p. 26, we are told that the Basavapurâṇa was finished on Śrâvaṇa krishṇa 10, Thursday, of the Saumya saṁvatsara, Śaka-Saṁvat 1291 (expired). The given tithi, however, ended, not on a Thursday, but on Sunday, 29th July, A.D. 1369.— The Channabasavapurâṇa appears to have been written in Ś.-S. 1507 (expired), = A.D. 1585-86 (Jour. Bo. Br. R. As. Soc. Vol. VIII. p. 221).

that name in the Bijâpur district, there was born a son, who, being an incarnation of Śiva's bull Nandi, sent to earth to revive the declining Śaiva rites, was named Basava.[1] When the usual time of investiture had arrived, Basava, then eight years of age, having meanwhile acquired much knowledge of the Śaiva scriptures, refused to be invested with the sacred Brâhmaṇical thread; declaring himself a special worshipper of Śiva, and stating that he had come to destroy the distinctions of caste. This refusal, with his singular wisdom and piety, attracted the favourable notice of his uncle Baladêva, "prime minister"[2] of (the Kaḷachurya king) Bijjala, who had come to be present at the ceremony; and Baladêva gave him his daughter Gaṅgâdêvî or Gaṅgâmbâ in marriage.[3] The Brâhmaṇs, however, began to persecute Basava, on account of the novel practices propounded by him. And he consequently left his native town, and went to a village named 'Kappadî,' where he spent his early years, receiving instruction there from the god Śiva, in the form of the local god Saṁgamêśvara.[4]

Meanwhile, his uncle Baladêva died. At the advice of the deceased minister's relatives, Bijjala decided on securing the services of Basava, whose ability and virtues had now become publicly known. After some demur, Basava accepted the office; having the hope that the influence attached to it would help him in propagating his peculiar tenets. And, accompanied by his elder sister Nâgalâmbikâ, he proceeded from 'Kappadî' to Kalyâṇa, where he was welcomed with deference by the king, and was installed as prime minister, commander-in-chief, and treasurer,— second in power to only the king himself;[5] and the king, in order to bind him as closely as possible to himself, gave him his younger sister Nîlalôchanâ to wife.[6]

Somewhere about this time, from Basava's unmarried elder sister Nâgalâmbikâ, who was an incarnation of the intelligence of the goddess Pârvatî, there was born, by the working of the spirit of Śiva, a son, who was an incarnation of Śiva's son Shaṇmukha or Kârttikêya, the god of war.[7] Because, the Channabasavapurâṇa says, he was more beautiful than Basava in many respects, he was named Channabasava, i.e. "the beautiful Basava."[8] And he seems to be depicted as playing a more important part than even Basava himself in the propagation of the tenets of the new sect; for, Basava is represented as receiving from him instruction on important points connected with it.[9]

The two Purâṇas are occupied, for the most part, with doctrinal expositions, recitals of mythology, praises of previous Śaiva saints, and accounts of miracles worked by Basava. And it is only quite at the end of each of them, that we come again on any matter that purports to be historical. They assert, however, that, with the influence that his official position gave the uncle, Basava and his nephew propagated with great energy and activity their doctrines, which included the persecution and extermination of all persons,— and especially the Jains,— whose creed differed from that of the Liṅgâyats.[10] Coupled with the lavish expenditure incurred by Basava, from the public coffers, on the support of the Jaṅgams or Liṅgâyat priests, the proceedings aroused in Bijjala, who was of the Jain faith,[11] feelings of uneasiness and distrust, which are said to have been fanned from time to time by a rival minister named Mañchaṇṇa, in spite of the latter being himself, in secret, a Vîra-Śaiva.[12] And at length an event occurred, which ended in the assassination of Bijjala and the death of Basava.

[1] Loc. cit. p. 67.— The word basava is treated as a corruption of the Sanskṛit vṛishabha, 'a bull,' in its special designation of Nandi, the bull on which Śiva rides.— From Wilson's Descriptive Catalogue of the Mackenzie Collection, p. 305, it would appear that some versions of the Basavapurâṇa substitute, for Bâgewâḍi, Iṅgḷêshwar, which is a village in the same neighbourhood.

[2] The Mackenzie Collection, however, gives the technical official title Daṇḍanâyaka or 'leader of the forces,' which would not necessarily denote a prime minister.

At Kalyâṇa, there were two specially pious Liṅgâyats, named 'Halleyaga' and 'Madhuveyya,' whom Bijjala, in mere wantonness, caused to be blinded. Thereupon, says the Basavapurâṇa,[1] Basava,— himself leaving Kalyâṇa for a place named 'Saṁgamêśvara,'[2] —deputed one of his followers, Jagaddêva, to slay the king. And Jagaddêva, with two unnamed friends, succeeded in making his way into the palace and accomplishing his errand,— stabbing the king even in the midst of his court. Civil war ensued. And, the news coming to Basava as he was journeying, he hastened on his way, and, reaching 'Kudalî-Saṁgamêśvara,' was there absorbed into the god;[3] while Channabasava fled to Uḷvi, in North Kanara, where he found refuge in a cave.

The Channabasavapurâṇa gives a somewhat different account.[4] It places first the death of Basava, who, it says, was absorbed in Saṁgamêśvara in the month Phâlguna, falling in A.D. 785, of the Raktâkshin saṁvatsara, Śaka-Saṁvat 707 (current);[5] and the only reason that it assigns, is, that news had reached Basava that a certain Prabhu, who was an incarnation of Śiva,[6] had left Kalyâṇa, and had been absorbed into Śiva in a plantain-tree at Śrîśaila,— leaving it to be inferred that Basava simply followed an example set to him by Prabhu. On the death of Basava, Bijjala appointed Channabasava to the office that had been held by his uncle. After this, the king caused the pious 'Halleija' and 'Madhuveija' to be tied to a rope and dragged about the ground till they died. In revenge for this, Bijjala was slain by two torch-bearers, named Jagaddêva and Bommaṇa. Then Channabasava, who had meantime sent away many Liṅgâyats to Uḷvi under the pretext of celebrating a feast in honour of the god Jaṅgamêśvara, gathered together his horses and men, and left Kalyâṇa to follow and join them. The "sòn-in-law" of Bijjala started in pursuit. And a battle ensued, in which the pursuers were destroyed, and the king was taken captive. At the advice of Nâgalâmbikâ, however, Channabasava restored the slain army to life; and, having impressed upon the king that he should not persecute the Liṅgâyats, as his predecessor had done, but should walk in righteousness, he anointed him, and sent him back to govern his country.[7] [2] Meaning, apparently, the 'Kudalî-Saṁgamêsvara' which is mentioned further on.

[3] According to Sir Walter Elliot (Jour. R. As. Soc., F. S., Vol. IV. p. 22, note, and Madras Jour. of Lit. and Science, Vol. VII. p. 214, note), the place of Basava's absorption is said to be Saṅgam, in the Hungund tâluka, Bijâpur district, at the juuction of the Kṛishnâ and the Malparbhâ, where, he added, a depression in the linga at the temple of Saṁgamêśvara is still pointed out as the exact spot into which Basava entered. I am not prepared to deny the correctness of these statements. Still, as regards the true identification of the place, the prefix 'Kudalî' seems to me to point rather to the historically much more important (see, e.g., Dyn. Kan. Distrs. p. 445, note 1) Kûḍal-Saṅgam, at the junction of the Kṛishṇâ and the Tuṅgabhadrâ.

[4] Loc. cit. pp. 219, 220. This part of the narrative is put as a prophecy in the mouth of Channabasava.

[5] I.e., according to the southern luni-solar system of the cycle, by which the calculation would be made backwards from the time when the Purâṇa was written.— The Channabasavaṇṇakâlajñâna (Wilson's Descriptive Catalogue of the Mackenzie Collection, pp. 312, 313,) gives the month Phâlguna of Saka-Saṁvat 696, equivalent as a current year, to A.D. 773-74, as the date of the absorption of Basava.

[6] See also loc. cit. pp. 71, 72.

[7] The Purâṇa ends with various other prophecies, not connected with the present subject, to the effect that the king, thus anointed, should reign for sixty years from the death of Basava; that then, at a time when the Hoysaḷa kingdom was flourishing, the Turks,— (the original probably has Turushkas),— led by the giant Pîtâmbara, born among them by the blessing of Śiva, should come and vanquish Bijjala, destroy Kalyâṇa, kill cattle in the temple of Śiva, erect a mosque there, and build the town of Kalburigi; that the kings of Ânegundi should build the town of Vijayanagara, near Hampe; that Pîtâmbara and his house should reign over the land for seven hundred and seventy years; that then there should arise a king named Vasantarâya, who would drive the Turks out of the country and restore Kalyâṇa; that, all the Śaiva saints coming to life again, Channabasava should become the prime minister of this king, and Basava the commander of his forces; and that thus the Liṅgâyat religion should be re-established and greatly increased.— These "prophecies" are, of course, nothing but confused reminiscences of intervening history up to the time when this Purâṇa was written (A.D. 1585-86; see page 239 above, note 4).

The Jain account, as given in the Bijjalarâyacharitra,[1] puts things very differently. Basava's influence with the king is attributed to the fact that he had a very beautiful sister. whom the king took as a concubine. And the end of Bijjala and Basava is related thus:— Bijjala had marched against and subdued the Kôlhâpur chief, i.e. the Śilâhâra Mahâmaṇḍalêśvara, who must have committed some act of rebellion. During a halt on the way back to Kalyâṇa, a Jaṅgam arrived, sent by Basava, and disguised as a Jain, and presented the king with a poisoned fruit, the mere smell of which caused his death. He had time, however, before dying, to tell his son 'Immaḍi-Bijjala,' i.e. "the second Bijjala,"[2] that it was Basava who had sent the fruit, and to enjoin him to put Basava to death. Immaḍi-Bijjala accordingly ordered that Basava should be apprehended, and that all the Jaṅgams, wherever seized, should be executed. And, on hearing this, Basava threw himself into a well, and died; while his wife 'Nîlâmbâ'[3] poisoned herself. Channabasava, however, after Immaḍi-Bijjala's resentment was allayed, presented his uncle's treasures to the king, and was admitted to favour and to a ministerial office at court.[4]

Such are the traditional accounts. There are, however, no apparent reasons for attributing either to the Liṅgâyat Purâṇas, of which even the earlier one was written two centuries after the events which it purports to record, or to the Jain poem, any greater historical accuracy than other Hindû works of the same class have been found to possess. And, on the contrary, there are fair grounds for questioning the correctness of the narratives given by them. The Liṅgâyat and Jain accounts differ very markedly, and to a far greater extent than can be accounted for on simply the supposition of a representation of true facts from different sectarian points of view. In respect of the circumstances immediately attending the deaths of Bijjala and Basava, even the Liṅgâyat Purâṇas are not at all in accordance with each other. The Channabasavapurâṇa allots to these events the absurd date of A.D. 785, which is too early by close upon four centuries. Even the Jain poem appears to place them,[5] not only twelve years before the time, in A.D. 1167, when Bijjala, still alive, abdicated in favour of his eldest son, but also even before the time, in A.D. 1156, marked by the introduction of a reckoning of his own, when Bijjala commenced his independent career. And whereas, if Basava and Channabasava really held the high office that is allotted to them by tradition, we ought to have found by this time a clear mention of them somewhere or other in the mass of epigraphic records that has now come under observation, no allusion of any kind, applicable to either of them, has been obtained, except in the Managôḷi inscription of A.D. 1161 (above, page 9). That record gives us the names of Basava and Mâdirâja, both of which appear in the Basavapurâṇa, in connection with the foundation and endowment of a liṅga-temple, evidently of some considerable size and repute, at Managôḷi in the neighbourhood of Bâgewâḍi, the alleged residence of Mâdirâja and birthplace of Basava; and, in doing so, it really seems to give us the original of the traditional Basava who figures in the Liṅgâyat Purâṇas and the Jain book. And, in disclosing the facts that the parents of Basava were, not Mâdirâja and Madalâmbikâ, but Chandirâja of the Kâśyapa gôtra and Chandrâmbikâ, and that Mâdirâja belonged to altogether a different family, namely the Harîta gôtra, it furnishes further grounds for questioning the correctness of the Liṅgâyat tradition, which, indeed, seems but little better than a legend.

[2] This doubtless denotes Sôvidêva. But there is no epigraphic evidence for calling him Immaḍi-Bijjala

[3] A wife of Basava named Nîlâmbikâ, daughter of one of Bijjala's ministers, is mentioned, from "another report," in Jour Bo. Br. R. As. Soc. Vol. VIII. p 70.

[4] Sir Walter Elliot has said that Basava's sister, who became the king's mistress, was named Padmâvatî; that it was at Uḷvi that Basava drowned himself; and that these events occurred, according to the Jain poem, in Kaliyuga-Saṁvat 4255 (expired), = Śaka-Saṁvat 1077 (current), = A. D. 1154 55. But I have not been able to find the authority for these statements.

[5] See the preceding note.

For the full story that is told in the record now published, reference may be made to the translation, page 252 below; a great deal of it cannot be materially abridged, without detracting from its interest and merits. We have to makė allowance for the supernatural agency, the divine birth of the hero as an incarnation of Vîrabhadra the attendant of Śiva, and the miracle of his cutting off his own head and having it restored to him by his god,— all of which, narrated apparently while the subject of the story was still alive, or at any rate very shortly after his death, illustrates how quickly, in India, real historical events may come to be overlaid with what is purely imaginary and mythical. But, if that is done, the narrative is reasonable and plain, and has the clear ring of truth in it. It shews us the real person to whom the movement was due, and the way in which he started it. And it amounts to this:—

To a Śaiva Brahmaṇ named Purushôttamabhaṭṭa, who belonged to the Śrîvatsa gôtra and was an inhabitant of a town named Alande in the Kuntala country,[1] there was born a son named Râma, who became an ardent devotee of Śiva, and, by the intensity and exclusiveness of his worship of that god, acquired the name of Êkântada-Râmayya.[2] He visited various Śaiva places of pilgrimage. And eventually he came to Huligeṛe (Lakshmêshwar), where there was a temple of Śiva under the name of "the Sômanâtha of the South,"[3] and then to Ablûr, where, in addition to the place being plainly a stronghold of Jainism, there was, as we learn from the other records (pages 213, 232, above), an evidently important and influential Śaiva establishment at the temple of Brahmêśvara. At Ablûr, he got into controversy with the Jains, who, led by one of the village-headmen named Saṅkagauṇḍa, sought to interrupt and put a stop to his devotions. Some wager was made, the terms of it being recorded in writing on a palmyra-leaf, on the result of which the Jains staked their god and their faith. Êkântada-Râmayya won the wager.[4] And then, as the Jains refused to do what they had pledged themselves to do, namely to destroy their Jina and set up a Śiva instead of it, he himself, in spite of their guards, their horses, their chieftains, and the troops that they sent against him, overturned the Jina and laid waste the 1 This place may be safely identified with the modern Aland or Alande, the chief town of a tâluka of the same name, in the Nizam's Dominions,— the 'Allund' of the Indian Atlas, sheet No. 57, lat. 17° 33′, long. 76° 38′. At the temple of Îśvara at Nimbargi in the Kalburigi tâluka, twelve miles south of Aland or Alande, there is an inscription with dates in A.D. 1047 and 1098 (Cars.-Dêsa Inscrs. Vol. I. p. 92); and the passage of A.D. 1047 speaks of "the conntry of Alande in the country of Kuntala." It registers the grant of a village named Gudiyadêvatige in the Goṅkanâḍ district of the Alande thousand. This particular village cannot be identified with any certainty; it may be 'Goody,' four miles on the south-east of Nimbargi, or it may be 'Goody,' nine miles on the south-west of Nimbargi. But the Alande thousand is evidently the country round Aland or Alande and Nimbargi. From the entry in the Indian Atlas, the modern name would seem to be Aland. In the titlings, however, of some inscriptions at the neighbouring village of Ruddawâḍi, it is given as Alande in Sir Walter Elliot's collection.

2 For the explanation of the prefix to his name, see lines 28, 29 of the text.

3 The temple still exists.— There is another mention of Sômanâtha of Purikara (i.e. Huligeṛe) in an inscription of A.D. 1096 at Baḷagâmi (P. S. and O.-C. Inscrs. No. 166, line 31 f.), which says that it was through the excellent favour of the god Sômêśvara of the city of Purikaranagara that his son Sômêśvara or Sôvidêva was born to Sarvadêva, a Daṇḍanâyaka of the Western Châlukya king Vikramâditya VI.— It is worth noting that the form of the name in this record is Purikara,— not Pulikara, as given by Mr. Rice (Mys. Inscrs. p. 172), and as it occurs elsewhere. The second akshara is rather indistinct in the photograph: but it is recognisable as ri; and the prâsa or alliteration requires that the consonant should be r.

4 The record asserts that he cut off his own head, and laid it at the feet of his image of Śiva, which had been brought out of the temple for the purpose of the ordeal; and that, after seven days, it was restored to him by his god, safe and sound, without a scar. And the exact spot on which, according to tradition, this was done, is marked by the next record, F., page 260 below.— The story of his cutting off his head is mentioned in the Channabasava-purâṇa (Jour. Bo. Br. R. As. Soc. Vol. VIII. p. 198): but the controversy, in the course of which it is said to have been done, is there attributed to a Jain having entered a Śaiva temple without removing his shoes; and the occurrence is located at Kalyâṇa, where, it is said, Râmayya had gone in order to see Bijjala, whose fame had spread in all directions. The same passage makes Râmayya quote, in his address to the Jain, an instance of a previous saint, Mahâkâla, having performed the same feat at a village named 'Jambur,' and also attributes a repetition of the feat to a subsequent saint, 'Bankideva,' who heard the story of Râmayya.

shrine, and, as is gathered from subsequent passages, built for his own god, under the name of Vîra-Sômanâtha, at Ablûr, a temple "as large," the record says, "as a mountain." The Jains then went and complained to Bijjala, who became much enraged, and sent for Êkântada-Râmayya, and questioned him as to why he had committed so gross an outrage on the Jains. Thereupon Êkântada-Râmayya produced the writing on the palmyra-leaf, and asked Bijjala to deposit it in his treasury, and offered that, if the Jains would wager their eight hundred temples, including the Ânesejjeyabasadi,[1] he would repeat the feat, whatever it may have really been, that he had already accomplished.[2] Wishing to see the spectacle, Bijjala called all the learned men of the Jain temples together, and bade them wager their shrines, repeating the conditions on a palmyra-leaf. The Jains, however, would not face the test again; saying that they had come to complain of the injury that had already been done to them, and not to wager and lose any more of their gods. So Bijjala, laughing at them, dismissed them with the advice that thenceforth they should live peaceably with their neighbours, and gave Êkântada-Râmayya, in public assembly, a jayapattra or certificate of success. Also, pleased with the unsurpassed daring with which Êkântada-Râmayya had displayed his devotion to Śiva, he laved Râmayya's feet, and granted to the temple of Vîra-Sômanâtha a village named Gôgâve,[3] to the south of Malugunda in the Sattaḷige seventy in the Banavâsi twelve-thousand. Subsequently, the record says, when the Western Châlukya king Sômêśvara IV. and his commander-in-chief Brahma were at Śeleyahaḷḷiyakoppa,[4] a public assembly was held, in which recital was made of the merits of ancient and recent Śaiva saints. The story of Êkântada-Râmayya being told, Sômêśvara IV. wrote a letter summoning him into his own presence at his palace, and laved his feet, and granted to the same temple the village of Ablûr itself in the Nâgarakhaṇḍa seventy in the Banavâsi twelve-thousand. And finally, the Mahâmaṇḍalêśvara Kâmadêva went and saw the temple, heard all the story, summoned Êkântada-Râmayya to Hângal, and there laved his feet and granted to the temple a village named Mallavaḷḷi, on the north of Jôgêsara near Muṇḍagôḍ in the Hosanâḍ seventy in the Pânumgal five-hundred.[5]

In this account, there is nothing inconsistent with the possibility of others being concerned in the matter and helping the movement on,— for instance, the Basava or Basavarasayya of the Kâśyapa gôtra, of the Managôḷi inscription of A.D. 1161, who was a contemporary of Êkântada-Râmayya, and in whom we may find the original of the Basava of the Liṅgâyat Purâṇas. And very possibly the Liṅgâyat or Vîra-Śaiva sect was actually established, in somewhat later times, by a person named Channabasava. In fact, as regards the first point, though the worship of Śiva languished in some parts of the country, it had by no means died out; and on some other occasion we may go into the history of the Kâlâmukha sect, of the various other Śaiva establishments at Baḷagâmi, of the five-hundred Svâmins of Aihoḷe, of the adherents of the Vîra-Baṇañju doctrine, and of other religious bodies, scattered about all over the Kanarese country, from whom the movement must have received encouragement and support,

[1] This was a celebrated Jain temple at Lakshmêshwar. It is mentioned in also the Guḍigere Jain inscription of A.D. 1076, which says (Ind. Ant. Vol. XVIII. p. 39, line 20 f.) that it was founded "in former times," at Purigere, by Kuṅkamamahâdêvî, the younger sister of "the Châlukyachakravartin Vijayâdityavallabha," which name seems to be used to denote the Western Chalukya king Vijayâditya (A.D. 696 to 733-34).

[2] The record asserts that, on this occasion, he undertook that, after cutting off his own head, he would even allow his opponents to burn it, and still would recover it.

[3] This is the modern 'Gogaw' of the Indian Atlas, sheet No. 42, seventeen miles S. S. E. ½ S. from Ablûr, in the Shikârpur tâluka, Shimoga district, Mysore. Maḷugunda apparently does not now exist.

[4] This place cannot now be found in maps, etc., unless it may be identified with 'Sheloli,' near Gârgôṭi, in the Bhûdhargad subdivision of the Kôlhâpur State. The word koppa, with which the name ends and which occurs frequently in village-names in the Kanarese country, means 'a small village.'

[5] Muṇḍagôḍ still exists, under the same name, in the Yellâpur tâluka of the North Kanara district, about [illegible]teen miles to the north by east from Hângal. And Mallavaḷḷi is Malwaḷḷi, three miles to the south-west from Muṇḍgôḍ. Hosanâḍ and Jôgêsara (which was perhaps a temple) cannot be traced.

quite as much as from the Śaiva establishment at the temple of Brahmêśvara at Ablûr itself. But the present record indicates a crisis in the history of Śaivism, when it was specially exposed to danger from the attacks of the Jains, and, apparently, of some still existing Buddhist influences.[1] It shews plainly that Êkântada-Râmayya was the person who came most prominently to the rescue of the waning worship. And, as it describes Bijjala as simply a Mahâmaṇḍalêśvara at the time when, after settling the quarrel between Êkântada-Râmayya and the Jains of Ablûr, he made his grant to the new temple of Vîra-Sômanâtha which Râmayya founded there, it places the exploits of Râmayya shortly before A.D. 1162, in which year Bijjala completed his usurpation of the sovereignty by assuming the paramount titles.

[1] Three records at Kaṇheri in the Ṭhâṇa district, of the time of the Râshṭrakûṭa king Amôghavarsha I. (A.D. 814-15 to 877-78), shew that Buddhism was then still a living religion, favoured by the authorities, in Western India (Ind. Ant. Vol. XIII. p. 134 ff.; and see Dyn. Kan. Distrs. p. 404, Nos. 3, 4 and p. 406, No. 8). The Ḍambaḷ inscription of A.D. 1095, of the time of the Western Châlukya king Vikramâditya VI., records grants made to vihâras of Buddha and Ârya-Târâdêvî at that town, in the Dhârwâr district (Ind. Ant. Vol. X. p. 185; and see Dyn. Kan. Distrs. p. 452). An inscription of A.D. 1098 at Baḷagâmi in Mysore mentions Nâgiyaka, the sâvâsi or attendant or house-servant of the Bauddhâlaya or Buddhist establishment at that town (P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. No. 167, lines 34, 35; and see Mys. Inscrs p. 109). And an inscription of A.D. 1129 at the same place mentions that Bauddhâlaya again, and tells us that it was one of the five maṭhas of Baḷagâmi, the others being establishments of Vaishṇavas, Śaivas, worshippers of Brahman, and Jains (P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. No. 178, line 44; and see Mys. Inscrs. p. 90).

[1] Metre, Champakamâlâ.

[2] For the sake of the metre, either oḍardaḍam must be pronounced as if it were written voḍardaḍam, or else we must read toḍardaḍam, which gives exactly the same meaning. Otherwise, the last syllable of bhâvadoḷ remains short, and the metre is violated.

[3] Read ikkal=ârayisidaṁ.

[5] Read mey-gâydanê.

[6] Metre, Kanda; and in the next verse.

[7] The prâsa, or alliteration of the consonant of the second syllable of each pâda, is violated here. And the metre is faulty in the next word.

[8] Metre, Mattêbhavikrîḍita; and in the next verse.

[9] Read iralu.

[10] Read mârppaḍegaḷu. And see under mâṟ, = mâṟu (2).

[11] Read ukkivadiṁ. The prâsa is violated here.

[12] The second syllable, bhu, was at first omitted, and then was inserted, rather minutely and indistinctly, above the line.

[2] Metre, Mattêbhavikrîḍita.

[3] Read râja.

[4] Metre, Utpalamâlikâ; the verse consists, very unusually, of five pâdas.

Metre, Kanda.

[6] The more usual expression here would be prâsâda.

Read jîrṇṇ-ôddhârakkaṁ.

[8] Read pannirchchâsirada.

[9] We might correct the Sataḷigey of the original into Sâtaḷigey, in accordance with G. line 9, where the reading is quite clear, just as readily as into Sattaḷigey. But the next line here shows Sattaḷigey very clearly; and we must accept that as the form intended in this place also.

[10] Read gauṇḍugaḷumaṁ; and, in the preceding line, Chaṭṭarasanuman would be better.

[14] On previous occasions I have, like others, been accustomed to give in italics, in brackets, words which are not in the original texts, but are necessary to complete the sense and make readable sentences in English; for instance, in the opening verse of this record, the words "the god" before "Śaṁbhu," "his" before "lofty," and "and" before "who." For the future I shall give all such words in common type, without brackets, and shall give in italics, in brackets, only words which are added to explain or supplement the meaning of the original texts, and as to the correctness or suitability of which any doubt may be possible.

water thrown up by the waves of the holy river Gangâ (that flows through the coils of his hair); which has for fresh sprouts his dangling matted hair; which has as its growing fruit the ambrosia-rayed moon (on his forehead); which is pleasing with boughs that are his arms; and which is embraced by a creeper that is the goddess Gaurî (Pârvatî),—give to Râma,[1] in particular, with perpetual activity, an abundance of such fruits as are longed for by a petitioner! May Śrîkaṇṭha (Śiva), who is Îśa (in the form of) Vîra-Sômêśa, surrounded by all the Gaṇas,[2]—who is adorned by feet in which there are set here and there the numerous crimson rays of the clusters of the jewels in all the tiaras of the multitude of the gods; who is the best of the immortals; and who is the abode of the splendour of the rays of the glances of (Pârvatî) the daughter of (Himâlaya) the lord of the mountain of cold,—always confer good fortune upon Râmadêva, upon him who is of unequalled greatness!

(Line 5)—Round about it (namely Jambûdvîpa) is the ocean, which is met by banks of clouds that are the trunks, blowing out spouts of water, of numerous herds of elephants which agitate the waters by the blows of the tips of their tails that are as efficient in doing so as the shoals of great fish which fall out from the mouths of the fierce monsters of the sea that glide to and fro; from which there rise the rays of many jewels and the lustre of large pearls; which has lines of mountains on its shores; and which is enclosed by the broad hips of the woman who is the Earth. And there, on the south of Jambûdvîpa, which is girt about by the salt ocean which is thus beautiful as being the abode of numerous marine animals and the place of very high waves, among all the Nîla, Nishadha,[3] and Himâlaya mountains, the cold mountain (Himâlaya),—which has vast glens for rest after the fatigue of the great dalliance of love of the crowd of the daughters of the Siddhas; which is full of rows and rings of huge rocks falling down from the many piles of mountains that are pounded by the torrent of the waters of (the Mandâkinî) the river of heaven; and which is irradiated by the mass of the tremulous lustre of the cold-rayed moon,—is beautiful with a length stretched out so as to measure the eastern and the western oceans.[4]

(L. 10)—In the land of Bhâratavarsha, which lies on the southern flank of that same Himâlaya, the king of mountains, there shines, with exceedingly great comeliness, the country of Kuntaḷa; and there there is beautiful the city that is called Alande, full of grace and splendour, and ever esteemed to altogether surpass Amarâvatî (the city of the gods) with learned people and with a countless wealth of cattle and grain and water. Moreover:—As is well known, in Amarâvatî there are Sukêśi and Mañjughôshe,[5] these two; but in that town there is a whole multitude of women, all of them with beautiful hair and sweet voices. It is charming with various plantations of sweet-smelling rice,[6] with parks and gardens which are

[1] I.e. to the Râmayya, or Êkântada-Râmayya, who is the subject of the record. In the next verse he is mentioned as Râmadêva. He is called simply Râma again in lines 41, 42, 43, 99, 101.

[2] The Gaṇas are the attendants of Śiva. Mention is made of them again in lines 21 to 23, below. The leader of them was Nârada (line 22); and some of them were deceased or translated Śaiva saints, who are named in the same passage.

[3] According to Monier-Williams' Sanskṛit Dictionary, Nîla or Nîlâdri "the blue mountain," is "one of the principal ranges of mountains dividing the world into nine portions and lying immediately north of Ilâvṛita or the central division," and Nishadha is a similar range "lying immediately south of Ilâvṛita and north of the Himâlaya."

[4] Compare the opening verse of the Kumârasambhava, which describes Himâlaya as reaching to the eastern and the western oceans, as if it were the measuring-rod of the earth.

[5] These are two of the nymphs of paradise; for the first name, see Kittel's Dictionary. The verse contains a play on the meanings of their names.

[6] Gandha-śâli is explained in Monier-Williams' Sanskrit Dictionary as 'a sweet-smelling kind of rice.' He also gives mahâ-śâli, 'a kind of large and sweet-smelling rice.' And Hiuen Tsiang mentions the "Mahâśâli-rice; this rice is as large as the black bean, and when cooked is aromatic and shining, like no other rice at all; it grows only in Mâgadha, and nowhere else; it is offered only to the king or to religious persons of great distinction, and hence the name rice offered to the great house-holder," (Life, p. 100; see also Records, Vol. II. p. 82, where it is called "the rice for the use of the great"). The gandha-śâli is mentioned again in G. below, line 4, and also in one of the Managôḷi inscriptions (page 30 above, line 13).

in bloom through all the seasons, with plenty of well-filled tanks and wells and pools, with sounds everywhere of cranes and buzzing bees and cuckoos and ruddy geese and peacocks and numerous flights of parrots and blue jays, and with the music of lutes in the diversions of courtesans. And when it had thus become a place of many charms, as being known to be the site of an infinite number of parks, and pleasing with inexhaustible pools of water, and crowded with many people, and the dwelling-place of innumerable courtesans, and the abode of a countless number of merchants, there came down there, from the silver mountain (Kailâsa),[1] accompanied by Girijâ (Pârvatî), with great gladness, the god Sômanâtha (Śiva), who has the water-lilies that are his feet made tawny by the mass of the multitude of the rays that dart forth from the jewels inlaid in the tiaras of all the gods, and who is a very tree of paradise having for the ripening of its fruits the accomplishment of the desires of worshippers who bow down before him in supplication.

(L. 17)—Among the residents of that town of Sômanâtha,[2] in the Brâhmaṇ quarters, amongst the Brâhmaṇs, there became famous one who resembled those (well-known) Vyâsa and Śuka and Vâmadêva and Parâśara and Kapiḷa and others; namely he, Purushôttama, who was called the best of Brâhmaṇs,— belonging to the Śrîvatsa gôtra; praised by (all other) Brâhmaṇs; acquainted with all the Vêdas and Vêdâṅgas; of an excellent disposition through possessing the virtue of pure behaviour. The good wife of that Brâhmaṇ was Padmâmbike, of pure behaviour, devoted to her husband, who by her virtuous disposition caused herself to be likened to both Sîtâdêvî (the wife of Râma) and the wife of that (well-known) Satyatapas(?).[3] And, that husband and wife having remained for a long time without offspring, one day, having come to know the saying of the Vêda that "there is no heaven for him who has no son,"[4] the famous Purushôttama, who practised truth and purity, did worship, together with his wife, to Śambhu, in order to obtain a son, saying "Îśa is the protection from misfortune."

(L. 20)—At that same time, when Mahêśvara (Śiva), whose feet, resembling water-lilies, are worshipped by the crowd of gods and demons,— with Kêśava (Vishṇu) and Vâsava (Indra) and Abjabhava (Brahman) in attendance upon him, and surrounded by countless Gaṇas, and accompanied by Umâ (Pârvatî),— was enjoying the delight of an interchange of pleasing conversations in royal darbâr in a delightful part of the mountain Kaiḷâsa, Nârada, the leader of the Gaṇas, spake thus:—"While Ôhila, Dâsa, Chenna, Siriyâḷa, Haḷâyudha, Bâṇa, Udbhaṭa, and Maḷayêśvara who came here in human form, and Kêśavarâja,[5] and innumerable other Gaṇas, resigning the happiness of earthly life, have been dwelling here in this

[1] Hiuen Tsiang mentions a "silver mountain," and appears to place it in the country of O-ki-ni, somewhere on the north of the Himâlaya range: he says—"this mountain is very high and extensive; it is from this place that the silver is dug which supplies the Western countries with their silver currency" (Life, p. 36).

[2] The text perhaps means to say that Alande was also known by the name of Sômanâthapura.

[3] The akshara before the tya at the end of line 18 is small and imperfectly formed, and is almost quite illegible. I can only conjecture that it is sa. Satyatapas appears to be "a Muni who was once a hunter but, after performing severe austerities, obtained, as a boon from Durvâsas, that he should become a great sage and saint." But it is usually Sîtâ and Arundhatî (wife of Vasishṭha), who are quoted as patterns for wives to imitate.

[4] We seem to have here some well-known proverb. Lôka, 'world,' must stand for paralôka, 'the other world, heaven.'—For a very similar expression, Prof. Kielhorn has referred me to aputrâṇâṁ kila na santi lôkâḥ śubhâḥ (Kâdambarî, Peterson's edition, p. 61, line 14),—words which the queen heard at a recitation of the Mahâbhârata.

[5] The reference here is to various famous Śaiva saints, most of whom appear to be mentioned in the Basava-purâṇa.— Mr. H. Krishna Śastri has obliged me with other references for some of these persons: for Siriyâḷa (in Kanarese) or Śiṟuttoṇḍanâyaṉâr (in Tamiḻ) the fourteenth âśvâsa of the Vṛishabhêndravijaya of Shaḍakshari, and also the Tamiḻ Periyapurâṇam (prose version, Madras edition, p. 217 ff.), with the difference that Siriyâḷa is here represented as the son of Śiṟuttoṇḍa, and not identical with him, as asserted in the other work; for Haḷâyudha, the fifteenth âśvâsa of the Vṛishabhêndravijaya, which incidentally mentions also Dâsa and Chenna (verses 4, 6, after the introduction); and for Malayêśvara (in Kanarese) or Śêramâṉ-Perumâḷ (in Tamiḻ), the Periyapurâṇam, p. 220 ff., which says that, when ruling at the town of Koḍuṅgôḷûr, he became a especial excellent abode of faith, the congregation (of Śaivas on the earth) has been afflicted among the Jains and Buddhists." On his speaking thus, Mahêśvara, with a smile on his face that resembled a water-lily, said to Vîrabhadra—"Do thou, in the world of men, beget a man with a portion of thyself, and then put a stop to those hostile observances." And thereupon Vîrabhadra came in a dream, in the guise of an ascetic, to Purushôttamabhaṭṭa, and said "There shall be born to thee a son, who shall suppress hostile observances;" and he further said "Those many people, in the region of the south, who have trodden in the paths of the Jains, all of them shall be put to shame, O master!, by thy son (who shall be called) Râma." Having thus spoken and having manifested great graciousness, he went away. And Purushôttamabhaṭṭa, full of content at having succeeded, obtained a son, and performed the birth-ceremony and other rites, and bestowed the name of Râma in accordance with the bidding of the god.

(L. 27)— And while he (Râma), having become imbued with meditation on Śiva in a manner suitable to his divine birth, was practising observances with strict indifference to other things, it came about that, through the intensity of his devotion which was directed entirely to one object, he was called one who had one sole aim; and, having worshipped Śiva with great exclusiveness, he acquired the name of Êkântada-Râma. And in the course of practising observances, with speech and body and mind always devoted to the feet of (Śiva) the lord of Gaurî (Pârvatî), at various sacred places prescribed by the Śaiva traditions and on all the numerous great and small rivers where there are altars of Śambhu, he came and beheld with joy the Sômanâtha of the South,[1] honoured by the gods, who drives away all sin. And when, having thus come, he was worshipping that Sômanâtha of Huligeṟe, whose feet are beautified by the cluster of the rays of the jewels in the tiaras of the greatest of the gods who unceasingly bow down before him, that supreme lord became manifest, and said,—(Here are two ślôkas)[2]—"Go, O Râma!, at my command, to the excellent village of Abbalûru, and take up thy abode there at ease, and sacrifice to me with strict devotion; and, without any apprehension, enter into controversy with the Jains, and wager thy head; and be victorious, O son!"

(L. 33)—And when, on the god Sômanâtha having thus given his commands, Êkântada-Râmayya was abiding, with complete indifference to other things, at the shrine of the god Brahmêśvara of Abbalûru, some of the Jains, together with that Saṅkagauṇḍa,[3] concerted together, and came to obstruct him, and with great resoluteness persistently sang the praises (of their own god) in the proximity of Śiva, saying "Jina is the (true) divinity." When he heard that, Êkântada-Râmayya became very full of wrath, and said "It is forbidden to praise any other deity in the proximity of Śiva:" but, refusing to desist, they continued vociferating; and then he spake thus:—"Who is it that creates the earth?; who is it that protects it in the time of calamity?; and further, who is it that is able to destroy it, when his anger becomes great?: it is that same Śambhu; and, in the face of the existence of him, who pervades everything, how can he (Jina) be a god, who came by chance into the world, and lived[4] in bewilderment, and applied himself to practising austerity, and (only thus) attained happiness?: does your Arhat bestow gifts as Hara (Śiva) does?; has he ever given even ever so small a thing?; (it is) from

[2] Thus in the original, by way of parenthesis; like the vachana, 'prose,' kanda, 'verse,' and vṛitta, 'metre,' which also we have here and there.

[3] I.e. "together with Saṅkagauṇḍa, one of the village-headmen of that place."

[4] Bardu seems to be a form of the past participle of baḻ, 'to live,'— a root from which we have bardu, baddu, 'increase, greatness, etc.'

Hara (that) in former days the devout Gaṇas Bâṇa and Diniśâḷa, and so many others, obtained boons." On his having thus spoken, the Jains said—" It may be so !;[1] but why dost thou simply talk of former worthies?; cut off thine own head, under such conditions that all people may know of it, and offer it to him, and get it back from him, (and then we will admit that) thou art indeed a pious man and he is indeed the god."

(L. 38)—When they had thus spoken, Êkantada-Râma said " If I offer my head to (Śiva) the foe of Love, and obtain it back, what is the wager that ye will pay to me?;" whereupon they replied, in anger, " We will pluck up our Jina and set up (an image of) Śiva." Then, saying " Give me (it in writing on) a palmyra-leaf," and taking the palmyra-leaf that they gave, Râma brought (his image of) Śiva into the presence (of the Jains) at the place where he was to straightway cut off his head and make an offering of it, and spake thus :—" If I have ever not said that thou alone, O Śambhu !, art my protection without fail, and if my thoughts have ever gone astray after other gods, my head shall not go from me by the edge of this scimitar;[2] but, otherwise, O Śiva !, let it roll down before thy feet :" and, thus speaking, the brave Râma, with a loud shout, and with an unfaltering hand, set himself to cut off his head and lay it at the feet of Śiva. While the disciples were saying " Surely he inflicted but a small wound; he drew the sword and thought, indeed, to do a bold thing, but then he became afraid and has preserved his body unhurt; he must have devised some mischief to the sword (blunting it, so that it shall not wound him)," Râma, that man of ability, quickly and instantly cut through his own neck with as little difficulty as if he were shearing through a bundle of grass, and placed (his head) at the feet of Îśa (Śiva), and caused joy to the attendants of Śaṁkara (Śiva).

(L. 43)—After the severed head had been exhibited in public during seven days, Hara kindly gave it back: the head became sound again without any scar; and Râma received it back, to the knowledge of all people. In much perturbation, all the Jains, in great distress, bowed down on the ground and seized his feet, imploring him to abstain from destroying their Jina; but, refusing to abstain, he fell on it like a thunderbolt from a clear sky,[3] and broke the head of the Jina. Just as a wild elephant in rut plunges into a grove of plantain-trees, and, though alone, sweeps everything away before him, so he, putting forth his strength, scattered the heroes who guarded it, and the horses, and the chieftains, and, while the opposing ranks of the Jains, crying out that Mârî (the goddess of plague or death)[4] had come upon them, were running away in flight, he beat the Jina till it fell; and there he made them accept the holy Vîra-Sômêśa.

(L. 46)—When the Jains, having gone in a body, and having related all the matter in a cunning way to king Bijjaṇa, were, with enmity, making a very slanderous complaint about it, king Bijjaṇa became mad with anger, and looked at Râmayya with wrath, and said " Why hast thou done this evil thing?;" whereupon he shewed the palmyra-leaf that they had given, and said :—" This is the palmyra-leaf that they gave; weigh it in thy mind, and place it in thy treasury; let them wager again; if they dare further stake, in thy presence, (all) their various Jinas, then I will cut off my head and place it as the stake in their hands, and will recover it even after they shall have burned it; but they shall wager to me the various Jinas of their eight hundred shrines, the chief of which is the Ânesejjeyabasadi." Thereupon king Bijjaṇa said " We will see this marvel;" and he summoned the wise men of the shrines, and the (other)

[2] I.e. " let me not have the courage to cut it off."

[3] Lit. "like a dry thunderbolt, unaccompanied by rain."

[4] There is a reference to Mârî in line 28 of the Nêsargi inscription (Jour. Bo. Br. R. As. Soc. Vol. X. p. 243); and another occurs in an inscription at Balmuri (Ep. Carn. Vol. III., Sr. 140), in which she is called Mâriya-mûri, " the destroying deity Mârî."

Jains, and said "All of you wager your shrines, and give (it in writing on) a palmyra-leaf. But they said "We came to lay a complaint about the shrine which has already been ruined; we have certainly not come to lay a wager and lose (any more of) our Jinas!" Then king Bijjaṇa laughed, and dismissed them, bidding them to go without any further words, and to live in peace; and he gave to Râmayya, in such a way that all of them knew of it, a certificate of victory.

(L. 51)— A very Indra to the mountains that are hostile kings; a very Agastya to the ocean of hostile kings; a hot fire to the fuel of hostile kings; a very Śiva to Love in the form of hostile kings; a great Garuḍa to the fierce serpents that are hostile kings; such is the glorious Bijjaṇa, the friend of those who swing the sword in seizing the wives of inimical kings, and the favourite of the woman Fame. Having put down the Chôḷa, having humbled Lâḷa, having deprived Nêpâḷa of stability, having crushed Andhra to pieces, having made the Gurjara captive, having broken the greatness of the king of Chêdi, having ground Vaṅga in a mill, and having fought and killed the kings of Baṅgâḷa, Kaḷiṅga, Mâgadha, Paṭasvara,[1] and Mâḷava, the brave king Bijjaṇarâya has protected the whole circuit of the earth. Agastya was born in a pitcher, and drank up the ocean; and in Bijjaṇa, that excellent man, born among the Kaḷachuryas, (there was displayed) the power of drinking up, without vomiting, the ocean that was the lineage of the Chaḷukyas.

(L. 55)— Hail! The glorious Bijjaṇadêva,— who was possessed of all the glory of the names of, among others, the Mahâmaṇḍalêśvara who attained the pañchamahâśabda, the supreme lord of Kâḷañjara the best of towns, he who had the banner of a golden bull, he who was heralded in public with the sounds of the double drum called ḍamaruga, he who was the sun of the water-lily that was the family of the Kaḷachuryas, the fierce in fight, the hero in the clash of battle, the sun of good warriors, the elephant-goad of brave men, a very cage of thunderbolts to (protect) elephant-like chieftains who sought refuge with him, a very (Râvaṇa) lord of Laṅkâ in prowess, (he who behaved like) a uterine brother to the wives of other men, he who was successful (even) on a Saturday, the wrestler against hill-forts, a very Râma characterised by firmness of character, the wrestler free from apprehension,— was pleased with the great boldness that was displayed by Râmayya, and with his unsurpassed devotion to the god Mahêśvara; and, for the repairs of whatever might become broken or torn or worn-out belonging to the enclosure,[2] with beautiful pinnacles, of the temple of the god Vîra-Sômanâtha, and for the aṅgabhôga and the perpetual oblation of the god,— having put forward (to manage the grant) Chaṭṭarasa, the chieftain of the Sattaḷige[3] seventy which was a kampaṇa of the Banavase twelve-thousand, and the chief Prabhus and village-headmen of that kampaṇa, and having laved the feet of the holy Êkântada-Râmayya,— he gave, with libations of water, the village named Gôgâve to the south of Maḷugunda in the Sattaḷige seventy, with its established boundaries and (to be enjoyed according to) the tribhôga,[4] and so maintained (religion).

(L. 61)— Ôm! When many kings, possessed of glory and renowned fame and valour, endowed with prowess (that has been preserved) in legends, had passed away in the lineage of the Chaḷukya kings which was considered to be the chief ornament of the Lunar Race, Tailapa (II.),— as an instance of a typical king,[5] — who may be called one of the seven principal mountains of the earth which was the Châḷukyas, with happiness possessed (the world). that Tailapadêva there was born a son named (Iṛivabeḍaṅga)-Satyâśrayadêva; his son was Vikramadêva (V.); his younger brother was Daśavarmadeva; his son was Jayasiṅgarâya (II.);[1] his son was Âhavamalla-(Sômêśvara I.); his son was Tribhuvanamalla-Permâḍirâya-(Vikramâditya VI.); his son was Bhûlôkamalla-Sômêśvaradêva (III.); his son was the Pratâpachakravartin (Porma)-Jagadêkamalla (II.); his younger brother was Traiḷôkyamalla-Nûrmaḍi-Tailapa (III.); and his son was Tribhuvanamalla-Sômêśvaradêva (IV.), whose prowess and majesty were as follows:—

(L. 65)—When eighty fierce tusked elephants in rut were massed together (to oppose him), laying aside fear, and not relying upon (any other means), with one tuskless elephant he repulsed them as if they were but one or two,[2] and fought and conquered the countries, the towns, the elephants, and the horses; (and so) Sômêśvara uprooted that race of the Kaḷachuryas, as if it were but a billa-tree. In such a way that the Earth became free from enmity, and Fortune, having come under his control, became herself a very mine of generosity to him, and Fame laid his commands on the mouths of all the rulers of the points of the compass, and the lovely woman Victory was ever fettering the sword of his arm (to restrain him from altogether too excessive conquests), Vîra-Sômêśvara (IV.), whose valour was unassailable, and who was the moon of the water-lilies that were the eyes of the wives of his foes, acquired the sovereignty. A very close connection between the earth and himself being formed at that time when the dense darkness that was the Kaḷachuryas dispersed before his brilliance, the Châḷukya king Sôma became famous.

(L. 69)—That same Tribhuvanamalla-Sômêśvaradêva (IV.),—when the kumâra Bammayya,[3] the chief of all the leaders of the army, the establisher of the Châḷukya sovereignty, and he himself, were at the small village of Seleyahaḷḷiyakoppa with the pleasure of an agreeable interchange of communications, and were one day engaged in a discourse about religion and were reciting the praises of ancient and recent devotees of Śiva,—heard the story of how Êkântada-Râmayya, when he was at Abbalûru, and when all the Jains assembled and came and entered into a great disputation with him and made a wager that, if he would cut off his head and could get it back[4] from the hands of Śiva, he might break their Jina and set up Śiva, and gave (it in writing on) a palmyra-leaf, took the palmyra-leaf that they gave, and cut off his own head, and then, after doing worship to Śiva, on the seventh day got back his head free from all injury just as it was before, and obtained a certificate of victory, together with respectful treatment, from the hands of Bijjaṇadêva, and broke the Jina, and destroyed the shrine and flung it down, and laid waste the site, and set up the god Vîra-Sômanâtha, and in accordance with the Śaiva traditions founded a temple with three pinnacles, as vast as a mountain. And Tribhuvanamalla-Sômêśvaradêva (IV.) was astonished, and, from a desire to see him, caused a letter of deferential invitation to be written, and made him come, and met him with respect, and took him along with himself to his own house, and did worship to him with great reverence, and,—for the repairs of anything that might become broken or torn or worn-out belonging to the enclosure[5] with beautiful pinnacles of the temple of the holy god Vîra-Sômanâtha, and for the aṅgabhôga and the raṅgabhôga and the perpetual

[1] There are mistakes here: Jayasiṁha II. was, indeed, a son of Daśavarman; but the latter was the younger brother of Iṛivabeḍaṅga-Satyâśraya, not of Vikramâditya V.; and Vikramâditya V. was a son of Daśavarman: see the table, above, Vol. III. p. 2.

[2] Compare a verse in the Gadag inscription of A.D. 1192 (Ind. Ant. Vol. II. p. 300, text line 29 f.), which, properly translated, describes Brahma (the general who helped Sômêśvara IV. to recover the kingdom, and who is mentioned by the name of Bammayya in line 70 below) as conquering sixty tusked elephants with one young tuskless elephant, when, in contempt of (i.e. in mutiny against) his father, he was depriving the Kaḷachuryas of the sovereignty.

[3] I.e. "the younger Bammayya;" so called to distinguish him from his grandfather of the same name (see Dyn. Kan. Distrs. p. 464, note 3). He is the Brahma who is mentioned in the preceding note.

[4] Paḍadey-appaḍe, line 71, from paḍadey, for paḍaday, + appaḍe, is a somewhat stilted equivalent of paḍadaḍe or paḍadoḍe.

oblation of the god, and for the occasions, among others, of the purificatory ceremony of the month Chaitra and the festival of spring, and for the giving of food and the imparting of knowledge,— saying that the village was to belong to that god,— with the very greatest devotion, having put forward Mallidêva, the chieftain of the kampaṇa, (to manage the grant), and having laved the feet of Êkântada-Râmayya, gave, with libations of water, (by) a copper-plate charter, as a grant to the god Paramêśvara (Śiva), the village of Abbalûru in the Nâgarakhaṇḍa seventy which was a kampaṇa of the Banavase twelve-thousand, together with the customs-duty called mêlâḷike-manneya of that village, and with (the right to) fines and punishments and buried treasure, and with its boundaries established in former times and with the tribhôga; and he seated him on an elephant and paraded him in public, and thus with the very greatest devotion maintained (religion).

(L. 80)— Ôm ! Êkântada-Râma, who worshipped the water-lilies that are the feet of Śrîkaṇṭha with thoughts free from any perplexity, and who became famous in being considered to be the bulwark of the Śaiva rites, delighted in devotion to Śiva !

(L. 81)— May the holy god Vîra-Sôma,— who is the greatest among all the gods; who carries the moon (on his forehead); and who wears the garb of an actor in the dance of amorous dalliance which is lovely on account of the beauty imparted to it by the smiling, white, trembling, full glances of the sweet smiles of (Pârvatî) the daughter of the mountain (Himâlaya),— day by day confer fortune and long life and fame upon Kâmadêva, upon him who is endowed with nobility !

(L. 82)— Hail ! When the illustrious Mahâmaṇḍalêśvara Kâmadêvarasa,— possessed of the string of names of, among others, the Mahâmaṇḍalêśvara who attained the pañchamahâśabda; the supreme lord of Banavâsi, the best of towns; he who acquired the excellent favour of the god Madhukêśvara of Jayantî (Banavâsi); the delight of learned people; the ornament of the family of Mayûravarman; the lion of the Kâdambas; the fierce in fight; he who excelled in audacity; the elephant-goad of brave men; a very Râdhêya (Karṇa) in truth; a very cage of thunderbolts to (protect) those who sought refuge with him; a very cow of plenty to petitioners, — was governing the Pânuṁgal five-hundred, punishing the wicked and protecting the good, he came and saw the god Vîra-Sômanâtha of Abbalûru, and beheld the temple, as large as a mountain, which Râmayya had had made according to the precepts of the Śaiva traditions, and listened in detail to the daring that he had displayed, and was pleased, and took him along with himself with the very greatest affection, and went away; and,— when his ministers and himself, together with the Maṇḍaḷika Madukeya, were seated (in assembly) at the capital of Pânumgal with the pleasure of an agreeable interchange of communications, with the very greatest devotion he made the village named Mallavaḷḷi, on the north of Jôgêsara which is near to Muṇḍagôḍ in the Hosanâḍ seventy which is a kampaṇa in the Pânuṁgal five-hundred, together with its established boundaries and including the tribhôga, into a namasya-grant for the god Vîra-Sômanâtha, and laved the feet of Râmayya, and gave it, with libations of water, with the very greatest devotion, for the repairs of whatever might become broken or torn or worn-out belonging to the temple of that same god, and for the aṅgabhôga and the raṅgabhôga and the perpetual oblation of the god, and for the purificatory ceremony of the month Chaitra and the festival of spring and the other occasions, and for the giving of food; and thus he preserved religion. May it be well ! Ôm !

(L. 91)— Those who preserve these acts of religion shall obtain the reward of fashioning in gold the horns and hoofs of a thousand tawny-coloured cows at the sacred Vâraṇâsi or Prayâga or Kurukshêtra or Arghyatîrtha or Śrîparvata or any other holy sites, and giving them to Brâhmaṇs versed in the four Vêdas at such meritorious times as an eclipse of the sun, an eclipse of the moon, a vyatîpâta, a passage of the sun from one sign of the zodiac to the next, etc.; those who destroy these acts of religion shall incur the sin of slaying those same cows and Brâhmaṇs at the Ganges or Vâraṇâsi or Kurukshêtra or any other sacred sites ! And, to shew that there is no doubt about this, he[1] quotes the sayings of Manu of former times :— The earth has been enjoyed by many kings, commencing with Sagara; whosoever at any time possesses the earth, to him belongs, at that time, the reward (of making this grant, if he continues it)! The dust of the earth may be counted, and the drops of rain; but the reward of preserving a religious grant cannot be estimated even by the Creator! He who confiscates land that has been given, whether by himself or by another, shall be born as a worm in ordure for the duration of sixty-thousand years! He who, though capable (of better things), displays neglect in act or thought or speech,— whether he be a person of good condition or a man of low caste, he is outside the pale of all religious rites! The maker (of a grant) shall raise seven times seven times seven families (to heaven); but he who confiscates shall cause the same number of families to sink down (into hell)! There may be absolution for one who slays a cow or a Brâhmaṇ on the Ganges or at any other sacred place, but not for men who confiscate the property of gods or Brâhmaṇs! "This general bridge of religion should at all times be preserved by you;" thus does Râmachandra make his earnest request to all future princes! May it be well and auspicious; and may there be good fortune! Ôm! Ôm!

(L. 99)— Saying "(As) I am thus (notoriously) a very treasury of austerities directed towards Hara, any small effort is not (becoming to me)," Râma, the abode of devotion to Śambhu, constructed (this great) temple of (Śiva) the destroyer of the cities (of the demon Tripura). Without spending or asking for anything, even so little as a hâga,[2] which devotees, standing in front of him in reverence, might offer for the shrine, but going with great humility to the princes (and obtaining their contributions), through the inexhaustible favour of Śiva Râma made this temple, resembling (Kailâsa) the mountain of Hara; how successful he was!

(L. 101)— Kêśavarâja, the leader of the forces, spake this record; and Saraṇa,— the slave of Îśa; he whose refuge is the water-lilies that are the feet of Śiva,— put it into proper shape, and wrote it with facility. Ôm!

(L. 102)— Hail! Mallidêvarâya,— [who belonged to the race of*] Mukkaṇṇa-Kâdamba who was born from the holy Hara (Śiva) and the Earth; the supreme lord of Banavâsi, the best of towns; the worshipper of the water-lilies that are the sacred and holy feet of the holy god Madhukanâtha,— . . . . of Nâgarakhaṇḍe, gave . . . .

F.— Of about A.D. 1200.

This record is on a stone tablet outside the temple of Sômanâtha.— The sculptures on the stone are, at the extreme proper right end, a liṅga, with an officiating priest standing to it, and with a human head on the front part of the abhishêka-slab and the headless body below it, propped up against the lower part of the stand of the liṅga; and, along the rest of the stone, a representation of a fight: next to the liṅga, there are five standing figures, armed with spears and shields, and facing away from the liṅga, and evidently intended to be Śaivas fighting in defence of it; in front of them, there are five or six standing figures, armed with spears only, and attacking them; immediately behind the latter, there are four smaller figures, each blowing a large horn held up in its circular shape over his head;[3] further on, there are two groups,

[1] Namely, the composer of the record.

[2] A haga is a very small coin, equal to one aṇe and two kâsus.

[3] The horns are of the kind called in Kanarese kahaḷe, kâhaḷe, or kâḷe, and in Marâṭhî śiṅg. They are used in the services of temples, as well as in religious and secular processions, at weddings, and so on; and evidently in former days they were used as battle-horns. They are made sometimes all in one piece, sweeping round in a continuous curve covering rather more than half a circle, and sometimes with a joint in the middle so that, in each of four standing figures, apparently spectators; and some seven or eight men are lying stretched out wounded or dead, all along below the feet of the combatants and of some of the spectators.— The writing runs along the top of the stone, above the sculptures, and covers an area about 5′ 2¼″ broad by 0′ 2⅜″ high. It is in a state of very good preservation, except that seven or eight letters are missing at the end of each line; it would seem that the stone has been at some time or another trimmed at that end, and that these letters have been cut away, and perhaps, with them, some sculptures,— possibly some horsemen and, at the extreme end, an image of Jinêndra. The purport of what is lost at the end of line 2 is plain enough, though it need not be supplied with exactly the same aksharas that I shew in square brackets in the text; but it is impossible to say how the missing word or words at the end of line 1 should be filled in. The second line of writing commences below the s of saṁka-gâvuṇḍaṁ in line 1.— The characters are well formed and boldly engraved Kanarese characters of about A.D. 1200. The size of the letters ranges from about ¾″ to 1″.— The language is Kanarese.

The inscription is not dated, and does not refer itself to the reign of any king. It simply marks the place where, according to tradition, Êkântada-Râmayya cut off his head and offered it to Śiva, and then obtained it back again, as recorded in the long inscription, E. above.

TRANSLATION.

The place where, at (the temple of) the holy god Brahmêśvara, Êkântada-Râmayya, when the Jina of the shrine had been wagered, cut off his head, and received it back again! When Saṅkagâvuṇḍa would not let him destroy the shrine, and arrayed his men and horses . . . . (to defend it), Êkântada-Râmayya fought and conquered, and broke the Jina, and set up a liṅga.

G.— Of the time of Siṅghaṇa.— A.D. 1219.

This record is on a stone tablet standing against the wall, or perhaps built into the wall, outside the back of the temple of Basavêśvara.[2]— At the top of the stone there is a compartment addition to being used in the circular shape, the two parts of them can be turned so as to stretch out in reversed curves like an elongated S. To the European ear, they are chiefly associated with nothing but a discordant tumult of sound; and not incorrectly, when they are blown in processions, with simply the object of making as much noise as possible. But this use of them does not do justice to them. In the Kanarese country (and doubtless elsewhere also) some of the men, whose profession is to play these large horns, have well-merited reputations, reaching far and wide; their services are much in request, and are well rewarded; and it is a great treat to get hold of one of these skilled players and hear his performance. He will first stand upright, and "wind" the horn, which for this purpose he holds in its circular shape, sweeping right up from his mouth over his head. He will then sit down, with the horn, in the same shape, slung by a cord round his neck and running from his mouth down under one arm-pit and then up over the other shoulder; and it is surprising what sweet sounds he will produce with it, especially when he places the mouth-piece inside his mouth and sings an air through the horn. And he will usually finish by placing the mouth-piece against the outside of his cheek, or against his throat, and then also, apparently, playing it in the same soft mode; but this, which is also done by some players on the śaṅkha-shell, is of course only a trick,— though it is a very clever one. I do not know what authorities confer the distinction; but the more specially skilled players are entitled to carry turdyis or plumes, which are fixed into sockets in the rims round the mouths of the horns. Similar plumes for drums are mentioned in some of the Kanarese ballads (Ind. Ant. Vol. XV. p. 352, Vol. XVIII. p. 359).— The kâḷe was one of the five instruments used in producing the pañchamahâśabda; see page 216 above, note 3.

[2] That is, according to the return made to me. But in Carn-Dêśa Inscrs. it is described as being inside the temple.

of sculptures, shewing, in the centre a liṅga, with a priest standing to it; on the proper right, two seated figures, with two standing figures waving chauris over them, and with the moon above; and on the proper left, the bull Nandi, with the sun above it. Then come lines 1 to 10 of the writing. Then comes another compartment of sculptures, shewing two seated figures, each inside a small pavilion, and with a standing figure, holding a chaurî, on each side of each pavilion. And then comes the remainder of the record.— The writing covers in lines 1 to 10 an area about 2′ 1¾″ broad by 0′ 7″ high, and in lines 11 to 16 an area of the same breadth by about 0′ 4″ high. It is in a state of good preservation almost throughout. But down the proper right of the tablet there is some projection which more or less hides the first akshara of each line in lines 1 to 8 and 10, and prevents it from appearing fully in the ink-impression. And the record appears to have been left unfinished in the last line.[1]— The characters are Kanarese, of the regular type of the period to which the record refers itself; and they are well formed, though the engraving is rather thin and not very deep. The size of the letters ranges from about 7/16″ to nearly ¾″. The anusvâra is formed in two ways, as in E. above; sometimes on the line of writing, and sometimes above it. The virâma is represented throughout by the sign for the vowel u; and a noticeable instance of this is in tatu-kshaṇadi, line 12. The lingual ḍ is represented throughout by its own distinct sign.— The language is Kanarese, of the same transitional kind as that which we have in E. above. And the record is in prose and verse mixed. In line 3, we have the word baḷiya,— a variant of the baḷiya of other records,—which according to dictionaries means " near to " (lit. " of the vicinity of "), but which in such passages as the present is equivalent to the Sanskṛit madhyavartin or antarvartin, " in the middle of, or included in."[2] In the same line, we have bâḍa,— a tadbhava corruption of the Sanskṛit vâṭa,— which usually means, as here, " a town," but is sometimes used in the sense of kampaṇa, which Kittel's dictionary gives in the sense of " a district," and which I have sometimes translated by " an administrative circle of villages." And in line 15, we meet with the rare form ôgu, for hôgu, in ôdar, = hôdar, " they went."— In respect of orthography, the only points that call for special notice are (1) the use of auvu for au, in pauvurṇṇami, line 1, and in gauvuḍa, lines 5, 8, 10; and (2) a very uncommon use of the initial long î in the middle of words, owing to which we have âvaḷiîn for âvaḷiyin, line 3, śâḷiî and ôḷiî for śâḷiyi and ôḷiyi, line 4, lîleî for lîleyiṁ, line 6, sâîra for sâyira, line 9, and, still more extraordinarily, vaîri for vairi, line 12.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of the Dêvagiri-Yâdava king Siṅghaṇa; and to a time when (a feudatory) Siṅgaṇadêvarasa was governing the Banavâsi twelve-thousand province. The tablet is a vîrgal or monumental slab, in memory of the death of two local heroes, Mâcha and Gôma, in battle, on the occasion of a cattle-raid at Ablûr. The raid was led by Îśvaradêva of Beḷagavatti. From Mr. Rice's Mysore, 2nd ed., Vol. II. p. 448, we learn that Beḷagavatti[3] is the modern Beḷagutti in the Honnâḷi tâluka of the Shimoga district, Mysore,— the ' Bellagooty ' of the Indian Atlas, sheet No. 42, in lat. 14° 11′, long. 75° 35′, twenty-four miles S. S. E. ½ S. from Ablûr,— and that Îśvaradêva belonged to a family of local chiefs mentioned in records there, which give another date for him in A.D. 1216, and give also the names of Mallidêva, A.D. 1196, Siṁhaladêva, A.D. 1232, and Bîradêva, A.D. 1249.

The record is dated on the full-moon day, coupled with Monday, of the Pramâthin saṁvatsara, specified as one of the years of Siṅghaṇa. The regnal year is not cited, though it is usual to cite it in any date expressed in this manner.[4] The name of the saṁvatsara, however,

[2] For this word, and bâḍa, both of which occur also in A. (see page 230 above, notes 7, 12), see a note in Jour. Bo. Br. R. As. Soc. Vol. X. p. 280.

[3] Mr. Rice writes the name 'Belegavatti.' In the present record, however, the vowel of the second syllable is distinctly a,— not e.

[4] It should have been specified as his tenth year. The transcript in Carn.-Dêśa Inscrs. actually inserts 10neya, as if it stood in the original; and it further reads Pramâdhi, by mistake for Pramâthi.

fixes the year as Śaka-Saṁvat 1142 current. And this date, again, has not been recorded correctly; for the given tithi ended, not on a Monday, but on Saturday, 29th June, A.D. 1219, at about 9 hrs. 4 min. after mean sunrise (for Ujjain).

TRANSLATION.

Ôm! Hail! On Monday the full-moon day of the month Âshâḍha of the Pramâthin saṁvatsara of the years of the glorious Siṁhaṇadêva, who was possessed of all eulogistic titles; while the powerful and brave Siṅgaṇadêvarasa was governing the Banavase twelve-thousand,— to describe the excellence of Abbalûru, a town that was included in the Nâgarakhaṇḍa seventy which was a kaṁpaṇa of those parts:—

(Line 3)—Abbalûru is truly charming on the surface of the earth, in a most exceedingly beautiful manner, by reason of a park which is pleasing with flights of parrots and numbers of cuckoos, by the sweet-smelling rice[4] that grows luxuriantly, by a number of temples of the god Śiva, by a shrine, to which (much) adoration is paid, of that same god in the form of him who carries a third eye in his forehead, and by a multitude of brave men who excel in strength and are skilled in arts and sciences.

(L. 5)—To give a description of the merits of Bîragauḍa of the Abbalûru that is thus charming:— Saying that he is devoted to the welfare of others, that he bestows gifts, and that he is a very ocean of virtue, the multitude of good and wise people joyfully praise Bîragauḍa, who is in mien as radiant as the hot-rayed sun,— who is in every way devoted to the water-lilies that are the feet of spiritual preceptors,— who is possessed of the very greatest resoluteness,— and who is a very tree of paradise in giving support to all people who proclaim his praises.

(L. 8)— While that same Bîragauḍa was continuing in happiness:— Beḷagavatti-Îśvaradêva, with various chieftains and with the Nâyakas of the Sâtaḷige district,[5] together with ten thousand men and a thousand horses, came along, and descended on Abbalûru, and seized the herd of penned-up cows; and then, to describe the bravery displayed by Mâcha and Gôma, sons of Baḍagi-Kêtôja, in rescuing the penned-up cows at the command of Bîragauḍa:—

(L. 11)— While the valiant Baḍagi-Mâcha, having rained blows on the array of horses that he drove away, was still attacking them, and while Gôma, having stared fiercely at them, was shooting arrows, the whole of the hostile force immediately fell down in all directions. What words can I use?; if you consider, it surpassed all comparison!: meeting them in the most terrifying manner, Mâcha, the son of Kêtôja, plunged recklessly into the hostile force, and pierced many of them. In such a way that the bravery of these two brothers was a wonder to the earth, Mâcha and Gôma fought in battle with many people, and killed numbers of them, and went with great fame to heaven.

[1] Read Mâchanum.—The metre is faulty here, even with this correction. It might be set right by reading Mâchanuṁ Gômaṇanuṁ. And, from certain marks on the akshara gô, it would seem that the writer recognised his omission of the â in the first syllable of Machanuṁ,— began to correct it, by writing Mâcha after that word,— and then turned the cha into gô, and so produced the reading that actually stands.

[2] Metre, Ślôka (Anushṭubh).

[3] After this, there should come another line, containing the completion of this well-known verse, viz., pi sur-âṅganâ kshaṇa-vidhvaṁsini kâyê kâ chiṁtâ maraṇê raṇê. These words may perhaps be somewhere on the side or back of the stone, and may have been overlooked by my copyist. But there is no reason why they should not have been engraved on the front of the stone, immediately below line 15; the stone was smoothed in order to form the subscript k of kkôdar at the beginning of that line, and was not smoothed any further; and it seems, therefore, that the completion of the verse was carelessly omitted, either by the engraver or in the written copy from which he worked.

No. 26.—A NOTE ON THE ALPHABET OF THE DONEPUNDI GRANT.

BY F. KIELHORN, PH.D., LL.D., C.I.E.; GÖTTINGEN.

Dr. Hultzsch having kindly consented to publish the accompanying photolithograph, which has been prepared under Dr. Fleet's supervision, of the Donepûṇḍi grant of Śaka-Saṁvat 1259, edited by me above, Vol. IV. p. 356 ff., I take the opportunity of adding a few remarks on the writing of that most beautifully engraved inscription. I have already stated that the characters are Telugu. In general, they are the same as those of the Vânapalli plates of Anna-Vêma, published with a photolithograph above, Vol. III. p. 59 ff., which are only about forty years later; but there are one or two interesting differences between the characters of the two inscriptions.

Of initial vowels the Vânapalli plates contain a, â, i, and ṛi; in the present grant i and ṛi do not occur, but, on the other hand, we here have also î, in the word î in lines 42 and 51; u, in Umâ, l. 1; and ê, in êvaṁ, l. 15, êtad, l. 38, etc.

Of the ordinary Sanskṛit consonants, gh, ṅ, jh and ḍh do not occur in the Donepûṇḍi grant; and the signs for chh and ñ only occur in conjuncts, as subscript letters, in anvichchhan, l. 31, yâvachchhrîmân, l. 39, and vijñâna, l. 34. The signs which may be specially drawn attention to are those for k, ph, and bh.

In the sign for k the horizontal line between the top-stroke (talakaṭṭu) and the circle is joined with the latter by a straight line, which forms a sharp angle with the horizontal line, as may be seen from kari, l. 1, kruta, l. 2, etc. This (cursive) sign for k, which does not occur in the Vânapalli plates and is not found in any of the published palæographic Tables, is also used in the Dibbida plates of Śaka-Saṁvat 1191, published with a photolithograph above, p. 106 ff., and in the three inscriptions of Kâṭaya-Vêma[2] of Śaka-Saṁvat 1313-38, published above, Vol. IV. p. 328 ff. It clearly is the immediate precursor of the k of the modern Telugu alphabet.

The sign for ph is distinguished from the sign for p by a separate semicircular line, placed below the sign for p; compare the pha of phala, l. 4, with the pa of laṁpaṭa, l. 6. The same sign for ph is used in the Vânapalli plates, e.g. in phalaka, l. 7. In a Chêbrôlu inscription of Jâya of Śaka-Saṁvat 1157, we still find the earlier sign in which the distinguishing semicircular line intersects the proper left vertical line of the sign for p.[3]

The sign for bh, in the aksharas bha, bhu, bhû, bhya and bhyâ, is distinguished from the sign for b by the top-stroke of bh; compare the bha of bhava-, l. 3, with the ba of babhû-, l. 9. In aksharas where there is no room for the top-stroke, bh sometimes is distinguished from b by

[1] This verse is usually given more or less incorrectly,—for instance, P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. No. 212 has niddaṁsana kâyôṁ; and No. 225 has viddaṁsani; while No. 182 has surâyanâṁ kshaṇa-yuddhasani. But the first word is always jitêna (e.g., P. S. O.-C. Inscrs. Nos. 212, 225, in both of which it is very clear, as also in the present record). The interpretation of it seemed difficult to Prof. Kielhorn also, who suggested some time ago that the original reading might be jîvêna (Ind. Ant. Vol. XVII. p. 202, note 4). But he now considers that jitêna is correct, and is to be translated "by him who has conquered," on the analogy of vidita, "one who has learnt," in the first verse of the Kirâtârjunîya, where the commentary cites pîtâ gâvaḥ, bhuktâ brâhmaṇâḥ, and vibhaktâ bhrâtaraḥ, all in an active sense.—Since writing the preceding remarks, I have heard from Prof. Kielhorn that he finds that the verse is from the Parâśarasmṛiti, Âchârakâṇḍa, Adhyâya III. verse 37 (Bombay edition, Vol. I. Part II. p. 273), which gives it in the form—Jitêna labhyatê Lakshmîr mṛitên=âpi surâṅganâḥ kshayadhvaṁsini kâyê=smin kâ chintâ maraṇê raṇê, and that Mâdhavâchârya explains jita as a past passive participle denoting the agent ("one who has conquered"), exactly as suggested by Prof. Kielhorn.

a small opening in the lower part of the sign for bh, as in vibhâvyatê, l. 14, and nabhô, l. 11; but just as often there is no difference at all between bh and b, as may be seen e.g. from a comparison of vibôr= (for vibhôr=), l. 19, with bolaṁ, l. 48, or from vibiṁnn- (for vibhinn-), l. 14, abîshṭ- (for abhîshṭ-), l. 36, etc. It is interesting to observe that in all such cases (where in the Donepûṇḍi grant bh practically does not differ from b), in the Vânapalli plates, the sign for bh is generally distinguished from the sign for b by just such a separate semicircular line as above we have found to distinguish ph from p; compare in the Vânapalli plates vibhâti,[1] l. 3, Śaṁbhôr=, l. 4, nâbhi, l. 7, etc. Moreover it may be noted that in the inscription B. of Kâṭaya-Vêma, above, Vol. IV. p. 329, in the bh of Bhîmêśvara in line 8, the distinguishing semicircular line has been changed into a downward stroke, so that the sign for bh looks exactly like the bh of the modern Telugu alphabet.

In addition to the signs of the ordinary Sanskṛit consonants, the Donepûṇḍi grant also contains the sign for the Dravidian ḷ, e.g. in sunirmaḷa, l. 11, and the sign for ṟ, e.g. in êṟu, l. 44. In the sign for the ṟ of taṟuvâta in line 49 the engraver erroneously has omitted the horizontal line in the interior of the letter.

Regarding the signs of subscript consonants it may be noted that in the conjuncts nn and ṇṇ the same sign is used for both (the second) n and ṇ,[2] as in nnamaḥ, l. 1, and nishaṇṇa(ṇṇa), l. 13. Attention may also perhaps be drawn to the form of the subscript l, e.g. in Eṁḍapalli, l. 45, and puṭlu, l. 53.— Of final consonants which are not joined with a following letter, only t occurs, in araṁjayat, l. 17, and dhâ(dâ)nât, l. 23.

As regards medial vowels, I have already indicated that there is hardly any difference between the signs for i and î; compare e.g. gîta-kîrtiḥ, l. 5, and dîdhitiṁ, l. 27. In engraving the akshara mî of ktum=îshṭê in line 21 the engraver has made a mistake, which, to judge from the impression, was subsequently corrected by him. Another mistake was made by him in engraving the akshara nô at the end of line 15, as may be seen by a comparison of the proper sign for nô in °śânur=nnô, l. 24, or the no of Jaganobbagaṁḍḍa in line 27 of the Vânapalli plates.

That the plates, near the proper right margin of the first inscribed side of each plate, contain the numeral figures from 1 to 5, has been already stated.

[1] The akshara bhâ of this very word is reproduced in Prof. Bühler's Indische Palæographie, Table VIII. col. ix. No. 33, but without the characteristic semicircular line at the bottom, which is quite clear and distinct in the published photolithograph of the Vânapalli plates. The same column contains other similar errors which need not be specified here.

[2] The same practice is followed in some very much earlier inscriptions; compare e.g. in the Sâtârâ plates of the Eastern Chalukya Yuvarâja Vishṇuvardhana I. (Ind. Ant. Vol. XIX. p. 309, and Plate) sampannaḥ, l. 4, and paurṇṇamâsyâṁ, l. 13.— It may be noted that both in the Donepûṇḍi grant and in the Vânapalli plates the conjunct rṇṇ is always written by the sign for rnn.

APPENDIX

A LIST OF THE INSCRIPTIONS OF NORTHERN INDIA
FROM ABOUT A.D. 400.

BY PROFESSOR F. KIELHORN, C.I.E.; GÖTTINGEN.

IN compliance with the request of several scholars who are interested in Indian epigraphy, I publish herewith part of a list of Indian inscriptions, which primarily I had prepared for my own use only. What I offer at present, may be roughly described as a list of the inscriptions of Northern India, from about the end of the fourth century A.D. Similar lists of the more numerous inscriptions of Southern India, and of the inscriptions before A.D. 400, are under revision and may be published hereafter.

Within the limits indicated, this list gives, or is intended to give, all inscriptions of any importance that have been published, or noticed with details of their contents, in the periodicals and official volumes accessible to me; and it includes some unpublished inscriptions of which rubbings or impressions have been kindly presented to me from time to time by Drs. Burgess, Fleet, Führer, Hœrnle and Hultzsch, and by the late Sir A. Cunningham. I shall be grateful to every one who will draw my attention to any inscription which may have been omitted. As it stands at present, the list deals with rather more than 700 inscriptions:[1] about 250 copper-plate inscriptions, and the rest, with one exception,[2] inscriptions on stones and rocks.

In arranging the list, I have been guided partly by the eras[3] according to which the inscriptions are dated, and partly by the localities where the originals were discovered. Thus Nos. 1-568 give the inscriptions dated (or, in some cases, supposed to be dated) according to the Mâlava-Vikrama era (1-328, marked V.), the Śaka era (346-386, marked Ś.), the Kalachuri-Chêdi era (387-425, marked K.), the Gupta-Valabhî era (436-507, marked G. or Valabhî-s.), the Harsha era (528-547, marked H.), and the Newâr era (559-568, marked N.); together, generally, with those undated inscriptions the time of which may be approximately determined by reference to the inscriptions dated according to one of the eras mentioned (329-345, 426-435 508-527, and 548-558). Nos. 569-587 give the small number of inscriptions which are (or have been taken to be) dated according to the Saptarshi era (569-574), the era of Buddha's Nirvâṇa (575), the Lakshmaṇasêna era (576-578), and the Siṁha era (579-584), with references to three inscriptions which, dated according to other eras, also quote the corresponding years of the Hijra era, the "Bengâli San," and the Ilâhi era of the emperor Akbar (585-587). And Nos. 588-688 give the remaining inscriptions, which either contain no date at all or are for the

[1] This number includes some inscriptions which are mentioned in footnotes only. Some inscriptions which came to my notice when part of this list was already in type are given at the end, under the head of Addenda.

[2] This is the iron pillar inscription No. 508.

[3] The list includes all Indian inscriptions known to me which are dated according to the Saptarshi era, the era of Buddha's Nirvâṇa, and the Mâlava-Vikrama, Kalachuri-Chêdi, Gupta-Valabhî, Harsha, Newâr, Lakshmaṇasêna, Siṁha, and Gâṅgêya eras. But it contains only 21 inscriptions dated exclusively according to the Śaka era, and none which are dated according to the era of the Kaliyuga, and the Kollam and Châlukya-Vikrama eras. Years of the twelve-years cycle of Jupiter are quoted in the Gupta dates of Nos. 451, 453, 456 and 459, and in No. 522; years of the sixty-years cycle of Jupiter in only eleven (Vikrama) dates; and aṅka (regual) years only in Nos. 367, 369, 370, and 671.

most part[1] dated in regnal years, broadly arranged according to the tracts of country where they were found, from Râjputâna and the Pañjâb on the west to Orissa and Gañjâm on the east coast of India. I am aware that a number of the inscriptions towards the end of the list, as well as others which are dated according to the Śaka era, properly belong to Southern India, but have given them here on account of the connection of some of them with northern inscriptions. To draw an absolutely strict line between the north and the south appeared to me as unnecessary as it would be impossible.

On the information given under each number little need be said here. As far as I was able to do so, I have tried to state, not merely where an inscription has been discovered, but also where it is now. I have also indicated whether Plates of an inscription are available.[2] When an inscription has been edited several times, I generally have thought it sufficient to state where it has been published last. In the case of dated inscriptions, I have given throughout the original dates, and have added their European equivalents when they could be ascertained with confidence; moreover, I have shewn whether the numbers which may occur in a date are denoted by numerical symbols or by numeral (decimal) figures. As regards other details, I have mostly confined myself to recording the genealogy or line of succession (where it is given in the original) of the king or chief to whom an inscription belongs, and the names of the princes who are mentioned in connection with him or his predecessors; but, in the case of copper-plates, I have also given the names of the places from which the grants were issued, and, in the case of praśastis, the names of their authors.

I venture to hope that this list will be of some service both to these of my fellow students who are engaged in the publication of Indian inscriptions, and to any one who would wish to ascertain whether an inscription on stone or a copper-plate inscription, which he may meet with, is new or has already attracted the attention of scholars. To render the list more useful, the principal names that occur in it are given in an Index.

A.—Inscriptions dated according to the Mâlava-Vikrama Era.

1.—V. 428.—Gupta Inscr. p. 253, and Plate. Bijayagaḍh pillar inscription of the Varika Vishṇuvardhana, the son of Yaśôvardhana, grandson of Yaśôrâta, and great-grandson of Vyâghrarâta:—

[2] This occurs in verse, and is not a formal title.

[3] In the published edition Yaśôdharman and Vishṇuvardhana are taken to be the names of two princes, see Ind. Ant. Vol. XIX. p. 227.

[4] See below, No. 329.

[5] For another, fragmentary inscription which is on the same stone, see Ind. Ant. Vol. V. p. 182, and Plate.

[6] The probability is, that in the original inscription the era of the Mâlava kings is referred to.

[7] The British Museum possesses a fragmentary and partly effaced inscription which apparently was engraved by the same Śivanâga.

11.— V. 847.— Zeitschr. D. Morg. Ges. Vol. XXXVIII. p. 547; Ind. Ant. Vol. XIV. p. 45. Shêrgaḍh (Kôṭâ) Buddhist inscription of the Sâmanta Dêvadatta; (composed by Jajjaka):—

[5] See Ind. Ant. Vol. XIII. p. 79, note 38: "Enough of this letter remains . . . to show indubitably that it was ma. It is, of course, a matter of conjecture whether the preceding akshara was sô or bhau."

[6] With the epoch which best suits the later Kalachuri dates, the original date would be expected to fall in A.D. 704-5, not in A.D. 705-6.

[7] This may be the intended date, but there are difficulties. Judging by the later Kalachuri dates, the original date would be expected to fall in A.D. 735, not in A.D. 736. Besides, although in A.D. 736 the Karkaṭa-saṁkrânti did take place during the 10th tithi of the bright half of Âshâḍha, this tithi fell on Friday, the 22nd June, and the tithi which ended on Sunday, the 24th June, was the 12th of the bright half. [According to my calculations for all the years from Kaliyuga-saṁvat 3601 to 3925 expired, the date would work out quite correctly only for A.D. 576 and A.D. 708.]

1 This, so far as I know, is the earliest Valabhî inscription which, in the introductory passage, has the reading saṁpanna, instead of the reading sapatna of the earlier inscriptions ; compare Dr. Hultzsch's remarks in Ep. Ind. Vol. III. p. 319.
3 See below, No. 526.
4 This probably is the prince who afterwards ruled as Dhruvasêna III.

484.— G. 330.— Ind. Ant. Vol. XV. p. 339. Kaira plates of the Mahârâjâdhirâja Dharasêna IV. of Valabhî, issued from Bharukachchha :—

(L. 57).— saṁ 300 30 dvi-Mârggaśira-śu 2.

The date apparently falls in A.D. 648[1] (in Kaliyuga-saṁvat 3749 expired) when, by the rules of mean intercalation, there was an intercalated month which might be called either Pausha or Mârgaśira[2] ; (see Sewell and Dîkshit's Ind. Calendar, p. xxiii, and Gupta Inscr. Introduction, p. 93 ff.).

Genealogy as in No. 481.— The inscription mentions, as dûtaka, the king's daughter Bhûvâ (see No. 483).

485.—G. 334.— Ep. Ind. Vol. I. p. 86. Kâpaḍvaṇaj plates of Dhruvasêna III. of Valabhî, issued from Sirisimmiṇikâ :—

(L. 50).— saṁ 300 30 4 Mâgha-śu 9.

Genealogy as far as Dharasêna [IV.] as in No. 481 ; he was succeeded by Dhruvasêna [III.], the son of Ḍêrabhaṭa who was the son of Śîlâditya [I.], the [elder] brother of the grandfather [Kharagraha I.] of Dharasêna [IV.].

(L. 66).— saṁ || 365 || (?) Vaiśâkha-śu || 1 || (?).

490.— G. 372.— Ind. Ant. Vol. V. p. 209, and Plate. Bhâvnagar plates of the Mahârâjâdhirâja Śîlâditya IV. of Valabhî, issued from the camp at the tank of Bâlâditya :—

(L. 58).— saṁ 300 70 2 Śrâvaṇa-ba 9.

[1] The year 330 of the date would thus correspond to the [Kârttikâdi] Vikrama year 330 + 375 = 705 expired ; see Ep. Ind. Vol. III. p. 303.

[2] The case, however, is not free from difficulties. According to the Sûrya- and Ârya-siddhântas, and by the modern rule of naming intercalated months, the intercalated month would be Pausha ; and it would be Pausha also by the Brahma-siddhânta and the earlier (Brahmagupta's) rule. And Mârgaśira it can be called only on the supposition that it was calculated by the Sûrya- or Ârya-siddhânta, and named in accordance with Brahmagupta's rule. Compare below, No. 530 of H. (?) 34.

[4] In the inscriptions of his successor described as Paramabhaṭṭâraka Mahârâjâdhirâja Paramêśvara.

[5] I follow Dr. Fleet in calling this Śîlâditya 'Śîlâditya II.' By other scholars he is not numbered, with the result that the kings of the same name, who are here numbered from III. to VII., in other accounts bear the numbers from II. to VI.

Genealogy as far as Śîlâditya [III] as in No. 487; his son, the Paramabhaṭṭâraka Mahârâjâdhirâja Paramêśvara Śîlâditya [IV.].— The inscription mentions, as dûtaka, the king's son (râja-putra) Kharagraha.

The Mahârâja Naravardhana; his son, from Vajriṇîdêvî, the Mahârâja Râjyavardhana [I.]; his son, from Apsarôdêvî, the Mahârâja Âdityavardhana; his son, from Mahâsênaguptadêvî, the Mahârâjâdhirâja Prabhâkaravardhana; his son, from Yaśômatîdêvî, the Mahârâjâdhirâja Râjyavardhana [II.] (subdued Dêvagupta and other kings); his younger brother, the Mahârâjâdhirâja Harsha.— The inscription mentions, as officials, the Mahâsâmanta Skandagupta and the Mahâsâmanta Mahârâja Bhâna (?).

529.—H. 25.—Ep. Ind. Vol. I. p. 72. Madhuban (now Lucknow Museum) plate of the Mahârâjâdhirâja Harsha, issued from Kapitthikâ[2] :—

(L. 18).— samvat 20 5 Mârggaśîrsha-vadi 6.

Genealogy as in No. 528.—The inscription mentions, as officials, the Mahâsâmanta Skandagupta and the Sâmanta Mahârâja Îśvaragupta.

(L. 16).— saṁvat 30 4 prathama-Pausha-śukla-dvitîyâyâm.

Judging by the date of No. 542 of H. 155, the month of Pausha of Harsha-saṁvat 34 would be expected to fall in A.D. 639-40 (in Kaliyugâ-saṁvat 3740 expired), but in that year no month was intercalary. In (Kaliyuga-saṁvat 3741 expired=) A.D. 640-41, by the rules of mean intercalation, there was an intercalated month which might be called Pausha on the supposition[5] that it was calculated by the Brahma-siddhânta, and named according to the modern (not Brahmagupta's) rule for naming intercalated months, but which ordinarily would be called Mârgaśira. (See Sewell and Dîkshit's Ind. Calendar, p. xxiii).

531.—H. (?) 34.— Ind. Ant. Vol. IX. p. 169, and Plate. Bungmatî (near Kâṭmâṇḍu) fragmentary inscription of the Mahâsâmanta Aṁśuvarman, issued from Kailâsakûṭabhavana :—

532.—H. (?) 39.— Ind. Ant. Vol. IX. p. 170, and Plate. Dêvapâṭana (near Kâṭmâṇḍu) inscription of Aṁśuvarman, issued from Kailâsakûṭabhavana :—

(L. 22).— saṁvat 30 9 Vaiśâkha-śukla-divâ daśamyâm.

The inscription mentions, as dûtaka, the Yuvarâja Udayadêva.[6] It also mentions Aṁśuvarman's sister Bhôgadêvî, who was the wife of the king's son (râja-putra) Śûrasêna, and the mother of Bhôgavarman and Bhâgyadêvî.

533.—H. (?) 45 (?).—Ind. Ant. Vol. IX. p. 171, and Plate. Satdhârâ (near Kâṭmâṇḍu) inscription of Aṁśuvarman :—

(L. 1).— saṁvat 40 5 (?[7]) Jyêshṭha-śukla . . . .

[1] This '2' is denoted by a numeral figure, but the preceding '20' and the following '1' by numerical symbols.

[2] The published text has Pitthikâ.— In line 10 reference is made to a forged grant (kûṭa-śâsana).

[3] Prof. S. Lévi, in the Jour. Asiatique, 1894, Juillet-Août, p. 62, has referred this date (and those of the following dates, in which a sign of interrogation has been put here after H.) to a local era the epoch of which would fall in A.D. 595. But since for Aṁśuvarman we have the date No. 533, of the year 44 or 45, even the adoption of such a new era would not meet one of Prof. Lévi's main objections to the assignment of this date (of the year 34) to the Harsha era—the objection, namely, that according to Hiuen Tsiang's account Aṁśuvarman could not have lived after A.D. 637.

[4] See above, No. 480 of G. 316 (or 318 ?).

[5] For a short inscription of Aśôkavalla, at Gôpêśvar in Garhwâl, see Ind. Ant. Vol. X. p. 345.

[6] The published text has Bhâdra-di 8 râ 29. My remarks on the date in Ind. Ant. Vol. XXII. p. 107, which were based on this incorrect reading, must be withdrawn now.

For Ś. 1321 expired and the Kârttikâdi Vikrama year 1455 expired the date regularly corresponds to Thursday, 10th July A.D. 1399 (see Ind. Ant. Vol. XVIII. p. 31); but this day would fall in the Bengâli San 806 and in the Hijra[1] year 801 (not 807); and in the Lakshmaṇasêna year 279 expired (not in 292 or 293; see ibid. Vol. XIX. p. 1 ff).

With this reading, the date is irregular; but with vadi instead of śudi, it would, for Siṁha-s. 93, correspond to Sunday, 25th March A.D. 1207.— According to Dr. Hultzsch, the inscription probably is one of Bhîmadêva I., and the saṁvat 93 of the date, therefore, might be intended for Vikrama-saṁvat 1093;[3] but for that year also the date would be irregular. See Ep. Ind. Vol. I. p. 317, and Ind. Ant. Vol. XIX. p. 253.

[2] On this day the tithi of the date commenced 1 h. 51 m. after mean sunrise.

[3] Compare the plates of Bhîmadêva I., above, No. 61 of V. 1086, in which the names of the writer and his father, as well as that of the dûtaka, are the same as in this inscription.

[4] I.e. the Hijra year.

[5] This part of the list (Nos. 588-688) includes 42 inscriptions, dated (apparently) in regnal years, and one (No. 671) dated in an aṅka year. It also contains three inscriptions (Nos. 682-684), the years of which are distinctly referred to the reign of the Gâṅgêya-vaṁśa, and six others (Nos. 676-681), the years of which probably belong to the same era, the exact epoch of which has not been ascertained yet. The same era may possibly have been followed in the date of No. 655, the reading of which is doubtful. Regarding the years of the dates of Nos. 606 and 653, the reading of which also is doubtful, I cannot offer any suggestion.
